U. S. AGAIN OUSTS LADEJINSKY; HE HAS 'CONFLICT OF INTEREST'

Purchase of Stock in Formosa Firm Receiving U. S. Aid Funds Causes ICA to Request His Resignation.

The New York Times News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—A capitalistic venture has forced the resignation of Wolf Ladejinsky, Government official who was once ousted from service for alleged Communist leanings.

The International Co-operation Administration at a news conference today announced that it had requested and received the resignation of Ladejinsky from his post as a land reform expert in the agency's mission in Viet Nam. The resignation was asked after the ICA confirmed reports that Ladejinsky, while on an official visit to Formosa, had purchased stock in a glass factory there.

"Mr. Ladejinsky's action," William J. Caldwell, spokesman for ICA, said today, "involved a 'conflict of interest' under the agency's rules."

In December 1954, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson ordered the dismissal of Ladejinsky from his department's payroll because he found him a "security risk." The finding was based upon charges that the Russian-born land specialist had held membership in "two Communist-front organizations."

Allegation Withdrawn.

Ladejinsky, later cleared, was hired by the old Foreign Operations Administration, predecessor of the ICA, in January 1955. Then, last July, Benson reversed his stand and withdrew the security risk allegation.

Today officials of the ICA paid tribute to Ladejinsky's "imaginative and energetic work and — the important contribution" he had made to improvement of agricultural production and land reform in Formosa, Japan and Viet Nam.

Caldwell, the ICA spokesman, told newsmen that the ICA "deeply regrets" the action it was required to take.

Caldwell said the sequence of events which led up to the land expert's forced resignation began last May.

"During an official visit to Taiwan (Formosa)," Caldwell said, "Wolf Ladejinsky issued a dollar check over his own signature in the amount of $3000 for the purchase of stock in a Formosa manufacturing company which was receiving financial assistance from the United States Government.

Transaction Called Illegal.

"This check was given to a Chinese friend of Ladejinsky's who cashed it in the black market. At the official rate of exchange, this check, at that time, would have purchased 60 shares of stock. As a result of the higher rate of exchange, 90 shares of stock were obtained on behalf of Mr. Ladejinsky, recorded in the name of a third person."

The investment was in the stock of a Formosan glass works company which had received the equivalent of $600,000 in United States government funds in the form of economic aid, Caldwell said. He added that the land expert's actions were "contrary to conduct expected of any federal employe," and in direct violation of ICA regulations — "although not illegal under United States laws."

The agency learned of the transaction in July, confronted Ladejinsky with the charges and had numerous discussions with him from that time until late last year when he agreed to resign. Caldwell said that Ladejinsky "freely admitted" the charges made against him.

(The United Press said that Caldwell emphasized that Ladejinsky was not in a position because of his particular job, to influence allocation of Unit-

Bar on Investing Idle State Cash Likely to Be Big Campaign Issue; Banks Collecting Interest Now

Candidates From Both Parties Map Attacks on System in Effect Since Depression.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

The legal prohibition against investment of Missouri's idle state funds, which is costing the state an estimated $500,000 a year in potential interest payments, is likely to become a major issue in this year's state political campaigns.

A number of candidates for state and legislative offices, both Democrats and Republicans, have indicated they intend to take a strong stand against the present system, which has provided a tidy income for Missouri banks serving as depositories for these interest-free state funds.

As of last Tuesday, the state had $106,115,978 on deposit in Missouri banks. None of the money was earning any interest for the state.

17 Banks Hold 75 Pct.

These deposits were scattered among 262 banks in St. Louis and 90 of the state's 114 counties. However 17 banks, including 11 in the St. Louis area, held $78,947,842 in state deposits, or more than 75 per cent of the total.

More than half of the state's deposits—$58,717,842—was concentrated in three banks. They are the Central Missouri Trust Co. of Jefferson City, the Commerce Trust Co. of Kansas City and the Bank of St. Louis here.

Some candidates have indicated they will point out in the campaign that officers and employes of many banks are active in politics at the state or local level.

Whealen Critical.

Joseph M. Whealen, St. Louis business executive and a potential candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, has been sharply critical of the present system in numerous speeches to G.O.P. groups recently.

There are reports that Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. of Jefferson City and State Commissioner of Agriculture L. C. Carpenter of Columbia, opposing candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, also advocate a change in the system in their campaigns.

Former State Treasurer M. E. Morris, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for his former office, after a required intervening term, has said that he favors legal changes necessary to permit the state to invest its idle funds.

The bulk of the state funds on deposit are invested by the banks in short-term United States Treasury notes, which are now paying about 2.25 per cent interest on an annual basis. Critics of the present system argue that the state, rather than private banking interests, should be receiving the earnings from these public funds.

No Interest for State.

However, no interest can be paid legally to the state by these banks, nor can the state invest its own funds, under present terms of the Missouri Constitution, state statutes and federal banking laws.

The state constitution requires that all state funds be deposited in banks and be payable "on demand." This means that all state monies must be kept in demand deposits, or in what is commonly known as checking accounts.

The Federal Reserve Act and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation laws specifically prohibit the payment of interest on demand deposits.

Missouri statutes provide that no bank may pay interest on demand deposits in excess of the interest permitted by the federal acts. The effect is that state law also prohibits payment of interest on these funds.

The federal prohibition against such interest payments was first enacted as part of the depression-born Federal Reserve Act of 1933, which was passed during the critical "100 days" following the first inauguration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was designed to stabilize banking operations in the face of economic distress.

Before this time, the state received interest on its idle funds. Deposits were awarded to banks

BRENTWOOD BLVD. LEFT TURNS ON GREEN DROPPED

Brentwood city officials have abandoned their effort to introduce the left-turn-on-green-light system of traffic control at three intersections on Brentwood boulevard because it proved confusing to motorists here who are accustomed to special left turn signals.

Alderman Herbert S. Gardner, member of a special aldermanic committee which supervised installation of electric traffic signals at the intersections of Brentwood with White avenue, Pine avenue and Eulalie avenue-Litzsinger road, said yesterday the signals will be changed as soon as possible to provide a green arrow for left turns.

The signals went into operation 10 days ago, permitting left turns on green lights as a simpler method of operation. This system is used extensively in many sections of the country. The decision to make the traffic lights correspond to others in the St. Louis area resulted from numerous complaints by Brentwood police that the signals were confusing automobile drivers.

EERIE SUBMARINE HAS SOUTH SEA ISLANDS IN DITHER

APIA, Fiji Islands, Feb. 4 (UP)—Reports of a mysterious submarine spread through the South Sea islands today. Two small ships recently disappeared in the area.

Under a headline "Pacific mystery," the Mirror of Sydney, Australia, said today "the report of submarines alarms island traders."

"Whose turn is next?" the article asked.

The Mirror accused official sources of maintaining secrecy on the disappearance of the schooners Joyita and the Arakarimoa. The hulk of the former was found later but there was no trace of the 25 persons aboard. There were 27 aboard the Arakarimoa.

The submarine, which so far has been claimed by no government, was sighted twice in 24 hours, the Sun at Sydney said. The paper said the mystery craft sailed along the island Trader Komawai near Suva for three hours and then vanished.

DOES NEW CHINA SIGNIFY SECOND EISENHOWER BID?

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP)—The first "Eisenhower china"—cause of some early guesses about the President's second-term plans—has been added to the White House china collection.

Mrs. Eisenhower's social secretary, Mrs. Mary Jane McCaffree, said the new pieces picked out by Mrs. Eisenhower are service plates. They are white with a two-inch gold border and bear the presidential seal in gold in the center.

Presidents' families customarily replenish White House china if normally high breakage requires it during their stay in the executive mansion.

The collection became involved in second term prospects two years ago when Mrs. Eisenhower was asked if she planned to add any "Eisenhower china" to the collection. She laughed and replied, "That depends on how much gets broken in the next two years."

LONG-SECRET CAA CUT-BACK PLANS ARE MADE PUBLIC OVER PROTESTS

Senate Committee Bares Report Despite Commerce Department — It Would Reduce Personnel.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Senate Aviation subcommittee today made public over the strong objections of the Department of Commerce a long-secret report recommending a drastic overhaul in the Civil Aeronautics Administration and in the operation of the nation's airways.

The report was made by a management engineering firm at the behest of Eisenhower Administration officials high in the Commerce Department, and the Government paid $113,000 for it.

But Louis Rothschild, Commerce Under Secretary, told the Senate subcommittee that its release would work a "needless injury to morale." Among other things the report called for taking 3350 off the CAA payroll.

Commerce officials have said the recommendations might bring "worthwhile savings" but might never be put into effect.

Senator A. S. Mike Monroney (Dem.), Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate subcommittee, held however that since the study was made it should be brought "into the light of day." He called some of the recommendations impractical and dangerous, adding that they should not be withheld from the public and then "sprung suddenly when no one has a chance to protest about them."

Five Recommendations.

The report, by Cresap, McCormick and Paget, a Chicago firm of management engineers, made five recommendations, including one that the "fiscal and compliance responsibilities" of the CAA in the Federal aid to airports program be transferred to the Bureau of Public Roads. Asserting that the present organizational structure of the CAA is "inimical to the best interests" of air-traffic control and aviation safety, the report recommended further:

1. A "three-level" system of flight control which would consolidate the CAA's two categories of triffic control—the 26 air traffic control centers and the 169 airport towers—into 50 "major terminal areas," and would set up eight new "express centers" to handle long-distance traffic.

2. Elimination of the CAA's interstate airways communications stations, as having "outlived their usefulness." Their weather activities would be transferred to the Weather Bureau and their other functions reassigned within the CAA. This would mean the closing of 304 of the CAA's 548 separate operational facilities in the United States, the report said, "without in anyway reducing the effectiveness of the CAA's basic activities of air traffic control and aviation safety."

3. Basic reorganization of the CAA. The present regional administrative setup would be altered to channel responsibility from the CAA through a deputy to two "line executives"—the heads of federal airways and aviation safety—who would have direct responsibility for all activities.

4. Restriction of CAA's aviation safety activities to the establishment of basic standards of aircraft performance, maintenance and repair, and operations. The CAA would police various segments of the aviation industry "in accordance only with their respective lack of ability to carry the entire responsibility for safety themselves."

The report estimated that the changes would make possible a reduction of 3350 in CAA personnel and annual reduction of $18,000,000 in salary expense.

Of this total, it said, about 1100 persons and $5,000,000 in salary expenses would be needed in other areas of the Commerce Department, with a net savings to the department of about $13,000,000 dollars a year salary expenses.

The committee released with the report a letter from Rothschild asking that the contents not be released.

Rothschild said also that "no portions of the survey have been formally and finally abandoned," and no parts have been adopted except for certain measures which he pointed out.

The latter included the consolidation of Federal airways planning staffs, organizational adjustments to improve management and administration, the establishment of the position of deputy administrator and a pilot project to evaluate the possibility of remote control of aeronautical communication stations.

JUSTICE DEPT. ORDERS AGENCY TO SEE IF LAW WAS VIOLATED

Party Leaders to Ask Senate to Investigate Case's Report That Man Interested in Gas Bill Made Offer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation has interviewed Senator Francis Case (Rep.), South Dakota, "to determine whether there has been a violation of Federal laws" in a reported offer of money to Case by a man interested in passage of the natural gas bill, the Justice Department announced today.

Deputy Attorney General William P. Rogers made the announcement. He said he had asked the FBI to interview Case. He added he also has requested the FBI "to conduct such other investigations which may be necessary to enable the Department of Justice" to determine whether any Federal laws have been broken.

A Justice Department spokesman added that the department acted independently without any request from outside sources.

After the Justice Department announcement, Case indicated he had given the name of the person or persons involved to two FBI agents he said had called on him.

"They are a responsible agency, and I said I'd give them to any resposible agency," Case told reporters. He had refused to name them in the Senate.

Rogers is acting as Attorney General while Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., is in Puerto Rico.

SENATE INQUIRY TO BE REQUESTED

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb 4—The Senate will be asked Monday to conduct a full-scale investigation of allegations that a lawyer interested in passage of the natural gas bill contributed $2500 to a Senator's campaign fund in an apparent attempt to influence his vote in favor of the measure.

Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas, Senate majority leader who has been trying to put out the fires started yesterday by Senator Francis P. Case, South Dakota Republican, said that he and Senator William F. Knowland of California, minority leader, would jointly sponsor a resolution for appointment of a select committee of the Senate to "track down to the very end" a report by Case of the $2500 contribution to his campaign fund.

Bill to Exempt Producers.

Case described the contribution in a speech in the Senate as having come from an attorney "interested" in Senate approval of a bill to exempt natural gas producers from federal price regulation. The bill has the solid backing of the major oil companies which produce the bulk of the nation's natural gas supply and there have been frequent charges that the oil and gas lobby has been spending a huge slush fund in its behalf.

With the Senate in recess today the uproar over the Case disclosure subsided somewhat but a round of conferences among Senate leaders pointed up the importance of the report of the contribution in their reckoning on the possible outcome of the vote on the bill, expected Monday.

Case persisted today in his refusal to identify the lawyer who had made the contribution, which he rejected after learning its source.

Party Leaders Agree.

Johnson said that Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, charman of the Republican Senate Policy Committee, and Senator Earle Clement of Kentucky, Democratic whip, agreed with him and Knowland that the special investigation should be conducted.

The select committee will consist of two members from each party and will be appointed by the Vice President.

Announcing his course of action, Johnson said that "a member of the Senate has reported a set of circumstances which raise the inference that an improper attempt has been made

U. S. INTERESTED IN SATELLITE FOR GLOBAL WATCH

Quarles Says Air Force Has Been Considering Problem — Questions 'Short War' View.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles said today the Air Force is interested—"in a long range research sense"—in the possibility of launching a "big brother" space satellite to keep photographic watch on all parts of the globe.

Quarles, answering questions of reporters after an address at the Air Force Association jet age conference, said he was not referring to anything concrete or definite. "In a research sense we have for years been considering the whole problem," he said.

Cautioning reporters to "underline the word project," Quarles said the only current satellite project is Project Vanguard, to create a space satellite that would carry scientific instruments. Its purpose is to circle the earth recording scientific information.

There have been published reports of plans for a "big brother" satellite, to be launched within five years, with the hope it could transmit images of the world, including Soviet territory, to this country.

View of War of Future.

In his address Quarles departed from his text to say it was not the Air Force view that a global war would necessarily be short because of the development of nuclear weapons.

Quarles said that if the war spread from a local to a general global situation, the first few days would be a very violent phase and probably be the decisive phase of the war.

He said the Air Force view emphasized the importance of this violent part, but it did not necessarily follow that the war would be ended by it.

Quarles also deleted from his talk reference to the target capability of a single fighter-bomber plane.

His text said:

"Today a single bomber, or a missile, or even a fighter-bomber, can deliver on a target as much explosive force as all the World War bombers combined."

Arithmetic Involved.

Quarles told reporters he deleted the fighter-bomber reference because it involved a considerable matter of arithmetic, but he believed the original statement was accurate.

He emphasized that he was not referring to the total tonnage of bombs dropped in the war but to the total capacity of all bombers.

(A United Press dispatch said his bomb-load comment indicated hydrogen bombs are being made in sizes that can be carried by jet fighter planes.)

By the United Press.

In what could be an answer to expressed congressional fears about Russian military progress, he said the United States

PRESIDENT COOKS VEGETABLE SOUP FOR HUMPHREYS

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Feb. 4 (AP)—President and Mrs. Eisenhower spent a quiet, rainy Saturday indoors at their farm home today. The President happily cooked vegetable soup for their weekend guests, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. George M. Humphrey.

The "Gettysburg White House" said the Humphrey's visit was entirely social—that the President was transacting no official business over the weekend apart from a few staff matters he took up with his press secretary, James C. Hagerty.

Humphrey is a close friend of Mr. Eisenhower's. The President is expected to visit Humphrey's Thomasville (Ga.) plantation soon after the Chief Executive undergoes an intensive physical examination some time between Feb. 10 and 15.

Preparing vegetable soup as amateur chef Mr. Eisenhower does it is a major undertaking, stretching over several days. The President began working on this one yesterday and Hagerty said he was hard at it when Hagerty visited him this morning.

NAVY PLANE CARRYING 7 OVERDUE IN ANTARCTIC

Plane 12 Hours Late on Mission 400 Miles East of Little America.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Navy said tonight one of its planes with seven men aboard was overdue on the Antarctic expedition.

A message from the expedition yesterday said the plane then was 12 hours overdue on a flight from a "trail party," 400 miles east of Little America.

The Navy said it had no other details. It added that the names of those aboard the missing plane would be released as soon as next of kin are notified.

RUSSIANS PREFER ICE CREAM OUTDOORS; 'IT IS WARM'

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

MOSCOW, Feb. 4—A foreigner learned here today why the Muscovites buy ice cream from street vendors and eat it outdoors, in sub-freezing weather.

A young woman nibbling on a cone was asked the question, and she replied: "The ice cream is at 32 degrees and the air is about 35 below zero. So we eat the ice cream because it is warm."

STEVENSON SEES DANGER IN SOVIET TREATY OFFERS

He Warns U.S. Not to Submit to 'Blackmail' —Speaks After Kefauver.

By EDWARD A. HARRIS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FRESNO, Calif., Feb. 4—Adlai E. Stevenson today called for careful consideration of the latest Soviet plea for a peace pact with the United States, but at the same time warned against submitting to "blackmail."

He spoke before 2000 delegates to the California Democratic Council just three hours after the only other avowed Democratic candidate for President, Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

In his speech, Kefauver asserted the concepts of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles expressed in the slogans "massive retaliation, go-it-alone, and brink of war" had furthered the cause of "neutralism," while frightening the United States' allies.

Both Stevenson and Kefauver are campaigning for the state's 68 national convention votes, and for support in the June 5 preferential primary. The council will make no indorsement of any presidential aspirant, but the impression made by the two candidates is of vital importance because the delegates represent 450 democratic clubs throughout California.

Refers to Soviet Note.

Stevenson, who came here from a round of speechmaking and handshaking in the San Francisco area, pointed out that the latest Soviet note to President Eisenhower implied that any agreement on Germany depends on acceptance by this country of the Soviet peace pact.

"We must not appear to the free peoples of the world either to reject offers of friendship, or to submit to blackmail," he declared. "Such a treaty offers two dangers—a false sense of security among us and our friends, without any concrete guarantee of German unity."

Although at one point he said he wished Secretary Dulles well

14-Year-Old Boy Wins $100,000 On TV Quiz Show in Third Try

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (UP)—Fourteen-year-old George L. Wright III tonight won $100,000 in his third try on a television quiz show—a record amount for anyone his age.

He won the prize on the NBC program, "The Big Surprise," with his knowledge of science, magic and music.

An Internal Revenue spokesman in Washington said that the youth's taxes on his prize will run about $67,000, leaving him approximately $33,000.

George clinched the $100,000 when he identified a song of the 1920s as "Me and My Shadow" and, playing his ukelele, sang every word of one verse of it.

The question was a substitute for the one part of a six-part question which the youth missed last week. The question was thrown out and George was given another chance for the big prize when it was decided that last week's question was incorrectly worded.

Once before George had been given another crack at the prize money when he was "rescued" by two youths who answered a current events question properly. This chance was allowed according to program practice.

George said that three-quarters of his prize money will be put in a trust fund for his college education, but he is going to give at least $2000 to his parents. He plans to buy presents for his mother, father, sister Fredericka, 12, and brother Peter, 10. For himself, George is going to buy magic tricks, a clarinet, and a 10-string ukelele.

Farley's Garter Falls---Truman Pace Beyond the Line of Duty

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)—Harry Truman's brisk pace proved too much this morning for Jim Farley's black garter. The strap worked itself loose and the former President and ex-postmaster general stopped for a moment. Farley stooped in the chill morning air and removed the offending item and stuffed it into a pocket.

Then the two men resumed their first constitutional together, four reporters in tow.

Conversation avoided politics and ran to the lighter side.

Someone mentioned "this earth satellite business." Said the man who unleashed the first atomic bomb:

"I'm sort of like Admiral (William D.) Leahy was when he said about the atom bomb, 'I think it's a lot of hooey.'

"It's like those flying saucers. It's possible but I don't know what good it'll do. I'm getting to the age where I'm old-fashioned."

At the glass-facaded Lever building, Truman commiserated with the window washers.

"'I don't think," he said, "I'd want that job."

"It's not as precarious as the presidency," someone suggested.

"I certainly agree with that," came the reply of an ex-President.

TRUMAN CHIDES WELFARE DEPT. AS MORE HUMANE IN ELECTION YEAR

Likens Administration Action to Deathbed Repentance — Calls G.O.P. Victory in 1952 a 'Fluke.'

BOSTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Former President Truman said tonight the Administration's position in the matter of health, education and welfare is more humane and that it may be "the kind of deathbed repentance that comes to them in an election year."

He added: "I might say that when they contemplate this election I think it is appropriate for them to think in terms of deathbed repentance."

Charging the influence of big business in the Eisenhower Administration held back the wheels of progress in the fields of health, welfare and education, Truman said in a speech at a Jefferson-Jackson dinner:

"The Republicans at first put Mrs. (Oveta Culp) Hobby at the head of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. But she was apparently more interested in the balance sheet than she was in helping people in trouble and distress. She opposed lowering the age at which women can retire under social security. She opposed disability insurance. She opposed federal aid to education.

'Happy to See Her Go.'

"And the mess she made of handling the anti-polio vaccine program has never been equaled. The Administration arranged a very touching scene for her exit, but you will never make me believe that they were not extremely happy to see her go—as they had good reason to be."

"This year, the Administration is taking a somewhat more humane position in its recommendations to Congress in these matters. It may be because they have a new secretary of health, education and welfare—or it may be that this is just the kind of deathbed repentance that comes to them in an election year."

Democratic victories in elections of the last three years show that the Republican victory in 1952 was "a fluke," Truman told the gathering of Democrats.

He added Democrats have been "enjoying an unprecedented series of successes in local and state elections" and that he is deriving "great comfort from the prospect that the presidential office will soon be occupied again by a Democrat."

Many Added to Rolls.

He said nine governors, dozens of mayors and hundreds of state legislators have been added to the Democratic rolls.

"There must be a reason for this," he continued, "and there is. It is the simple and historical fact that the Democratic party is the party of all the people and the Republican party is the party of special privilege."

He said the big business philosophy in the Eisenhower administration began with the appointment of a "cabinet of millionaires" whose first act was a "lopsided tax cut — a $7,000,000,000 tax cut they put across in 1953."

"And where did the benefits of that tax cut go?" the former President asked." . . . corporations and people with incomes over $5000 a year got 91 per cent of that cut, and all the millions of taxpayers with incomes of less than $5000 a year got only 9 per cent of the cut."

Truman said Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson started a program some months ago for buying pork to help hog prices.

Processors' Profits Up.

"But he did not buy from the farmers, he bought from the processors," the former chief executive added. "And what have the results been? The price of pork kept right on going down, but the profits of the processors zoomed upward. I have heard it said the processors' profits during this period have actually doubled."

On national defense the former President said the Eisenhower Administration has "actually been cutting down on the size of our armed forces. They have been putting economy ahead of national security."

He said that Gen. Matthew Ridgway as Army Chief of Staff found out that "the Eisenhower Administration was taking a political approach to matters of the most vital national importance."

"He said so right out in public," Truman continued, "and I suppose the Republican press will revile him and persecute him for it, but he has been doing his patriotic duty. Our ground forces are too small and inadequately prepared to perform the great missions imposed upon them."

The former President said he hopes something will be done to prevent floods in New England.

"Your rivers," he said "could be developed for flood control and power generation just like the Tennessee valley. But the private power companies have been against it—and the Republicans have danced to the tune played by the power companies.

"The moral to this story is that if you want something done to control these terrible floods in New England and to provide cheaper power for New England industry, you had better vote for a Democratic President and a Democratic National Administration."

Gales Scatter Ships—Fuel Supplies Short in Poland, Hungary and W. Germany —Southern Italy Freezes.

LONDON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Europe's worst cold spell of the twentieth century has caused the deaths of 126 persons. The giant freeze-up stretched even into the normally sunshine spots of southern Italy and the French Riviera.

Water was at a premium for thousands of British householders whose pipes froze. Fuel shortages were reported in Poland and Hungary.

Gales scattered coastal shipping. Ice and snow made roads perilous and snarled rail transport.

Cuts in gas supplies forced cold meals for many people in Hesse, West Germany. Bonn and other cities had gas failures.

Temperatures generally were slightly above yesterday's levels, though northern Italy reported 22 below zero.

Deaths from exposure, fire, storm and crashes attributable to the weather by country were: France 35, Britain 26, Italy 16, Denmark 11, Germany and the Saar 10, Turkey 10, Austria 5, Holland 4, Switzerland 4, Yugoslavia 2, Spain 2 and Belgium 1.

Peasant families in southern Italy shivered in houses without adequate heating. Snow spread over the French Riviera and frost blackened fields of spring flowers worth millions of dollars.

Spain had its worst cold wave since 1891. Rome's fountains froze. The canals of Venice kept free of ice only because 75 mile-an-hour gales lashed them into waves.

West Berlin and Brussels opened special "warming rooms" for those out of coal.

For Britons the big freeze brought a new topic of conversation. "How are your pipes?" is now the standard greeting.

MOLLET PLEDGES FULL EQUALITY FOR ALGERIANS

ARRAS, France, Feb. 4 (UP)—New French Socialist Premier Guy Mollet promised today that France would accord Moslem Algerians free elections and total political equality.

Mollet made his pledge two days before his scheduled visit to the terrorist-ridden North African territory.

The Premier told a radio and television audience his government's aim is "first to recognize and respect Algerian personality and realize total political equality of all Algeria's inhabitants."

Mollet's declaration was expected to arouse further hostility among the French settlers in Algeria who have been demonstrating against the new government's reform program.

ROOSEVELT AND TRUMAN BIRTHDAYS AS HOLIDAYS

MADISON, Wisc., Feb. 4 (AP)—Richard Huffman, editor and publisher of the Madison Labor News, is an outspoken admirer of Democrats whether they be in national or state administration.

Recently his employes bargained for a new contract and proposed two additional holidays. They suggested Washington's Birthday and Lincoln's birthday.

Huffman replied: "It's F.D.R.'s (the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt) and Truman's (former President Harry Truman) birthdays or it's nothing".

The employes took Huffman at his word—they now have the two additional holidays.

REDS, FORMOSA ARTILLERY, SHIPS EXCHANGE FIRE

Nationalists Rout Gunboat Flotilla Off Matsu — Barrages in Quemoy Area.

TAIPEI, Formosa, Feb. 4 (UP)—Nationalist and Communist artillery and naval vessels exchanged fire today at both ends of the Nationalist offshore defense chain.

Nationalist warships drove a Communist gunboat flotilla from little Kaoteng island near the northern offshore Nationalist island of Matsu. Red and Nationalist artillery bombarded each other in the Kaoteng-Matsu area as well as in the region of Quemoy, the southern anchor of the Nationalist defense line.

Heavy artillery barrages started during the night and continued today between the Nationalist garrison on Quemoy and the Reds at Amoy, four miles away in Fukien province.

The Reds said the Nationalists fired four separate barrages in the Amoy area, killing five persons, injuring two others and destroying a fishing boat. A Peiping radio broadcast heard in Tokyo said the dead were residents of Tateng island, near Amoy. The Peiping dispatch was datelined "the Fukien front."

Aim at Causeway.

Amoy is a red-held coastal island connected to the mainland by a two-mile causeway which the Nationalists have been trying to destroy by shells.

The action at Matsu and Kaoteng caused more concern in Taipei than the Quemoy bombardments.

Official Government reports said Communist heavy artillery rained some 800 shells on little Kaoteng, located between Matsu and the mainland 14 miles away.

The Nationalists considered this more dangerous than the stab by the Communist flotilla which was officially termed a "nuisance raid."

Nationalist warships attacked the Red boats. Official dispatches called the fighting "furious." It lasted three hours, with land artillery joining in the sea fight for both sides.

Fukien Shelling Charged.

In the midst of the heightening bombardments, the Communists accused the Nationalists of using warships to shell a village on Huangvhi peninsula in Fukien province.

The Red radio at Peiping said the Nationalists shelled the village from six miles out at sea, killing a fisherman and wounding his wife and two children.

The broadcast, monitored in Tokyo, said mainland artillery units returned the naval fire.

The Nationalists claim the Reds are increasing their Fukien province defenses.

The Tatao (Nationalist) news agency at Taipei said Red Chinese troops and war supplies are moving nightly aboard motored junks from the South China port of Swatow to Fukien, which lies opposite the Nationalist offshore chain.

NEW APPROACH IN WESTINGHOUSE STRIKE IS URGED

U. S. Mediator Calls for Putting Aside Time Study Issue for Now.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—The Government recommended today a new approach in bargaining as a possible solution of the 111-day-old strike at the Westinghouse Corp.

Joseph F. Finnegan, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, proposed that both sides set aside the most explosive issue—time study—and seek an agreement on the other issues. When these are resolved, the employes then would return to work for 90 days. In the meantime, the parties would attempt to resolve the time study issue.

60 Days to Agree.

At the end of 60 days, if an agreement on the issue had not been reached, Finnegan would "recommend that the parties voluntarily submit any unsettled questions to fact-facting or other appropriate procedures."

He asked the Westinghouse management and the International Union of Electrical Workers to advise him by 3 p.m. Monday of their acceptance or rejection of this approach.

Time study is a method of determining the production standards of a worker, including efficiency and output.

Finnegan submitted his proposal in writing to the parties. He said he was convinced that the focal point of the whole controversy is the time study or work standard issue. But, he added, it has "become so obscured by tensions and bitterness that I don't believe it can be resolved at this time by normal collective bargaining procedures."

Other Issues.

Other major questions are wage rates, length of contract, and arbitration procedures. Wages now average about $2.10 an hour. The company wants a five-year contract because the union last year made a five-year agreement with General Electric. The union wants a one-year contract.

Finnegan and three associates have been conferring separately with management and the union in Washington for four days.

The time study program proposed by the company has met union insistence on guarantees that it would not cost members jobs or income. Westinghouse has refused to make such a commitment.

Thirty of the company's 98 plants were shut down last Oct. 17 when 44,000 members of the union walked out. Also on strike are 10,500 members of the United Electrical workers union, inedpendent.

By the Associated Press.

A dispute over the time studies brought on a union walkout at Pittsburgh last Oct. 1, in advance of the general strike Oct. 17.

The union insisted on guarantees that the efficiency studies would not cost its members any loss of income or jobs. The company refused.

The union leaders have said many jobs might be wiped out and other unionists be put on lower pay. The company says its program could save millions of dollars and that workload and pay changes resulting from such a study should be left up to the management.

Gov. Lausche Rejects Plea for Troops in Strike.

LIMA, Ohio, Feb. 4 (AP)—Gov. Frank J. Lausche turned down an appeal from national guard troops today as 700 strikers demonstrated at the struck Westinghouse electric plant. One man was injured and several cars were damaged.

Lausche said troops would not be sent until "all local resources" had been utilized. He suggested the local "weakness" could be remedied by applying to Allen county common pleas court for an order limiting the number of pickets.

French Ask Russia to Remove Obstacles to Better Relations

Urge Deeds First Before Reds Propose Non-Aggression Pacts—Point to Denounced Treaty.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

PARIS, Feb. 4—France's new Socialist-led government called on the Soviet Union today to eliminate "principal obstacles still in the way of friendly cooperation and confidence between the East and the West" before proposing non-aggression pacts.

This deeds-and-not-words advice was given in diplomatic terms in a communique issued by the French Foreign Ministry. The official statement was the reaction of Premier Mollet's government of the second letter sent by Soviet Premier Bulganin to President Eisenhower.

The Republican Front government of Mollet is a left-of-center coalition of Socialists and Radical Socialists. The previous government was a right-of-center coalition without Socialist representation.

In Another Guise.

What Bulganin has proposed, according to official sources, is simply a European security pact in another guise. However, the French Foreign Ministry did welcome the Soviet premier's decision to send two letters rather than one since it could be presumed Moscow as interested in continuing an exchange of views.

The communique said:

"The French government is happy to note that the reply of President Eisenhower to the first message of Premier Bulganin has encouraged him to pursue the exchange and to maintain with the West a contact which France has always wanted to assure.

"The (Geneva) conference of the chiefs of government permitted the four (United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union) to examine together the problems in suspense. If it did not result in a settlement, it opened, nevertheless, negotiation and permitted the indispensible confrontation of the respective positions.

"Whatever procedure is used, the pursuit of exchanges of view can only favor mutual comprehension and made easier the safeguarding of peace and the organization of security.

"As concerns the conclusion of new international accords, the French Government estimates that these accords would carry more weight if they were the crowning of a positive effort toward the settlement of outstanding questions.

Principal Obstacles.

"Their significance could be considerable if they came after the elimination of the principal obstacles still in the way of friendly co-operation and confidence between the East and the West.

"As concerns France, the treaty of alliance (with the Soviet Union) which has existed since Dec. 10, 1944, was unilaterally denounced by the Soviet Government July 1, 1955. The French Government has already made it known publicly that it regrets this decision for which it sees no valid juridicial reason.

"The French Government has declared several times that, consequently, it intends to remain faithful to the spirit as well as the letter of the treaty of 1944."

The Soviet Government also denounced a 50-year treaty with the British Government.

99 PCT. DROP IN ROYALTIES ON KINSEY'S BOOKS IN YEAR

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 4 (AP)—Royalties on Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey's two books on sex behavior in human beings dropped 99 per cent in 1955 from the preceding year.

In a report to the Secretary of State, Indiana University's Institute for Sex Research said royalties totaled $309,079.64 in 1954 and dropped to $3001.27 last year. Kinsey operates the institute on the Bloomington campus.

REDS' SECRECY ON AMERICAN P.O.W.S ASSAILED

Admiral Charges Korean and Chinese Communists Play on 'Human Misery.'

MUNSAN, Korea, Sunday, Feb. 5 (UP)—R. Adm. Walter E. Moore, senior United Nations delegate to the Joint Military Armistice Commission in Korea, accused the Communists today of playing on "human misery," by withholding information on United States prisoners of war.

Moore said there was little hope the Reds will ever reveal the fate of 450 missing American service men.

When the armistice was signed in July 1953, the U.N. Command was convinced the missing soldiers, airmen, Marines and sailors were in Communist hands. However, repeated requests to account for these men have gone unanswered.

Moore said in an interview that he could not say whether any of the missing P.O.W.s still may be alive.

"They are not necessarily alive now," he said, "but they were at one time. . . . And that doesn't mean that I don't think some of them are not still alive today."

The admiral, dressed in an Army uniform in the U.N. truce camp, said he asked the North Koreans and Chinese Reds at Panmunjom for an accounting of the missing Americans less than three months ago, but without result.

"No Communist will honor or live up to his agreement," he said.

The tall, gray-haired admiral also denounced as illegal the military build-up in North Korea and called for dissolution of the four-nation Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission.

The Czech, Polish, Swiss and Swedish commission was originally formed to serve as watchdog over the armistice, but Moore said it has "proved itself powerless to prevent the Red build-up."

He said the announced withdrawal of some Chinese troops from North Korea has little meaning because "they can bring them forward (across the Yalu river border) on short notice."

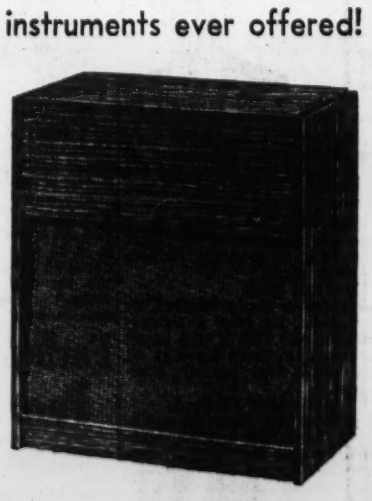

He pointed out that six United States divisions have pulled out of Korea since the end of the war and "cannot get back in a hurry—and that is of overriding importance."

TRADES GROUP TO BACK LABOR CANDIDATES FOR CHARTER BOARD

Union Organization Will Also Make Some Recommendations for Changes in City's Government Setup.

Resolutions recommending labor candidates for election to the board of freeholders to study modernization of the city charter, and also suggesting one or more provisions for inclusion in a new charter, will be introduced at a meeting of the AFL Central Trades & Labor Union Tuesday night.

William A. Webb, executive secretary of Central Trades, soon to be merged with the CIO into the St. Louis Labor Union Council, told a reporter, "It is safe to assume that at least three resolutions bearing on the board of freeholders will be introduced at the meeting."

The board of 13 freeholders will be elected May 8.

3 Resolutions Drawn.

"Central Trades takes part in matters of community interest, and its members live and work under the city charter," Webb said. "At least three resolutions are being drawn, and I anticipate action to permit Central Trades to put forward its candidates."

Webb recalled that three AFL leaders were members of the board of freeholders elected in 1949 to draft a new charter. They were: John I. Rollings, Webb's predecessor as executive secretary of Central Trades; the late John J. Church, representing warehouse and distribution workers, and Leo J. Hennessey, financial secretary of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local No. 1. The proposed charter drafted by that board was defeated by the voters.

One resolution to be introduced, necessary if Central Trades is to support its candidates for the board, would declare the board of freeholders a non-political office. Central Trades bylaws prohibit indorsement of candidates in partisan political contests.

Civil Service Raid.

Central Trades delegates, especially those representing city employes, undoubtedly will discuss through a resolution the proposed raid on civil service by politicians seeking patronage. The raid would affect nearly 3000 city laborers, custodians and maintenance men, representing about one-third of the municipal employes under civil service.

Many city workers are members of the AFL craft unions, as well as the State, County and Municipal Workers Union. Most of them approve of the merit system.

Webb indicated that the AFL group may also seek representation on the Freeholders Citizens Committee, announced last week by Mayor Raymond R. Tucker. The job of the committee, which Mayor Tucker has asked 16 winners of the annual St. Louis Award to organize, is support of qualified candidates for the freeholders board.

Membership of the committee is to be expanded, it was stated. The group will meet next Wednesday.

The local CIO group opposed election of a board of freeholders, and has announced no change in its position since the bill for election of a board was passed. The CIO favored charter amendment by the Board of Aldermen, if amendment was indicated. On the merit system question, the CIO held that the system could be "carried to an extreme."

By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Attending a one-day Midwest conference of faculty, alumni and friends of Massachusetts Institute of Technology here yesterday are from left, JAMES R. KILLIAN JR., president of the school; EDWARD P. BROOKS, dean of the school of industrial management; GEORGE R. HARRISON, dean of the school of science; THOMAS H. PIGFORD, associate professor of nuclear engineering and JOHN C. CITY LAGS IN RISE OF RETAIL SALES IN ST. LOUIS AREA

Retail sales in St. Louis increased 20 per cent from 1948 to 1954 but jumped 56 per cent in the rest of the St. Louis metropolitan area, the Bureau of the Census reported yesterday.

In St. Louis proper, sales totaled $1,161,938,000 in 1954, compared with $966,381,000 in 1948. For the entire metropolitan area, the 1954 total was $2,059,506,000 as against $1,540,790,000 in 1948, the report said.

Total retail sales of food stores outside St. Louis for the first time exceeded the total for such establishments inside the city limits. For all types of sales, however, the city share was 56 per cent in 1954. It was 63 per cent in 1948.

Percentage increases from 1948 to 1954 in various parts of the metropolitan area were: St. Louis county, 78 per cent; St. Charles county, 75 per cent; Madison county, 34 per cent, and St. Clair county, 35 per cent.

RETARDED BOYS SET TRAILER AFIRE, DYNAMITE WRECKS IT

A dynamite explosion, set off by a fire started by two 17-year-old boys who had escaped from the St. Louis State Training School, demolished a house trailer and alarmed residents of a large area of noth St. Louis county last night but caused no injuries.

The two youths, described by Dr. Arthur A. Hines, medical director of the school, as mentally retarded, told police they broke a window of the unoccupied trailer and threw in matches because they wanted to "see a fire and fire engines." They were arrested when their actions aroused the suspicion of a filling station attendant at New Jamestown road and U.S. Highway 67 who called police. They were returned to the school and placed in separate therapy rooms.

The trailer was owned by Dr. Alvin C. Schopp, 8123 Glen Echo drive, Bel-Nor, and was parked on an 18-acre tract the physician owns in the 13,000 block of Spanish Pond road. Mrs. Schopp said the trailer was used to store tools employed in clearing land preparatory to construction of a home. She thought the trailer contained about six sticks of dynamite used in stump removal.

CITY READY FOR COMMERCIAL JETS, KINSEY POINTS OUT

St. Louis "will be in the forefront in the commercial jet aircraft picture for a considerable time in the foreseeable future," Milton M. Kinsey, chairman of the air board of the Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday.

He made public a letter he had written to U.S. News & World Report magazine, objecting to the omission of St. Louis in an article that listed cities likely to be commercial jet stopping points.

"The most recent report issued just last month under the auspices of Civil Aeronautics Authority names only three cities as having airport facilities suitable for handling commercial jet aircraft," Kinsey wrote. "St. Louis is one of these. . . . Yet you choose to ignore us and point to other similar cities which are not now prepared and have little promise of becoming so.

"The fact is that our airport has a 2200-foot concrete runway with barrier-type jet aircraft arrestors which will handle any jet transports now contemplated. It is the only airport in the world so equipped, and the eyes of experts from all quarters are upon us."

FILLING STATION HOLDUP

Tim Boswell, operator of a filling station at 2700 Union boulevard, was held up and robbed of $200 by three men last night, he reported to police.

Boswell said one of the Negroes went into a washroom and emerged carrying a sawed-off shotgun. They took the money from the cash register and his pockets, Boswell told police.

New M.I.T. Reactor to Include Beam for Cancer Treatment

$2,000,000 Device to Be Built When Funds Are Raised — Technique Still in Experimental Stage.

A new $2,000,000 reactor planned for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will include facilities for the treatment of cancer with a neutron beam, Thomas H. Pigford, associate professor of nuclear engineering at M.I.T., said here yesterday.

Pigford said two Boston physicians who devised the new treatment method, Dr. W. H. Sweet and Dr. Gordon Brownell of Massachusetts General Hospital, are "extremely enthusiastic" about it. The neutron beam treatment is not yet proved as a medical tool, and still is in the research stage, he added.

Pigford spoke before an afternoon session of the M.I.T. Midwest Conference, held at the Missouri Athletic Club. He worked as an adviser on the design team for the new reactor, which was headed by Theos J. Thompson, associate professor of nuclear engineering.

Funds Being Raised.

Construction on the new 1000-kilowatt research reactor will begin as soon as fund-raising is completed and approval from the Atomic Energy Commission and other authorities is obtained, Pigford said. It will take two years to complete, he said.

Beneath the reactor will be located a room which medical researchers can use in their study of neutron therapy, Pigford said. The method has already been used on extreme cases of cancer by Dr. Sweet and Dr. Brownell, working with the facilities of the Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island, N.Y., he said.

The method devised by the Boston doctors is particularly promising for the treatment of cancerous brain tumors, Pigford said. It involves the injection into a patient of salts of the element boron. The boron moves through the body and concentrates in the cancerous tissue.

The patient is then placed in position under the neutron beam, which shoots down on him through a funnel filled with heavy water and through a port which can be opened and closed, Pigford said. The neutrons are "slow" neutrons, moving at a speed of about one mile per second.

Boron Bombarded.

The neutrons bombard the boron, now concentrated in the brain tumor, and result in a type of radiation known as alpha particles, Pigford said.

These alpha particles—thus produced inside the body—damage and destroy the cancerous tissue, he explained. But because they travel only a short distance, a small fraction of a millimeter, they do not get into the other, healthy brain tissues.

And the neutron beam itself causes "very little" tissue damage, Pigford added.

"It's a technique of damaging the cancerous tissue immediately at the point of origin," he explained. "You don't put the destroying radiation in from the outside—you generate it right where it belongs."

A major advantage of the neutron therapy technique is that it can remove the last traces of cancerous tissue, he said. It is usually used as a "back-up" to surgery.

Russia Cuts Time Lag.

James R. Killian Jr., president of M.I.T., said in an address last night that the United States must seek "superior scientists and engineers" in order to compete with "the Soviets' steady growth in technological strength."

Russia, Killian said, "has an extremely well articulated monolithic organization for research and development, responsive to the plans of the state and impressively agile in translating ideas — sometimes our ideas but many good ones of their own—rapidly into hardware, including nuclear weapons and the capacity to deliver them."

The Soviets have also achieved "impressive success" in reducing the time lag between ideas and hardware, Killian said.

"In drawing a comparison with the United States decision-making structure with its extensive checks, budgetary reviews, design changes, and congressional debate," he said, "an informed American observer has estimated that one to three years are eliminated by the Soviets in the speed with which they are able to move from initial design to production on a complex weapon as, for example, a long-range bomber."

Killian said he made his comments not with any thought that the United States should adopt the methods of the Soviets, but "to point up the importance of avoiding complacency."

Other speakers at yesterday's conference were M.I.T. faculty members George R. Harrison, dean of the school of science; Edward P. Brooks, dean of the school of industrial management; John C. Trump, professor of electrical engineering; and Joseph W. Barker of New York, president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

TWO SENATORS MAKE PLEA FOR RIVERFRONT FUND

Hennings, Symington Trace History of Project in Letter to Colleagues.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — Senators Thomas C. Hennings Jr. and Stuart Symington (Dems.), of Missouri, today urged other Senate and House members to approve a federal grant for a start on the St. Louis riverfront memorial.

At the same time, Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), of St. Louis, asked Senator Alben W. Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, to consider calling a meeting of the United States Territorial Expansion Memorial Commission to consider the future of the St. Louis project.

Hennings and Symington, in a joint letter to all members of the Senate and House subcommittees on Department of the Interior appropriations, traced the history of the proposed Jefferson National Expansion Memorial.

Cite Louisiana Purchase.

Recalling the Louisiana Purchase in 1803—"one of the most stupendous real estate transactions in our history"—and the official transfer of the upper Louisiana territory at St. Louis in 1804, they went on:

"However, this is but one of this great midwestern city's claims to historic fame. St. Louis was also the site of the Old French Cathedral, earliest home of religion on the west bank of the Mississippi; the place where Laclede and Chouteau established the first civil government west of the Mississippi; the place where Lafayette was received by a grateful people; the place where the Santa Fe, the Oregon and other trails originated; the place where Lewis and Clark prepared for their trip of discovery and exploration; the site of the old courthouse in which the Dred Scott case was tried, and the axis of every important trade route to the West.

"History could not supply us with a better site to memorialize the westward expansion of our country."

They noted that St. Louisans had voted $7,500,000 in bonds 20 years ago for the project, "despite the fact that the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial will not be local in any sense, but rather will serve as a historical inspiration to every American."

"In view of the tremendous national symbolical significance of this most worthwhile proposed national memorial," they concluded, "we respectfully request that your committee approve an initial appropriation for the necessary preliminary planning in the budget for the National Park Service in the Interior Department appropriations bill for fiscal 1957."

Karsten, in his letter to Barkley, thanked the former Vice President for his statement to the House Appropriations Committee in support of funds for the project. Barkley, while backing the project strongly had said he was surprised to learn he still was chairman of the memorial commission.

JUSTICE CLARK TO BE CALLED IN CAUDLE TRIAL

McGrath Also Prospective Witness — They Will Be Asked About 'Health Policy.'

United States Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark will be called to testify as a witness on behalf of Theron Lamar Caudle, who was head of the Justice Department's tax division when Clark was Attorney General, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Another prospective witness for Caudle when he is tried here May 7 on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government is J. Howard McGrath, another former Attorney General under whom Caudle served in the tax division. McGrath succeeded Clark when the latter was appointed to the Supreme Court in 1949.

Purpose of Summons.

Purpose of calling the two former Attorneys General of the Truman Administration is to establish the "health policy" followed by the Justice Department then. This policy spared income-tax violators from criminal prosecution if their health was such that the strain of a trial might be fatal.

Caudle and his co-defendants, Matthew J. Connelly, former appointments secretary to Truman, and Harry I. Schwimmer, an attorney, were indicted in connection with the handling of the income-tax case of Irving Sachs, president of Shu-Stiles, Inc., of St. Louis.

It is one of the contentions of the defense that Caudle inquired into the Sachs case only for the purpose of determining whether the defendant's life would be endangered by bringing him to trial. By establishing the existence of this health policy in the Justice Department, defense counsel hope to show that Caudle was only performing his sworn duty in making that inquiry.

Although Justice Clark may be subpenaed, it is not certain that he will testify. When he was "invited" by the House Judiciary subcommittee, then headed by Representative Kenneth B. Keating (Rep.), New York, in June 1953, to testify about the handling of seven cases when he was Attorney General, he declined to appear.

Clark rejected the invitation on the ground that it was necessary to preserve the judiciary's independence from the legislative branch and it was desirable to keep Supreme Court justices free of "the strife of public affairs and partisan politics."

$50 Confectionery Holdup.

Anton Ferris, owner of a confectionery at 1601 Hickory street, reported to police last night that he was robbed of $50 in the store by a man who had a handkerchief tied over the lower portion of his face and who kept one hand in his pocket as though holding a pistol.

MISS CATHERINE RITTER

WOMAN IS 100, NEVER OUT OF ST. LOUIS AREA

A retired seamstress who has never been outside the St. Louis area, Miss Catherine Ritter, is celebrating her 100th birthday today. Friends and relatives will gather at her home at the Little Sisters of the Poor, 3400 South Grand boulevard, to mark the event.

Many years ago Miss Ritter would travel as far as Bissell's Point, St. Louis county, to visit a cousin, a niece, Miss Catherine Ritter, 4611 Varrelman avenue, reported. "She was one of those old-timers who liked to keep close to her home at 1304 Geyer avenue," she said.

The centenarian was active as a seamstress until World War II. Although hard of hearing, she enjoys conversing with her fellow residents at the Little Sisters' Home in German and English. She walks without a cane to mass and watches television.

22 AUTOS INVOLVED IN ICE ACCIDENTS AT 12TH, CHESTNUT

Twenty-two automobiles were involved in minor accidents that scrambled traffic at the intersection of Chestnut street and Twelfth boulevard yesterday morning. The fender-bending session was caused by a sheet of ice that formed on streets following a freezing drizzle.

It took police and a city cinder and salt crew a half an hour to untangle the cars at the intersection. Police said more automobiles kept sliding into the tie-up as they worked to free the first machines stuck there.

Icy conditions extended on highways from St. Louis county south through Jefferson and Ste. Genevieve counties early yesterday morning. By 9 a.m. the Missouri Highway Patrol said most of the thin coating of ice had melted.

NEW GRAND JURY WILL CONTINUE 'PAY-OFF' INQUIRY

Judge Walsh Says He Will Read Request Made by Retiring Panel.

The February - term grand jury will be instructed, when it is impaneled tomorrow, to continue the police pay-off inquiry, Circuit Judge J. Casey Walsh said yesterday.

Judge Walsh told the Post-Dispatch his charge to the jury will include a special instruction on the investigation, which has engaged the attention of four previous grand juries.

The judge plans to read to the new grand jurors a section of the final report made Friday by the December-term jury.

The report, in touching on the pay-off inquiry, said: "Additional testimony heard on the cases by this jury unfortunately was not conclusive and it is to be hoped that the incoming grand jury can and will follow through to the point of final action."

Three indictments were returned Friday in the investigation of reported pay-offs to some policemen by brothel operators, but the person named in them has not been arrested.

Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd declined to identify the individual, pending arrest, but said the person involved was not a policeman.

A hearing on a motion to dismiss indictments against Detective Capt. William Greenspan, one of three St. Louis police officers charged with accepting bribes from brothel operators, will be resumed Tuesday, in Judge Walsh's court.

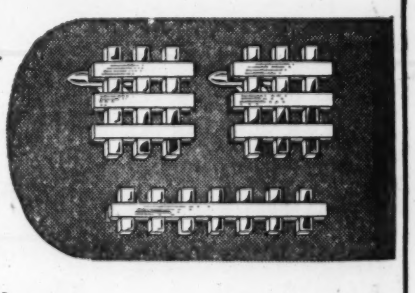

64 AREA YOUTHS REPORT FOR ARMY RESERVE DUTY

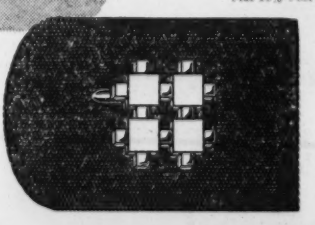

Sixty-four St. Louis area youths 17 to 18½ years old left last night for Camp Chaffe, Ark., to begin their six-month reserve training tour under the Army's new reserve program. It was the largest group to leave the city since the program started last October.

All but 11 of the youths are enlisted members of the reserve 102nd Infantry Division. The others are in non-divisional units. Many of them, including eight from Beaumont High School, were in mid-year high school graduating classes and want to complete their tours before entering college next September. They will serve 7½ years in the inactive reserve after completion of active duty.

TESTIFIES CARGO OWNER ARRANGED 'PIRATE RAID'

MARSEILLE, France, Feb. 4 (UP)—Elliott B. Forrest, of New York City, told a court here today that a "pirate" raid on a cigarette-laden Dutch freighter was a put-up job to enable the owner of the stolen cargo to collect $98,500 in insurance money.

Forrest is the alleged leader of the band that boarded the freighter Combinatie in the Mediterranean in October 1952 and hijacked its cargo of 2700 cases of American cigarettes. Forty-seven persons from six countries were indicted in the case, but police have managed to round up only 13 to stand trial on charges including second-degree robbery, smuggling and "criminal association."

Forrest testified that the raid was planned by the owner of the cigarettes, an Italian-American named Placido Pedemonte, to collect the insurance money.

UNITED FUND DISTRIBUTION IS ANNOUNCED

$6,022,719 or 73 Per Cent Allotted to Chest — Red Cross Gets $1,215,000.

Distribution of the $8,245,925 collected in St. Louis's first United Fund campaign, which ended Dec. 5, was announced yesterday by Donald Danforth, United Fund president.

Largest allocation was $6,022,719 to the Community Chest of Greater St. Louis which supports 109 health and welfare agencies. The figure represents 73 per cent of the total collected in the drive.

The St. Louis and Webster Groves chapters of the American Red Cross were given $1,215,000 or 14.7 per cent of the total campaign collection. A total of $65,000 of the Red Cross allocation has been designated for St. Louis's share of national disaster relief.

In its own campaign conducted last May, before joining the "One Gift . . . for All" campaign, the Red Cross collected 87.2 per cent of an announced goal of $1,150,000, or $1,002,640.

Other Allotments.

Other fund distributions as announced by Danforth were as follows: United Cerebral Palsy, $219,057; Missouri Baptist, Christian and Deaconess Hospitals, all associated, $98,000, St. Louis Diabetes Association, $19,625; and the St. Louis Association for Retarded Children, $19,200.

Of the Community Chest's allocation $5,894,814 was designated for the 102 original Chest agencies. A total of $127,905 will be for seven new agencies which joined the United Fund drive last fall.

The new groups include Mary Ryder Homes, Fellowship Center, Caroline Mission, Lutheran Children's Home, Camp Fire Girls, Catholic Youth Council and Child Center of Our Lady of Grace.

Cost of Campaign.

Cost of the campaign, which began Oct. 21, was $314,466, or 3.8 per cent of the total amount collected. A total of $122,859 was allowed for administrative cost; $100,000 for collection losses, and $115,000 to reduce agency supplemental membership campaigning.

"The distribution is based on exhaustive study of the relative needs of all beneficiary agencies," Danforth said. "Thus we feel able to assure the contributor that his combined giving results in the fairest possible division of his gift."

The United Fund was incorporated last April for the purpose of reducing the multiplicity of idependent charity appeals. It was established by 125 business executives, labor leaders and represntatives of racial, religious and welfare groups.

ALBANIA UNEXPECTEDLY ASKS TO RENEW TIES WITH BRITAIN

LONDON, Feb. 4. (UP)—Albania, smallest of Russia's requested resumption of diplomatic realtions with Britain, it was disclosed today.

The Foreign Offic said the request, made through the French legation in the Albanian capital of Tirana, is under consideration. All indications are that Britain will take its time before answering.

Relations between the two countries were broken 10 years ago when Albanian mines damaked two British destroyers and killed 44 men in the straits between Corfu and the Albanian coast. It is certain that before Britain agrees to resumption of the diplomatic relations, Albania will have to pay the damages awarded for the mine incident by the International Court of The Hague. The court ordered payment of $2,363,200 which Albania has ignored.

BAR ON INVESTING STATE CASH MAY BE VOTING ISSUE

on the basis of competitive bids, with some banks offering to pay as much as 5 per cent for the money. In 1929, the state had $12,605,000 on deposit in 42 banks and received interest averaging 3.3 per cent.

The state, like some commercial and private depositors, lost money as a result of bank failures during the early years of the depression. In at least one instance a bank closing was precipitated because the institution was unable to pay funds the state wanted to withdraw.

Missouri bankers assert the present system grew out of the enactment of the federal laws, which the bankers say were necessary to correct abuses caused by high interest payments on demand deposits under the old system.

The state incurs no risks in the safekeeping of its funds, they say. The banks are required to post as security for their state deposits collateral amounting to 10 per cent in excess of the deposits, and to maintain cash reserves of 20 per cent to meet withdrawals.

7 Pct. Intangible Tax.

They also pointed out that the state does receive some income from the bank's investment of part of these funds. The banks pay an intangible tax of 7 per cent on such earnings, as compared with the 4 per cent intangible tax paid by individuals.

One of two things must happen before Missouri can receive a return on its temporarily unneeded funds. The federal bar against interest on demand deposits must be lifted, or the Missouri Constitution must be amended to permit the state to put its funds in time deposits or to invest the money in short term Government notes.

Since any change in the federal law is extremely unlikely, the only practical course is through a constitutional amendment, observers believe. Such an amendment could be submitted to Missouri voters for their approval by the Legislature, or by the initiative process.

Several bills proposing submission of such amendments were introduced in recent sessions of the General Assembly, but none received serious consideration.

Donnelly Urged Change.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly, in his message to the 1955 Legislature, strongly recommended that the state constitution and laws be amended to permit the state to invest its temporarily idle funds.

He reported that in the first six months of 1954 the state had an average balance of $71,453,000, on which no interest was paid. Had the bulk of this money been invested in short term Treasury notes, on which the interest rate was unusually low at the time, the state still could have earned about $300,000 for the six-month period.

The State Reorganization Commission, which made a comprehensive study of state operations in 1954, recommended last year that Missouri be permitted to invest its idle funds in short-term Government obligations. It asserted Missouri could realize a "substantial yield in the way of interest" if this were done.

"Although the state is not in the investment business," the "Little Hoover" commission declared, "the investment of temporarily unemployed funds pending their expenditure is in the public interest."

Proposals Last Year.

Two proposals to carry out the recommendations of the Governor and the commission were introduced in the State Senate last year.

Both measures were referred to the Senate Committee on Banks and Banking, but were never acted upon. Chairman of that committee is Senator Floyd R. Gibson of Independence, the Democratic floor leader, who is an attorney and president of the Manufacturers and Mechanics Bank of Kansas City.

Gibson's bank held $525,000 in interest-free state funds as of Jan. 30, 1954.

He said the committee never acted on these proposals because there was no public interest in them. Gibson reported the committee held at least two hearings on the measures, but the only person who appeared on the matter was a member of the commission, who merely explained one proposal.

Under the present system, the State Treasurer selects the banks in which state monies are deposited, with the approval of the Governor and the State Auditor. These deposits, long regarded as political plums, are made under two-year contracts.

More Depositories.

The number of state depositories has increased sharply in recent years, with more than a third of Missouri's 620 banking institutions sharing in the funds. The bulk of the money, however, continues to be held by a relatively few banks.

The banks holding the two largest state deposits are the Central Missouri Trust of Jefferson City, with $24,447,263 as of last Tuesday, and the Commerce Trust of Kansas City, with $21,270,578.

Howard Cook, board chairman of the Jefferson City bank, is an influential "elder statesman" in the Missouri Democratic Party. President of the bank is Richard R. Nacy, a former State Treasurer and an active state Democratic leader. Nacy was formerly chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and executive vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee at the time the late Robert E. Hannegan of St. Louis was chairman.

The board chairman of Commerce Trust is James M. Kemper Sr., who, like Cook, is considered a top echelon party adviser. He was treasurer of the Democratic State Committee in 1952.

Central Missouri Trust and Commerce Trust handle the state's two "active checking accounts." This means that a majority of the state's checks and drafts to meet payrolls and current operating bills are drawn primarily on these two institutions.

This necessarily involves greater operating expenses for these banks, as they are required to employ additional cashiers and clerical personnel to handle the state's business. It is reported that the state maintains the largest balances in these banks to help defray their expenses in handling the current accounts.

The remainder of the state's deposits—$60,398,136—is maintained in so-called "inactive accounts." Actually, funds are withdrawn and replaced in these accounts from time to time, but the changes are less frequent than in the "checking accounts."

The state treasurer's records show that the largest of these deposits is $13,000,000, held by the Bank of St. Louis. Walter E. Burtelow, executive vice president of the bank, is co-chairman of the Republican state finance committee.

Ten other St. Louis area banks holding large state deposits are First National Bank in St. Louis, $4,500,000; Boatmen's National Bank, $4,000,000; Tower Grove Bank and Trust Co., $2,250,000; Mercantile Trust Co., $1,400,000; Southwest Bank, $1,100,000; the Bank of Ferguson, $750,000; Manufacturers Bank and Trust Co., $700,000; Jefferson Bank and Trust Co., $400,000; Baden Bank, $300,000, and American National Bank in St. Louis, $230,000.

Other Outstate Banks.

Other outstate banks holding large deposits are City National Bank and Trust Co., Kansas City, $2,000,000; Exchange National Bank, Jefferson City, $1,150,000; First National Bank of Cape Girardeau, $1,000,000, and the First National Bank of Kansas City, $450,000.

In addition to the 17 banks with more than 75 per cent of all state deposits, 245 other Missouri banks held $27,168,136 in state funds as of last Tuesday. The smallest amount in any bank was $50,000.

It was reported that many banks, particularly the smaller ones, want to have some state funds because it is regarded as a matter of "prestige." Many of the smaller banks, however, are not interested in large deposits, because a heavy withdrawal by the state would show up on their reports as a considerable loss in deposits, on a percentage basis.

Temporarily unneeded St. Louis municipal funds are regularly invested. The comptroller's report shows that $14,998,874 in city funds was invested as of last Jan. 9, most of it in short term Treasury notes. The city earned $127,371 in interest in the 1954-55 fiscal year.

St. Louis county does not invest its general operating funds, and frequently borrows on tax anticipation notes to finance current operations. But since 1951 the county has been investing its interest and sinking funds, and has earned a total of $54,992.

LADEJINSKY FIRED FROM U.S. POST FOR INVESTMENT

ed States aid to the Formosa company. Ladejinsky has disposed of his stock which had increased in value several times, Caldwell said.)

Asked whether the ICA would refer the matter to the Department of Justice, Caldwell replied:

"No, this ends the matter so far as we are concerned. He broke regulations more than laws. There was no United States law involved."

ICA said these regulations applied to Ladejinsky's case.

"No ICA employe shall engage directly or indirectly in any private business transaction or private arrangement for personal profit (including an investment) which accrues from or is based upon his official position or authority or upon confidential information which he gains by reason of his position or authority.

"No ICA employe shall engage, directly or indirectly, in any business activity or private arrangement for personal profit which would place him in a position, by reason of a possible conflict of interest, where he could not exercise his best judgment on behalf of the agency.

"No ICA employe shall engage, directly or indirectly, in any private business activity or private arrangement for personal profit which might reflect discredit on the agency. . . ."

The regulations also provide that "ICA employes must obey the laws and regulations of the country to which they are assigned and forbids them, without permission from the director of ICA, to engage in any business for profit in the country to which they are assigned."

Expresses Regret.

"ICA," Caldwell said, "deeply regrets the action that was required. Nevertheless, it is impossible to condone or overlook such actions even though such actions may have stemmed from confusion or misjudgment. Therefore, ICA, while wishing to give full recognition to his imaginative work and to the important contribution that Wolf Ladejinsky has made to the improvement of agricultural production and reform in Formosa, Japan and Viet Nam, has accepted his resignation with regret."

Ladejinsky's letter of resignation was dated last Jan. 7, and was sent on to Washington by diplomatic pouch "which took some time," Caldwell said. Officials of the agency considered the case during the last 10 days. The decision to accept the resignation was reached a few days ago but the actual notification was not sent out until this morning after published reports of the resignation had appeared.

Actually, Ladejinsky is still on the Government payroll and at work in his post in Viet Nam. He will continue to draw pay there for some weeks until he has had a chance to wind up his affairs there, Caldwell said.

Caldwell said Ladejinsky's case was not unique in the history of the foreign aid program. There have been a few similar cases which, he said, have been handled in similar fashion "all except for the publicity." Because Ladejinsky had become a public figure through his dismissal from the Agriculture Department, Caldwell continued, it was considered advisable to hold a news conference and outline the reasons for the resignation "in the best interests of fair play for Mr. Ladejinsky and the United States Government."

Stock Disposed of.

Caldwell said that the land expert had disposed of the stock he had purchased in the Formosan factory before resigning. If he had not, Caldwell said, the Government would not have accepted the resignation but would have taken steps to discharge him.

As the matter now stands, Caldwell added, Ladejinsky will not lose any retirement or other benefits accrued during his government service. He said he did not know whether today's action would bar Ladejinsky from further government employment.

Ladejinsky, 56 years old, became a United States citizen in 1923.

He was a Far Eastern expert with the Department of Agriculture from 1935 to 1950, when he went to work with the State Department. In Japan, he was credited with having played a key role in shaping the postwar land reform program under the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Ladejinsky Sent Resignation After Learning of Loan.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1956.

HONG KONG, Feb. 4—Wolf Ladejinsky, land reform expert in Viet Nam who resigned by request from the International Co-operation Administration, sent his resignation to Washington after he learned that a Formosa glass company in which he had invested $3000 had soon afterward received a United States loan of $30,000 through the ICA. Later the company received another loan.

Ladejinsky, who is still in Saigon, Viet Nam, is much disturbed over the turn of events. He said that about a year ago while in Formosa, a young Formosan friend who once worked for him as an interpreter was selling stock in a modern glass factory. He urged Ladejinsky to invest. Ladejinsky, in what he calls a "moment of mental aberration," agreed.

He gave his friend $3000 in cash to buy the stock.

Some time after his return to Saigon, Ladejinsky was informed that in making the purchase he had laid himself open to two charges:

1. In giving his friend the $3000 he violated the foreign exchange regulations of the Chinese Nationalist Government.

2. As an ICA employe he had a "conflict of interest" because of the loan made to the glass company later by ICA.

By mutual agreement with his superiors, he offered his resignation, understanding it would be accepted when his replacement arrived in Saigon.

The money is to be used for construction of two new elementary schools, purchase of sites for future buildings, and additions to existing school structures.

SALMON RUNNING 4 MONTHS LATE PUZZLE EXPERTS

NANAIMO, B.C., Feb. 4 (AP)—A $3,000,000 sea mystery is baffling scientists and fishermen studying the return of Coho salmon to Vancouver Island waters.

For the first time in history the Coho run failed to reach British Columbia water last fall. Now stream fishermen on both east and west coasts of the island report "badly beaten" Coho are arriving four months late. Their normal spawning season is in October-November.

Where have been, and why? Are two questions to be studied by the Pacific biological station.

Stream fisherman report the gaunt, spongy Coho are responding to their homing instinct with the same fervor displayed by normal spawning runs. The run couldn't occur at a worse time, however. Cold weather has lowered streams and freezing temperatures may destroy the spawn in the exposed gravel beds.

The answer to the puzzle may be worth $3,000,000 — the approximate value of the Coho to the British Columbia salmon industry.

Sirens will be turned on just long enough to determine if they are in proper working order. Volunteer spotters stationed near each device will notify civil defense authorities of any defect.

Communities in St. Louis county that will conduct tests are Glendale, University City, Brentwood, Maplewood and Ladue. In St. Louis the tests have been conducted for the last two years.

in his efforts to untangle foreign problems, he hit hard at Republican policy in general and at Dulles in particular.

"It is hard to find any area of the world," he asserted, "where our situation has not deteriorated in late years. While we have reduced our strength we have enlarged our commitments. While we brag about massive retaliation and atomic intimidation, Russia talks of peace, of trade, of friendship, of economic development and the things the sensitive, suspicious, hungry Asians want to hear."

Kefauver on Gas Bill.

Kefauver, in his speech, attacked the natural gas bill as an example of the "raid" on natural resources by the Republican Administration. He also was highly critical, as in his past speeches, of the Administration's foreign policy. He said that the dynamic policy promised by the President and his aids has turned out to have force upward and downward but never forward.

"We have frightened our allies. Our foreign service around the world is without effective leadership to an alarming degree.

"In many parts of the world we have been placed in the position of defending colonialism rather than as exponents of self-government and democracy. We have lost the leadership in forging a policy which might lead to the brink of peace."

On domestic issues, Kefauver said that another four years of the Eisenhower Administration may lead to the creation of an economic "super-state" beyond the control of the people.

What is needede in Washington, he said is not the present climate so favorable to big business but one that is favorable to the common man. A philosophy of the "even break" for the average man is urgently needed. Above all, he said, the nation needs to return to an appreciation and understanding of the constitutional rights of all Americans.

Cites Hynning's Case.

After detailing the security case of Clifford J. Hynning, who was dismissed as an attorney in the Treasury Department in June 1954 and reinstated after a long fight, Kefauver pointed out that Hynning resigned immediately after he was cleared.

"The Hynning case ended happily," he said. "But what of the other cases which were not publicized? What of the terrible toll of ruined lives exacted by this Administration in the name of security? What of the men and women whose ability to earn a bare living has been callously impaired by irresponsible and reckless disregard of the basic American principle of fair play?"

Stevenson's carefully-phrased talk, billed as the major send-off speech of his 1956 campaign, was interspersed with the wit and sparkle that characterized his campaign four years ago. He said in this connection, that reports of a new solemn Stevenson are greatly exaggerated.

"I have been your leader before and you must be familiar with the merchandise," he said. "It has aged a bit, but it has not changed, in spite of all the stories I hear about the new Stevenson which is shortly to be unveiled."

Refers to Dulles.

As to Dulles, he said that it is true that politics should stop at the water's edge, "but surely that should not prevent us from trying to pull Mr. Dulles back to dry ground."

He said he was referring here to Dulles's "to the brink" interview in Life magazine, in which Dulles took credit for a policy of leading the country to the brink of war three times in order to preserve its principles.

He described this as Dulles's "peculiar talent for rattling the saber and brandishing the atomic bomb—thereby scaring the daylights out of friends and neutrals the world around."

He continued: "If the Eisenhower Administration has to do more bragging, it would be better to boast about the resolute marches to the brink of peace than the brink of war."

Stevenson attacked the "deceptive techniques" of the Republicans, and their "hucksters' arts of salesmanship, misbranding and exaggeration," which he said have enveloped the nation as never before.

"I say to you frankly that I don't intend to take positions in this campaign which would reduce my effectiveness as President—regardless of the cost in votes," he declared. To exploit the nation's real problems by giving pat answers which are forgotten once the election is over, he said, is to cheat the people of their right to an honest understanding of their problems.

The "declaration of Washington" issued by Prime Minister Eden and Dulles was reassuring, he said, but added he hopes it will not be diluted by the "usual conflicting statement" to appease right-wing Republicans.

cans.

The most effective deterrent to aggression, he said, is the unity and the strength of this nation and its friends—the unity to act when necessary and the strength, to take such action as is required by the aggression. This, he asserted, is far more than a question of power politics; it is a question of moral responsibility and, accountability.

Both Men Applauded Often.

The delegates gave Stevenson a four-minute standing ovation when he was introduced by National Committeeman Paul Ziffren as "the man we want to lead us again this year." His talk was interrupted by applause 21 times.

The convention gave Kefauver a rousing welcome also and an even greater ovation after he had finished his talk.

(A New York Times dispatch said Kefauver, the acknowledged underdog made a politically effective speech and was interruped by applause 43 times. But he did not get anything like the welcoming and closing ovations given Stevenson.)

Stevenson, 56 years old tomorrow, cut a 150-pound birthday cake at a reception after the speech. The cake was six feet long, three feet wide and three feet high, with a pastry copy of the national capitol on the top.

From here he will fly to Los Angeles for four more days of campaigning in southern California.

Senator Kefauver will speak in San Francisco tomorrow before flying back to Washington. He canceled the balance of a planned seven-day California speaking trip in order to be present at the Senate vote on the natural gas bill, expected Monday.

RETRIAL OF PAUL H. HUGHES FOR PERJURY CONSIDERED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP) —The Department of Justice is considering another trial for Paul H. Hughes, who was acquitted in New York on two counts of perjury, a spokesman said yesterday.

He pointed out that the United States district court jury which heard the case was unable to reach a decision on four other perjury counts growing out of Hughes's testimony before a grand jury about the activities of prominent Democrats.

He said the department is now "examining the whole record" to determine whether a retrial is warranted. The Government prosecutor in New York had said earlier the Government would not ask for a retrial.

DOWD AID FREED SAFECRACKER TO GET TESTIMONY

Needed Henry Collier as Witness, McMillan Says — His Superior Backs Policy.

A former convict, who admitted he used a blow torch to open a safe for two burglars, will escape prosecution for his part in the crime, Assistant Circuit Attorney Theodore McMillian said yesterday, because he was needed as a material witness against the burglars.

McMillian's action in the case of Henry Collier Sr., Negro, 2935 Franklin avenue, who admitted opening the safe, getting $100 for his trouble and then disposing of the safe, was approved by Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd.

"I refused to issue a warrant against Collier," McMillian said, "because I wanted to use him as a witness against the burglar we had in custody and use him again as a basis for a fugitive warrant we wanted to issue against the burglar who got away."

"I reviewed the facts with McMillian," Dowd said, "and I am satisfied that the procedure he followed was proper."

Asked if he did not think Collier committed a crime, Dowd said it is necessary at times to make a choice among the persons to be prosecuted. It is obvious that McMillian believed he could more certainly get a conviction against the burglars by using Collier as a witness, Dowd added.

The burglar who was arrested was John Nelson Elliott, Negro, 2600 block of North Taylor avenue. He and his accomplice, he told police, stole a safe containing $6000 from the watermelon stand of Sam Zvibleman at 5820 Natural Bridge avenue.

The burglars took it to Collier's garage at 3704 Easton avenue and induced him to open it for them, Collier told police. When they took the money out of it, they left the garage and Collier said he put the safe in his truck and dumped it in an alley at the rear of the 4200 block of Maffitt avenue, where police found it.

Collier, who served a two-year sentence for grand larceny in Arkansas in 1936, was willing to testify against Elliott at his trial last Jan. 20, but Elliott pleaded guilty of two robberies and the safe theft at the same time and was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. His accomplice is still at large.

DISCIPLINED BOY ADMITS SETTING FIRE IN SCHOOL

A 14-year-old boy has admitted setting fire to the principal's office at Chouteau elementary school, 1306 South Ewing avenue, Wednesday night, members of the police arson squad reported yesterday. Damage was estimated at $2500.

The boy, who is being held by juvenile authorities, was recently disciplined by the principal. Police said the youth told them he went to the school about 7 p.m., climbed through an insecure window, emptied the contents of several cabinets on the floor and set them afire.

The blaze was not discovered until shortly before 10 o'clock. Firemen said the fire apparently smoldered for several hours.

NAVY SEEKS 290 RECRUITS IN ST. LOUIS THIS MONTH

A quota of 290 enlistments has been assigned to the St. Louis Navy Recruiting District for the month of February, Lt. Comdr. L. R. Wright, officer in charge, announced yesterday. It is a minimum-requirement quota, he said.

The recruiting office in the Old Federal Building, 815 Building, 815 Olive street, is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Comdr. Wright also said there is a "critical" need for Navy nurses. He said applicants, who must be graduate nurses, may obtain further information from the Navy nurse procurement officer at the Old Federal Building.

DISPERSAL OF U.S. INDUSTRY CALLED SPUR TO PEACE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP)—A civil defense expert claims chances of world peace would improve if 30 per cent of United States industry were dispersed away from large cities.

Maj. Gen. Otto Nelson, recently head of a 13-man committee which surveyed this country's civil defense needs, said if such dispersal action were taken the United States would have an industrial capacity equal to Russia's even if "all our great centers of production and population" were wiped out.

He added that the "sobering realization" that the United States could retaliate with atomic attacks on Russian industrial centers probably would deter them from making any attacks. He spoke before the newly-organized National Advisory Council for rural civil defense.

$10,900 Hotel Room Theft.

ARMY UNIT FILLS QUOTA

The 307th Military Government Group, an Army Reserve unit made up of St. Louis officers and enlisted men, recently became the first reserve unit in Missouri to reach authorized enlisted strength, it was announced yesterday at headquarters of the Missouri Military District.

Recruiting to fill vacancies in the unit began last August when reservists returned from annual summer training at Camp McCoy, Wis. The mission of a military government group is to restore and supervise civilian government in liberated territory.

Only Solution to Jets' Noise Is to Accept It, Twining Says

Problem Called Acute in St. Louis With Voodoo—General Reluctant to Weaken Plane's Performance.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U. S. A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—The noise of high performance jet aircraft "is just something we are going to have to live with," Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Chief of the Air Force, told the jet age conference of the Air Force Association yesterday.

This statement jibes with the consensus of a group of eight military and scientific experts that composed the panel of the noise abatement forum of the conference. The experts were in agreement that not much can be done to diminish noise from supersonic military jet aircraft.

With regard to commercial jet airliners, there was general agreement that by the time they have come into use in 1958 and 1959 the noise problem will have been reduced to a degree such that jet noise on commercial jet aircraft will not be any greater than the noise of present propeller-driven aircraft.

'Loss of Power'

The suppression of jet noise on commercial aircraft can be accomplished with a loss of power of about 1 per cent. Commercial jets will not use after-burners, as do the military.

With after-burners no noise suppression is possible at the present time and, furthermore, military aircraft cannot afford to give up the performance that noise suppression requires.

Although certain measures can reduce noise, such as having engine run-ups take place at isolated portions of air fields or with buildings as baffles, rapid gaining of altitude so as to get the noise out of range quickly, or the use of flight patterns that avoid built up areas, the main problem is not soluble at the present time.

The only solution seen today for military aircraft, according to Twining, "is acceptance." This he calls "the end answer."

'Acute in St. Louis'

The problem is particularly acute in St. Louis at Lambert Field where McDonnell Aircraft Corporation is manufacturing the F-101 Voodoo. This is one of the first places in the United States where it has developed in its acute form. The F-101 is one of the top jet noise-makers being manufactured. This is the result of super-power, weight and super performance.

As aircraft of the 100 series, and the B-52, begin to operate from fields around the country, the problem that is now afflicting the outlying regions of St. Louis will be in evidence around military bases all over the United States.

Scott Field has not yet had to cope with this problem but it will have to in the near future.

The noise from supersonic jets is one and one-half billion times as great as the minimum noise that can be heard by human ears.

Measured in power required to generate noise, a truck uses 10 watts to make its noise, a diesel locomotive 100 watts, a propeller-driven commercial aircraft 1000 watts, present jets 10,000 watts and future jets 100,000 watts.

'Acceptance of Noise'

The panel made the point that people build their homes close to highways and accept the noise of trucks, they live close to rail lines and accept the diesel noise and, that if they want to build close to airports, they will have to learn to accept jet noise.

Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commander of the Continental Air Defense Command, spoke of the problem in terms of location of air bases. He said that new air bases will be built at least 15 miles from communities. But even now, 18 of his units, one-third of the total, are using civil airports.

"If various communities had their way," he declared, "the Air Force would immediately have to start spending three billion dollars for construction of new bases to house units which are faced with removal pleas and petitions."

And unfortunately, he added, "such is the way of the real estate operator, or subdivider we have encountered, any such removal is only momentary as he begins to cut up the land adjacent to the base into lots and starts selling them to householders who will become newer champions of eviction in time."

Air Force Defense.

"We have found," he continued, "that many of our commanders have to prepare defenses for the Air Force on the platform in almost equal ratio to the amount of time they give to preparations they give to defend America from attack. Personally, I'd feel safer if he spent all his time on the latter."

Twining speaking on the same topic said: "We cannot even get enough base money to properly prepare existing bases to accommodate our modern, high performance aircraft. You can imagine how much it would cost to build all new bases away from population centers."

Among Twining's suggestions for learning to live with noise, was the designing of soundproof homes where noise is a serious problem or that communities grow away from centers of air activity.

The effect on nearby communities is nothing compared to the effect on workers on the bases. When noise exceeds 140 decibels, according to experts on the noise abatement panel, pain is experienced, people become frightened, and try to get away.

Ear Plug Protection.

New jets coming into use will exceed 140 decibels. Men working on the line are protected by ear plugs and other measures. Men working in buildings on the air base have to communicate and are worse off than those on the line. When a jet run-up is going on they cannot talk to each other no matter how hard they yell. This problem has effected employment, since some men will quit rather than endure the noise. The experts were inclined to think that their first problem was to protect the men near the noise and that the community problem was secondary.

One problem with jet noise is that there is nothing like it in nature. This makes acceptance harder. Twining said that "so far the public has objected to noise primarily as a nuisance, not a hazard. I believe we shall be able to keep it from becoming hazardous."

The attack on the noise problem is only recent. It was only five years ago that the first theory of sound developed from turbulence was propounded. The noise from a jet is made, not inside, but from two three feet behind the exhaust to 20 feet back. The fact that the physics of the noise has been determined gives some hope that solutions will be reached ultimately.

Experiments on animals have shown that noise will not change or damage the body or the ear, nor cause functional disturbances. This is not much help when the baby cries from the noise and a child is terrified.

On the other hand the violence of the sound waves does damage aircraft structure. As a result it has been necessary to beef up structure subject to noise. There is a possibility that the weight of noise suppressors will not be greater than the extra weight needed to strenghten structures that may be affected.

SCHOOL AGE REQUIREMENTS

Age requirements for entrance in the kindergarten and first grade classes of University City public schools will be raised in September 1957, Superintendent Robert S. Gilchrist announced yesterday. He said the district's Board of Education approved the action last week at a regular board meeting.

The new entrance level will require a child entering kindergarten in September to be at least five years old by Sept. 15 in the year in which he enters. A child entering first grade must be 6 by Sept. 15 in the year he enters. Previously children entering had until the following Jan. 1 to reach minimum age requirements, Gilchrist said.

U.S. NO LONGER DEPENDENT ON CHINA'S BRISTLES

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Hog bristles from China, offered by the Red Chinese to induce an easing of trade curbs against it, are no longer needed for defense purposes here.

Officials said today some 2,000,000 pounds of the bristles will soon be sold from the stockpile. Additional quantities of the stockpiled items will be released for sale at intervals so as not to disturb commercial markets.

For generations China has had a monopoly of the bristles which were used in paint brushes because they made paint flow evenly. They were so scarce here during the last war that the Government sequestered available supplies for use by the armed services and in war production factories.

Since then, however, the use of nylon and other substitutes has progressed to the point where satisfactory brushes can now be made from products produced domestically.

HOSPITAL TO OPEN NEW UNIT

The new surgical division of St. Luke's Hospital will be opened for service tomorrow, it was announced yesterday. The division is on the fourth floor of the new $2,000,000 Fowler Memorial Wing.

Facilities to be opened include six rooms for general surgery, a fracture room, a room for ear, nose and throat cases, one of two cystoscopic room, a recovery room and quarters for the central sterile supply department. Other facilities will be opened later in the year.

NIXON REMAINS MUM ON TRUMAN 'FIGHTING' TALK

Refuses to Comment on Charge He Called Ex-President 'Traitor' in 1954 Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP) —Vice President Richard M. Nixon returned from a South American mission today to find himself a central figure of a bitter political controversy harking back to the 1954 congressional elections.

Nixon snapped a crisp "No comment" when reporters asked him what he thought of former President Harry S. Truman's remark that he (Truman) gets fighting mad when he recalls that Nixon branded him a "traitor" during the 1954 campaign.

Reporters asked Nixon about Truman's statement when the Vice President arrived from Rio de Janeiro where he attended the inauguration of Brazil's new President, Juscelino Kubitschek.

Nixon cut off the questioning with this terse reply: "I have no comment on anything Mr. Truman said."

Truman, Speaker Sam Rayburn, and other long-time leaders of the Democratic party claim Nixon and some other Republicans impugned their patriotism, honor, and loyalty during his political speeches in 1954.

'20 Years of Treason.'

Some Republicans charged the Democrats with "20 years of treason" during that campaign. The Republican National Committee has insisted that a check of Nixon's speeches shows he never called Truman a traitor.

Nixon has adopted a strategy of remaining aloof from political battles until President Eisenhower reveals whether he will seek re-election. Mr. Eisenhower has hinted that if he runs, he will want Nixon as his running mate again. If the President decides not to seek a second term, Nixon is expected to contend for the nomination.

For this reason, Nixon's close supporters are carrying out a quiet campaign to keep him in the non-political limelight with a more strenuous schedule of speeches and personal appearances. The Latin American mission was not designed for that purpose but fitted into the pattern nevertheless.

'Major Target' for Reds.

Nixon, who talked to reporters in a freezing rain at National Airport, said Brazil is "a major target" for Communist infiltration but its leaders are "aware of the danger" and "will take appropriate steps."

Since Nixon was fresh from the Brazilian inauguration, reporters asked him what role he might play in the next United States inaugural. He said it would be improper to comment on this until Mr. Eisenhower announces his plans. Nixon said also it would be improper for him to comment at this time on the exchange of correspondence between President Eisenhower and Russian Premier Bulganin. He added, however, that he had been kept advised of the developments.

A reporter asked the Vice President if he thought the Communist influence in Brazil was "over-emphasized." He replied that his three-day visit did not make him an expert. But "Brazil is a major target for the Communists along with the balance of Latin America."

Hall Defends Nixon; Sparkman Backs Up Truman.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP) —Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall today challenged former President Harry S. Truman to show when or where Vice President Richard M. Nixon called Truman a traitor.

Hall released a series of excerpts from Nixon's 1952 and 1954 political campaign speeches which he said did not disclose "any instance whatever in which the Vice President ever called Mr. Truman traitor or referred to the Democratic party as the party of treason."

Truman, in Boston to address a Massachusetts Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, told reporters Nixon made the traitor charge "all over the West." Asked to be more specific, he said:

"I am not going to get into an argument of that sort. That's as far as I'm going. I don't mean to be short with you. But that's the truth."

Senator John J. Sparkman (Dem.), Alabama, the 1952 Democratic vice presidential nominee, said that Hall may be technically correct in claiming that Nixon never actually labelled Truman as a "traitor."

"A lot can be said by implication that may not actually be put into words," Sparkman told a reporter. "The clear implication of Nixon, (former Gov. Thomas E.) Dewey and other Republicans in many speeches was that the Democratic party was a party of treason and Democrats were people who coddled Communists."

Sparkman said that as an example Nixon said in Butte, Mont., on Oct. 22, 1954 that "the Communist party is determined to conduct its program within the Democratic party."

"I don't think anybody can deny the clear implication of that statement was that the Democrats were consorting with Communists," he said.

Hall's compilation of excerpts did not include the Butte quote. Those cited by Hall generally took the tack that Nixon was not questioning the loyalty of Truman or Adlai E. Stevenson but felt that their judgment was "shockingly bad."

SUSMAN'S
1114 North Market — St. Louis, Missouri — Saturday, Jan. 28, 1956

Dear Neighbor:

Less than a decade ago there sprang up all over America, a group of stores doing business on a revolutionary new merchandising principle. They located tremendous showrooms in low rental areas . . . by-passed the trimmings of window displays, carpeted floors, fancy fixtures, and the like . . . and sold their merchandise at lower than retail list prices on a volume basis.

Five years ago, we at Susman's opened such a store here in St. Louis. We converted much of our huge warehouse space at 1114 North Market to showrooms and the people began pouring in.

In appreciation of this patronage which mushroomed our business into a tremendous savings center for all St. Louis, we are holding our 5th Anniversary Sale. Here are examples of some of the values you'll find at Susman's. We cordially invite you and your friends to visit us. No discount card needed. Our low prices are plainly marked. Come in and find out what it means to "Save at Susman's."

Cordially yours,
J. Susman

JOE BATES, CHANDLER MAN, WILL OPPOSE CLEMENTS

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 4 (UP)—Former United States Representative Joe B. Bates, a member of the A. B. Chandler faction of Kentucky Democrats, said today he would oppose incumbent United States Senator Earle C. Clements (Dem.), Kentucky, for the Senate nomination this year.

Bates made his announcement in the face of strong indications that Gov. Chandler's political advisers are skeptical of his chances against the assistant majority floor leader of the Senate.

Chandler, in a heated primary campaign last summer, said it was one of his objectives to unseat Clements. Clements gave nominal support to Chandler in the November election, but the breach still exists.

RIVER GROUP PLANS $40,000 STATUE

It Would Be Erected Near Portage des Sioux — 50 Back Project.

Plans to erect a 25-foot cast-aluminum statue, "Notre Dame des Rivieres" (Our Lady of the Rivers), near Portage des Sioux, St. Charles county, at a cost exceeding $40,000, are being made by a group of St. Louis boating enthusiasts and businessmen headed by Dan O. Layton, insurance executive, it was learned yesterday.

Frederick C. Shrady, Ridgefield (Conn.) sculptor, painter and art-glass window designer, recently spent a week here studying possible sites near Alton Lake, all within a few miles of spots where three rivers meet—the Illinois, Missouri and Mississippi. At two meetings he described how he would execute the commission if he should obtain it.

Present plans call for the brightly gleaming statue to be mounted on 15-foot pedestal, illuminated at night, and to be visible from highways and from the main channel of the Mississippi river for several miles upstream and down.

Layton is president of the group seeking funds to fulfill the plan, it was announced last night by Dr. H. W. Trovillion, retired dentist of Alton.

Trovillion, who has been elected vice president, is vice chairman of the Illinois commission of the Mississippi River Scenic Highway Planning Commission and an officer of the 10-state commission. He estimated 50 men so far have signified they will work in behalf of the project.

"This should become a national shrine and would be a fitting landmark for a famous inland waterway," Dr. Trovillion said.

The original idea for the statue came from the Rev. Edward B. Schlattman, St. Francis Rectory, Portage des Sioux.

"But I had in mind only a modest, six-foot mail-order job when I first thought of a Blessed Virgin statue to protect the community from floods and drownings after the disastrous floods of 1951," he said. "How the idea has snowballed since then!"

In interpreting the theme of divine protection, Shrady said, he will adapt the statue to its site. His preliminary sketch makes use of drapery folds influenced by the rhythm of waves of the river. He plans to have the casting done in Milan, Italy.

Shrady, 48 years old, was converted to Catholicism by Bishop Fulton Sheen. Father Schlattman first learned of Shrady's life and work through an article in a Catholic magazine.

Shrady was born in New York, studied at England's Oxford University, at the Art Students League, New York, and in Paris and Florence. He taught painting and drawing in Paris from 1935 to 1939 and has won numerous awards.

He has completed major commissions in New England, the Middle Atlantic States and Washington, D. C. His paintings are in European museums and cathedrals, and he has had one-man shows in New York, Dublin, London and other cities.

U.S. BUSINESS MAN CALLED TO HELP TURKISH ECONOMY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—An American business man, Clarence B. Randall, has been called to Turkey to try to help that country out of a long siege of economic sickness.

His arrival at Ankara last Wednesday was greeted with high hope by President Celal Bayar and Prime Minister Adnan Menderes, but the Turkish press expressed disappointment at his declaration that "I bring no blank checks."

Turkey has looked to the United States for financial help ever since 1947 when then-President Truman inaugurated Greek-Turkish aid. Economic assistance to Turkey in the fiscal year ending in June totals $100,000,000 and military aid, a secret, comes to much more.

Randall, although he has served as an adviser to the United States Government on foreign economic matters, has no Government function. He is president of the board of Inland Steel Corp. He went to Turkey at the joint request of the United States and Turkish governments.

With Randall went Forest D. Siefkin, a Chicago lawyer, and Dr. C. Edward Galbreath, an economist from Washington.

MARINES' SECRET OF SUCCESS? IT'S 'IT,' SAYS SENATOR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Senator Leverett Saltonstall (Rep.), Massachusetts offered an explanation last night of why the Marine Corps fares so well in Congress—the Marines have "it."

"The Marines are to Congress what a lovely lady is to a young man," Saltonstall said in a radio interview on the CBS capitol cloakroom program. "They have got—what do you call it?"

Interviewer George Herman: "They have got 'it?'"

Saltonstall: "So they've got 'it,' yes."

One dictionary definition of "it" is "personal magnetism, charm." When Saltonstall used his lovely lady comparison, he probably was thinking of "it" as exemplified by Clara Bow, the "it girl." Note to young Marines: If you don't know who Clara Bow was, ask your father.

HELICOPTER MAIL SERVICE HERE URGED BY KARSTEN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Helicopter service for mail between Lambert-St. Louis Field and a proposed new post office building in downtown St. Louis was proposed today by Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.) of St. Louis.

In a letter to Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield he pointed to the advantages of such a service. In recently announced plans for the building, at Sixteenth and Walnut streets, helicopter service was contemplated.

In recent years five applications to operate helicopters in the St. Louis area have been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

$2712 REPORTED STOLEN AT MURRAY DANCE STUDIO

About $2712 in currency was stolen by burglars from the Arthur Murray Dance Studio at 316 North Sixth street, Mehdi Araghi, an assistant manager, reported to police yesterday.

Araghi said he found the front door of the fourth-floor studio unlocked when he arrived. Three drawers of an office cabinet had been pried open and the money and a $1000 check were missing.

Police reported there was no indication of forced entry to the building, which is locked up at night, or to the Arthur Murray office.

ROBBED OF $2800 BY TWO AFTER MARKET OPENS

Owner of Store at 3720 Olive Says Money Was Intended for Cashing Checks.

Louis Bogus was held up in his Compton-Olive Market, 3720 Olive street, yesterday by two men who fled with $2800, he reported to police.

Bogus, who lives at 7512 Cromwell drive, Clayton, said the robbers, Negroes, entered the store shortly after he opened for business at 7 a.m. One covered Bogus with a revolver.

"Keep quiet, this is a hold-up," the armed man said. The second robber took the money from a cash register, and he and his companion ran out and fled north in Spring avenue.

Bogus said he had the money on hand to cash checks for customers.

Ralph Green, a used car buyer from Atlanta, Ga., reported that he was robbed of $2440 early yesterday by three men posing as police officers, who forced his automobile to the curb at Seventh and Cerre streets.

Green appeared at Central District at 3 a.m. and said he had been "riding around" a short time earlier when the men, in civilian clothing, forced him to the curb and told him he had violated an electric signal at Chouteau avenue. One man got out, drew a revolver and took the money from a money belt and his wallet, Green said. The robbers then drove north in Seventh street.

Alvin Levy, a partner in the Holtzman Clothing and Furniture Co., 4472 Easton avenue, was robbed of $100 by three men yesterday when making payment collections in the 1100 block of North Thirteenth street. Levy said the men, all Negroes, accosted him when he was in a passageway between two buildings. One of the men was armed with a knife, he told police. Levy lives at 3 Bon Hills drive, Olivette.

Gas Bill Pressure Groups Dodging Lobby Law Provisions

Congressional Quarterly Reports Only Two Organizations Active in Fight Have Reported Expenditures.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Most pressure groups both for and against the controversial natural gas bill have dodged the federal lobbying law, a Congressional Quarterly survey showed today.

"Most of the leading pressure groups in the fight have successfully avoided the spotlight of publicity the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act was supposed to turn on them," the non-partisan reference service concluded.

The report appeared, coincidentally, just as Senate leaders announced plans for a special committee to investigate a $2500 campaign contribution which Senator Francis Case (Rep.), South Dakota, said he believed he had been offered to influence him to vote for the bill.

The two-year fight over the Harris-Fulbright bill to exempt natural gas production from direct federal regulation has produced charges that both sides were using giant "slush funds" to sway congressional opinion.

Small Potatoes.

"But, as far as the official record shows, the gas bill lobbies are small potatoes—a mere 2 per cent of the reported total spending by lobbies for 1955," Congressional Quarterly said. "Only two of the five organizations formed specifically to fight for or against the bill have even reported their expenditures under the lobby regulation law."

Those were the pro-exemption General Gas Committee, which reported it spent $87,709 in 1955, and the anti-exemption Council of Local Gas Companies, formed last Nov. 25, which said it spent $6561 before the end of the year.

One pro-exemption group, the Joint Committee of Consumers and Small Gas Producers, registered as a lobby only Jan. 6 and is not required to report its spending until April 10.

One of those that has not registered is the pro-exemption Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee, formed in October 1954. It hired the New York public relations firm of Hill & Knowlton, which also was active in promoting the now-defunct Dixon-Yates contract, to publicize the industry and "inform the public on the merits of a free — — — industry operating in a competitive economy."

Congressional Quarterly asked if the program included lobbying, but it quoted a committee spokesman as saying he saw "no cause to answer such a question."

Mayors' Committee.

The Mayors' Committee on Natural Gas, formed in 1955, claims to represent 263 municipal executives opposed to the natural gas bill. It never has registered under the lobby regulation act, although its members have sought to influence congressional opinion.

William R. Peer, executive assistant to Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York, head of the mayors' committee, said the civic officials had received no pay for their efforts and were acting on behalf of their respective cities. He said he believed they were not required to register as lobbyists.

Official records show nothing about spanding by two older groups that have evinced a special interest in the natural gas fight. One of these, the Texas Independent Proucers and Royalty Owners Association, formed nine years ago with headquarters at Austin, Tex., is registered under the lobby law and is backing the Harris-Fulbright bill. But as of Jan. 31, 21 days after the legal deadline, it had not reported its 1955 spending.

Municipal Association.

The other, opposing the gas bill, is in the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, an association claiming to represent 960 cities. In 1955 and again this year it has urged its members to conduct a letter-writing campaign against the measure. The organization is not registered as a lobby. A spokesman said it considered itself exempt from the lobby law because its membership is based on political subdivisions of the states.

The survey turned up many other organizations that have not registered or reported their spending as required by the lobby law. Leading groups in 1955 congressional battles over reciprocal trade, the highway program, power projects, minimum wages, housing and sugar quotas are missing from the official register.

The Supreme Court ruled, in the 1954 case of United States vs. Harriss, that the lobby regulation act applied to persons or groups which solicited, collected or received contributions and had as a main purpose the influencing of legislation by direct communication with Congressmen.

ELECTED TO UNION OFFICE

Joseph W. McGonigal, assistant director of the St. Louis regional office of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, has been elected general vice president of the union and will have his headquarters at Boston, it was announced yesterday by John J. Mara, president, who was here for a series of meetings.

McGonigal succeeds Frank W. Anderson, who retired. Ben Berk, regional director here, was elected to take McGonigal's place as a member of the general executive board, which voted these changes.

U. S. INTERESTED IN SATELLITE FOR GLOBAL WATCH

Air Force "is superior to that of any other nation."

He told of new bombers, supersonic fighters and missiles going into service. He added that "we have good reason to expect that the air power I have described will continue to be an effective deterrent" to aggression.

Earlier, Maj. Gen. Kenneth P. Bergquist, Air Force operations director, warned that near-collisions among airborne planes are on the increase. He urged that automation be used to solve the critical air traffic control problem.

He said policing the congested skyways has "surpassed" human capabilities. "Like air defense," he said, "air traffic control must look to automation."

Bergquist said "near-miss incidents are occurring with increasing regularity." He added that modern planes require the pilot to follow cockpit instruments so closely that he may not even be looking out when an air collision is imminent.

Flight safety foundation director Jerome Lederer said "the principle of 'see and be seen' to avoid collisions is a false hope" in the era of 600-mile-an-hour aircraft. But, he added, aviation is on the way to becoming "the safest form of transportation."

It carried 42,000,000 passengers in 1955 and suffered only 197 fatalities.

Both Bergquist and Lederer suggested the new air defense system, SAGE (semi-automatic ground environment system), be used for traffic control. SAGE automatically locates, identifies and guides interceptors toward invading planes.

UNINVITED SOVIET EXPERT ATTENDS JET CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—A Russian air expert looked in on the Air Force Association's jet age conference here without any of the conference participants being aware of his presence.

Apparently the only persons who recognized Russian Maj. V. V. Kolentsev were a few reporters who had met him at other aviation affairs. Kolentsev is an assistant air attache at the Soviet embassy.

When a reporter asked A.F.A. executive director James Straubel the identity of the Russian officer he had encountered at the conference, Straubel said he knew of no invitations having been issued to any representatives of Iron Curtain countries. He added that the association had no objection to their attendance, since the conference dealt only with non-secret problems.

All persons attending the conference were supposed to register and wear their registration badge. Kolentsev was wearing a conference badge. A search of the registration cards showed that he had registered as a major with a Washington street address, but had left blank the section in which his affiliation was supposed to have been written.

FBI Questions Senator About Reported Offer

to influence the vote on a pending issue" and that "an allegation of such weight must be tracked down to the very end."

Calls Case Report Unclear.

"The facts as reported by Senator Case are not clear," Johnson said. "He has told us that a man who had reason to believe that Senator Case would vote for the natural gas bill left a campaign contribution of $2500 with a friend in South Dakota. The contribution was rejected.

"However, there are a number of unanswered questions. Senator Case says he has never seen the man. Senator Case says no strings were attached to the contribution. Senator Case says he would probably have voted for the bill anyway in line with the overwhelming sentiment of the people of his state.

"Senator Case says that his deduction that the man who left the money was interested in passage of the bill was based upon a vague recollection of a lady clerk and upon a letter from a third party in South Dakota inquiring about Senator Case's position on the bill."

11 Requests Unanswered.

Thus far, Johnson continued, Case has refused to reveal the name of the man who left the money in South Dakota" even though that information was requested on the floor of the Senate yesterday 11 times."

Johnson said he was making no prejudgment of the facts. He added, however, that "we believe the man's name should be made public and, if attempted bribery was involved, the case should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

In a rather pointed reference to Case he observed that "if a man is going to be a white knight he's got to put the bee on somebody and that fellow has got to go to jail."

Reflects on Senate.

Johnson said that the inference raised in the Case report on the contribution reflects upon the integrity of the Senate itself and that "unless the issue is resolved it will haunt the Senate for years to come, beclouding the outcome of any vote."

"No allegation has been made that any Senator has acted improperly," he added. "But it must be made clear to any misguided individual that the United States Senate is not susceptible to improper influence."

The select committee, Johnson said, will be granted the full power of subpena "and every power necessary to place every relevant fact upon the public record."

Johnson said he would seek unanimous consent at the outset of Monday's session of the Senate for setting up the committee. If there is objection, he said he then would proceed to call for the vote on the gas bill, and, when that is completed, move for action on the committee resolution again. Such a motion would require only a majority vote for approval.

Johnson added that he could conceive of no Senator objecting to getting all the facts in the case.

No Link to Oil Interests.

Johnson disclosed that last night in a cloakroom conference with Democratic and Republican Senate leaders, Case replied in the negative when asked if he had any evidence that the $2500 contribution was "oil money."

Johnson indicated that the only way the investigation could be avoided would be for Case virtually to disclaim any allegation of impropriety in the contribution.

Both Johnson and Senator J. William Fulbright (Dem.), Arkansas, who is Senate sponsor of the natural gas bill, criticized Case for not having made his disclosure until "the last minute" of the three-week debate on the measure.

Both Johnson and Fulbright pointed out that Case was aware of the source of the contribution several days ago and, had it not been his intention to influence votes with his last-minute report, he would have told the Senate of the incident earlier or would have waited until after the vote was taken.

Asked About Co-operation.

Asked today if he would co-operate with the select committee in its investigation, Case replied:

"That question should not be asked of me. I was a member of the select committee which recommended the censure of Senator McCarthy, and the first count of the recommendation was failure to co-operate with a Senate committee."

McCarthy in 1954 was censured for, among other things, refusing to co-operate with a Senate elections subcommittee headed by Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr., Missouri Democrat, in its investigation of a Maryland senatorial election.

Explaining hi refusal to name the man who made the contribution to his campaign fund, Case said that he was unwilling to do so "because I was not presenting the case as a bribe attempt because I had no contact with the man.

"Other people are putting a more sinister interpretation on this than I have," Case said. "I never have called it a bribe."

Fulbright Remark.

Fulbright told reporters that Case "can't resist the select committee."

"Maybe he can't be forced to tell who contributed the money, but if he expects to stay in public life he'd better," he said.

Fulbright denounced Case's report as "inexcusable," describing it as the "sort of thing done in the last minute of political campaigns when there is not time left to get the facts out.

(Case told the Associated Press, "I announced my decision at the earliest time it could have been announced." He said he had spent much time determining the identity of the donor and the circumstances of the gift.)

Fulbright said Case obviously disclosed the contribution to influence the vote in the Senate on the gas bill, but, he added rather acidly, "The effect is going to be quite different than what Senator Case intended."

There has been speculation in some quarters that the Case bombshell might blow the gas bill out of the Senate, but Fulbright said that "the public might be impressed by the charges but the effect in the Senate will be the opposite."

Some Senators, he said, who may have been against the bill now may vote for it because of resentment against a fellow member implying that any Senator might be influenced by considerations other than the merit of the legislation before them.

"We'll gain more than we will lose," Fulbright said.

Asked Reason for Rush.

He was questioned as to why the vote should be rushed through on Monday without waiting for the outcome of the investigation of Case's charges.

Fulbright replied that the fact that there might possibly be a few "outlaws" in the oil industry who might put up money to try to influence the vote had nothing to do with the merits of the bill and that the vote should be determined by the merits alone.

Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.) Missouri, an opponent of the bill, said in a statement the measure should be sent back to committee Monday pending "a thorough investigation of the oil cartel." He said he did not think it should be considered again until the Senate has passed an election reform measure.

From what he knows, Hennings said: "It apears to me that no bribe was intended." But he contended the entire problem of campaign contributions by wealthy special interest groups need study.

The principal obstacles in the way of the bill, at the moment, are several amendments which will be called up for vote Monday. Should one of these amendments be adopted, the bill will in all likelihood be returned to a Senate-House conference and from there find its way back to the House floor.

Backers of the bill concede privately that if the measure ever gets back into the House, it will be killed off.

The natural gas bill, passed by the House in a close vote last year, would remove independent natural gas producers from federal price regulations. Johnson has been a principal backer of the bill.

German War Crimes Issue Kept Out of U.S. Domestic Politics

State Department Recalls Member of Board Rather Than Make Stand Against Protests.

By DAVID M. NICHOL

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1956.

BONN, Feb. 4—The long shadow of the American elections has extended already to such an unlikely field as the future of a group of German war criminals.

Rather than make a stand against the protests of veterans' groups and two or three Senators, the State Department has recalled Edwin L. Plitt, the United States member of the "mixed board" which deals with clemency and paroles for Germans sentenced in war crimes proceedings during the occupation.

Plitt, who has the rank of minister and has served in the department since 1921, has been appointed a foreign service inspector in Washington. He will be succeeded on the board by Robert W. Upton, a New Hampshire lawyer, who served briefly in the United States Senate in 1953-54.

"The department believes," said the official announcement in Washington, "that the presence on the board of an American member who has no other present connection with the United States Government will remove any misunderstanding of the board's position and that of its members."

Protests in November.

This idea does not seem to have occurred until the protests began last November, although the board and its predecessor have been in existence and functioning since 1953.

The row was touched off with the announcement that Sepp Dietrich, one-time Hitler bodyguard and commander of the Sixth SS Panzer Army, had been released on parole from his 25-year sentence. The mixed board, composed of one representative from each of the three Western powers and three German members, had recommended the action.

It was soldiers of Dietrich's army who committed the Malmedy massacres, the murder of disarmed United States prisoners during the savage fighting of the Battle of the Bulge in December 1944. Seventy-one American bodies were found at the Malmedy crossroads in southern Belgium and about an equal number are believed to have been murdered in 11 similar "incidents" in the same area.

United States veterans' groups are understandably interested.

The mixed board's proceedings are secret, but the United States Army headquarters in Heidelberg in announcing Dietrich's release pointed out that it was required by treaty to act on the board's "unanimous recommendation." Obviously Plitt had voted for Dietrich's release.

Little Washington Action.

Plitt's subsequent pillorying seems, however, to be both unfortunate and unfair. In a non-election year he would have been defended. As it is, Washington has made almost no effort to explain the problem or the issues that are involved.

For one thing Plitt is not the only American who has voted for Dietrich's release. The mixed board came into being only last August. It was preceded by interim boards, one in each of the three Western zones and each composed of five members, three from the occupying power and two German nominees.

Dietrich had been eligible for parole since Sept. 7, 1953. On three occasions since then the interim board which included three Americans, one of whom was Plitt, voted unanimously for Dietrich's release. Two of the board members at different times were United States generals on retired or inactive status who joined in the recommendation.

The United States Army, however, has burned its fingers on the Malmedy case on so many previous occasions that it took no action. Until German sovereignty was restored last May, the Army commander was not bound even by a unanimous recommendation.

Can't Go Into Evidence.

The boards in their reviews of these cases have no authority to go into the evidence on which the men were sentenced. Release is a question of whether a minimum term has been served, according to American prison practice, of the prisoner's health and attitude and, in the case of United States prisoners, of his readiness to agree to a strict parole regimen.

Neither the British nor the French have any parole requirements. Their prisoners, when they are released, go completely free. If the United States sticks to its parole system, it will have to maintain parole officers in Germany for another 25 years.

The mixed board and its predecessors were set up to provide an orderly method of liquidating the problem of war crimes prisoners, one of the last traces of the occupation which the United States has been so eager as a matter of official policy to end.

Adenauer Raises Question.

Among others, Chancellor Adenauer has raised the question in talks with President Eisenhower. Some Germans, he is understood to have told the President, are reluctant to volunteer for the new army so long as former officers and soldiers remain in jail.

The United States, with about 40 prisoners still in Landsberg, alone of the Western powers has fighting troops under detention. The British have only 14 prisoners, most of whom were concentration camp guards. Sentences even of these have been steadily reduced until the longest now in existence is 20 years with time off for good behavior.

The Malmedy trial itself has been the subject of at least three high-level army inquiries.

Seventy-three persons were tried initially before a United States military commission that sat at Dachau. All were found guilty. Forty-three were sentenced to death, including S.S. Col. Joachim Peiper, who commanded the "Combat Group Peiper" whose members were involved directly in the massacres.

13 Convictions Voided.

In a subsequent review 13 of the convictions, including three death sentences, were set aside entirely. Twenty-eight of the death penalties were commuted to life and only 12 were confirmed. Six more death sentences were commuted to life in 1949 after charges of irregularity in the trial and the pretrial investigation were aired.

In the end none of the Malmedy prisoners was executed. The Army refuses to identify the prisoners it still holds, but Peiper is understood to be among them.

Even in the heated atmosphere of 1946 Dietrich never was among those sentenced to be executed. He was never connected directly with the commission of any of the crimes listed in the indictment.

Dietrich was sentenced originally to life. In 1951 in the course of a general review of the cases of war criminals in United States hands this was reduced to 25 years.

New Bases in Antarctic Signify Opening of Continent, Byrd Says

'This Expedition Showed It Can Be Done,' Asserts Explorer on Way Back to U.S.

By SAUL PETT

ABOARD THE U.S.S. ARNEB IN THE ROSS SEA, Feb. 4 (AP)—Operation Deep Freeze began to evacuate from the Antarctic today, leaving behind two nearly completed bases.

With Adm. Richard E. Byrd aboard, the Arneb steamed north through McMurdo sound out into the Ross Sea behind the ice breaker Edisto.

Left behind were 76 men to winter over at Little America and 90 at McMurdo.

The veteran explorer who is returning from his fifth Antarctic expedition, said the building of bases at Little America and McMurdo sound in the past two months holds great significance.

"I think this represents the opening of a continent," he said. "I think that from now on there will be permanent bases down here. This expedition showed it can be done."

The Edisto will shepherd the Arneb through the ice pack, then turn back to survey ice landing field possibilities at Cape Adare for next fall's air operations.

While the Arneb heads home by way of New Zealand, Australia, Italy and Spain, the Edisto will return to McMurdo to assist in buttoning up the first phase of Deep Freeze.

The ice breaker Glacier and cargo ship Greenville Victory are scheduled to head north from McMurdo sound on Monday. The latter will continue on to the United States while the ice breaker will return from New Zealand with a fuel barge which will be frozen into the ice at McMurdo.

Starting Feb. 29, the Glacier will sail around the Knox and Weddell sea coasts to survey future base sights. Then it will head for the United States via the east coast of South America.

The Edisto will leave McMurdo Feb. 22 and head for the United States along South America's West Coast.

Meanwhile, the icebreaker Eastwind will leave McMurdo Feb. 29, drop the last mail at Little America, then head up the west coast of South America to the United States.

The oil tanker Nespelen will leave McMurdo Feb. 29 and return home by way of New Zealand.

SOIL BANK PLAN IS APPROVED BY SENATE GROUP

Committee Tentatively Votes 8 to 7 to Restore Rigid Price Supports.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Senate Agriculture Committee tonight approved the Administration's billion dollar soil bank program but tacked on amendments certain to cause a political battle in the Senate later.

The committee, in an unusual night session, tentatively approved by a tight 8-7 vote a directive to restore rigid mandatory price supports on cotton, wheat, corn, rice and peanuts.

This would sink the flexible and lower price supports which President Eisenhower won from Congress in 1954 after a long battle.

That year, the Senate reversed a similar 8-7 vote for rigid supports but this time Senator Ellender (Dem.), Louisiana, said "We are in better shape."

Senator Aiken (Rep.) Vermont, who led the successful 1954 fight for flexible controls, said the same battle will be fought out again this election year.

"I doubt that many decisions reached today will stand as final," he added.

In an earlier session, the group added $10,000,000 to free milk funds for use in school lunches before July 1 and $2,000,000 in the same period for eradication of brucellossis, a cattle disease.

Congress provided $50,000,000 for free milk in the current fiscal year which ends June 30. This fund would be boosted $10,000,000 for use before July 1 while $75,000,000 would be provided in each of the next two fiscal years.

A $15,000,000 fund for combatting brucellossis in the current year would be increased $2,000,000 while funds for the next two years would be increased to $20,000,000.

Live Stock Exchanges Ask U.S. to Buy Cattle.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 4 (UP)—Officials of seven major livestock exchanges urged Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson to inaugurate a Government buying program of 20,000 heavy beef cattle a week for eight weeks.

A telegram was sent yesterday by the River Markets Livestock Group, composed of representatives from Missouri, Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska and Colorado livestock exchanges.

The telegram emphasized they were not asking for Government price supports of any kind, but for the Government to purchase heavy beef for the Army and other federal agencies.

Copies of the telegram were sent to Senators and Representatives from the five states. Exchanges represented were St. Louis, St. Joseph, Omaha, Sioux City, Kansas City and Denver.

Film Star to Seek Divorce.

TOKYO, Feb. 4 (AP)—Japanese movie actress Shirley Yamaguchi, star of the United States-made film "House of Bamboo," said today she plans to divorce her American-born sculptor husband, Isamu Noguchi. She blamed "almost constant separation, caused by our separate careers." They were married in Tokyo in December 1951.

RED CHINA ASKS FOR FULL-DRESS INDOCHINA TALKS

Proposal to Britain and Russia Would Put Chou and Dulles at Same Table.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Red China has formally proposed to Britain and Russia the calling of a full-dress conference on Indochina. This would bring Premier Chou En-lai and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles to the same conference table.

The Chinese proposition was discussed at the Eisenhower-Eden conference here earlier this week and it is understood that British officials agreed with United States officials to oppose it.

The proposal was made to Britain and Russia as co-chairmen of the Geneva conference on Korea and Indochina which was held in the spring and summer of 1954. It was at that conference that the Indochinese state of Viet Nam was divided between Communist and anti-Communist groups after the French government decided it had to end the long Indochina war.

The agreement provided for consultation on elections to be held throughout Viet Nam, both the free and Communist sections, in mid-1956. The consultations were supposed to begin last year. So far the parties have not met.

Officials here believe the Chinese Communists have seized on this situation to try to get a high-level far eastern conference going. The officials say the Reds appear to be seeking every means of building up their prestige and that a Chou-Dulles meeting is one of the devices they are trying to employ.

The kind of conference they are now suggesting would include a number of nations. Nine countries participated in the 1954 Geneva conference. They are the United States, Britain, France, Russia, Red China, Cambodia, Viet Nam, Vietminh and Laos. Red China has proposed that if this group is brought together again India, Poland and Canada should be added. Those three make up the international control commission which was charged with seeing that the 1954 agreements were properly carried out.

ACCIDENT RISK IS ALMOST NIL, SAY NUCLEAR EXPERTS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP)—Atomic authorities today confirmed Gen. Nathan F. Twining's assertion that accidental explosion of nuclear weapons is practically impossible.

The Air Chief of Staff said yesterday that United States strategic bombers are in a state of "instant readiness" to wreak atomic retaliation against an aggressor.

He said also Americans need not be alarmed by the thought of a skyfull of bombers laden with nuclear weapons. He said danger to United States civilians from accidental atomic explosions in the air or on the ground is "essentially non-existent." The possibility of chance detonations is "so remote as to be incalculable," he said.

Atomic sources said Twining wasn't just talking "by the slide rule." Theoretical considerations convinced atomic weaponeers long ago that accidental explosion of A-bombs—either as the result of enemy action or of accidents in handling — was highly unlikely.

PROBLEMS OF EDUCATION TO BE LEAGUE DAY TOPIC

Problems and goals of education will be discussed Thursday at the St. Louis League of Women Voters league day program at Downtown Y.M.C.A., 1528 Locust street. The meeting will open at 10:30 a.m. with items recommended by leagues throughout the nation for consideration by the local groups.

Milton Bierbaum, chairman of the federal relations commission for the Missouri State Teachers Association, will speak at 11:30 a.m. on "Federal Aid to Education — Up to the Minute." He is superintendent of West Walnut Manor School, and recently was appointed representative on federal aid from this area.

Speakers on an afternoon panel on how schools here can benefit by the White House conference will be: Louis Antoine and Oscar Ehrhardt, members of the Board of Education; Henry Chadeayne, chairman of the public school advisory committee, and H. C. Van Reen, assistant superintendent of instruction of St. Louis schools.

WALTER CHECKING CHARGE ON REDS USING HONG KONG

HONG KONG, Feb. 4 (AP)—Representative Walter (Dem.) of Pennsylvania conferred with United States officials here today on reports that thousands of Communists were funneling through this British crown colony to the free world.

Walter said the charge was made by Representative Feighan (Dem.) of Ohio in a report following a visit here last fall.

"Congressman Feighan said thousands of Communists were coming from behind the Iron Curtain and being sent all over the free world at the expense of the United States taxpayer via an intergovernmental committee for European migration," Walter told reporters.

Walter was accompanied by Scott McLeod, State Department security officer and administrator of the United States Refugee Act.

'SOCIALIST REALISM' IN RED FILM VERSION OF 'OTHELLO'

MOSCOW, Feb. 4 (AP)—The intellectual elite of Moscow flocked today to a preview showing of a Soviet motion picture version of "Othello." They saw what the "socialist realism" does to classic English drama.

Producer Sergei Yutkevich, discussing the character of Othello, declared that as portrayed in the film he is "not a morose and jealous person but a strong, noble and generous man for whom to live means to believe, and when belief disappears life and struggle become meaningless." Yutkevich pointed out, too, that in his version Desdemona also possesses a stronger character.

The film was shot mostly outdoors in the Crimea and has music by Aram Khachaturian.

TWO KILLED IN LEAP FROM BURNING PLANE

Two Others Pulled Out of Water Near Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP)—Two flyers were killed and two others parachuted to safety today when a twin-engine Navy transport caught fire and crashed into the Atlantic ocean two miles off Fort Lauderdale Beach.

One man was tangled in his parachute lines when he was pulled out of the water by the charter fishing boat, Venture, and was believed to have drowned.

The second man was severely injured when taken from the water and died later in a hospital.

Names of the dead were withheld by naval authorities.

Capt. Robert W. Anderson, the pilot, said the plane caught fire over Miami Beach. After an unsuccessful attempt to put out the blaze, he ordered the crew to bail out off Fort Lauderdale.

Anderson and the dead man were picked up by the Venture. The two other crewmen, whose names were withheld, were picked up by the Navy destroyer escort Coolbaugh.

"We were at 1500 feet altitude over Miami Beach when the fire broke out," said Anderson, of West Palm Beach. "I kept going hoping we could get it out. Over Fort Lauderdale, we were down to 800 feet and I ordered the men to hit the 'chutes."

Immediately after Anderson had made this comment to a reporter, he was taken in tow by naval authorities who refused to let him say any more. The two other survivors also were ordered not to tell anyone about their experience.

The plane, an R4Q, was on a training mission from the Opa-Locka Marine Corps Air Station in Miami.

Joines was held in the Cabarrus county jail pending investigation and a hearing.

WOMEN GIVEN FIRST BIG ROLE IN GREEK ELECTIONS

ATHENS, Feb. 4 (AP)—For the first time in modern Greek political history, women are going to have a big voice in national elections. They make up almost half the total of voters registered to ballot Feb. 19.

There are six women candidates for seats in the 300-member parliament.

Politicians privately admit they don't know how the women will do. But it seems likely the front-runner at present is Premier Karamanlis, chosen by King Paul for Premier after Marshal Alexander Papagos died last fall.

CHARGES PRESIDENT HASN'T ENDED 'MESS'

Ousted Official Says State Department Hasn't Been Cleaned Up.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Bryton Barron, who says he was forced to retire from his State Department job after 30 years in government, declared tonight the Eisenhower administration has not kept its pledge to clean up the "mess" in the department.

"That pledge has not as yet been fulfilled," Barron said. "The sweeping changes in personnel which the American people were led to expect have not yet occurred."

Barron, who said he was the "original compiler" of the Yalta papers published last year, added in a statement:

"Moreover, so firm has become the hold of entrenched bureaucrats that the department has failed to bring the people into its confidence, as it promised the Congress it would in May 1953 by agreeing to reveal what has actually been happening in the recent past.

"So far only the records of the Yalta conference, incomplete though they are, have been made public, this despite the fact that the President himself has said: 'Everything ought to be given out that helps the public of the United States to profit from past mistakes, to make decisions of the moment.'"

Barron, who is eligible for $300 a month retirement benefits, did not contest his ouster from his $10,280 a year job, effective Jan. 31. The State Department said last October that Barron and Donald M. Dozer were accused of insubordination. Barron said today no specific findings ever were brought against him.

Dozer, a $10,000-a-year historian, was fired Oct. 4, reinstated Dec. 21 and fired again on Jan. 18. The department said he was a "disruptive" influence.

Dozer, who was assembling the Cairo-Tehran conference papers when he was dismissed, has appealed to the Civil Service Commission. He has blamed Democratic holdovers in the department for his ouster, and has said he witnessed arguments between Barron and the latter's superiors in which Barron urged more complete publication of World War II conference documents.

Barron said he was not bitter, but he blasted the State Department as a "globe-encircling bureaucracy" operating behind a curtain of regulations which "conceals its workings" and places it "almost beyond the reach of the Congress and the people."

WIFE IS FOUND GUILTY OF DEFAMING PATINO

NOVARA, Italy, Feb. 4 (AP)—Joanne Connolly Patino, estranged wife of a Bolivian tin millionaire, was given an eight-month suspended sentence by a Novara court today on charges of defaming her husband. Her attorneys appealed the verdict.

The court also fined Mrs. Patino 70,000 lire ($112) and ordered her to pay an amount to be fixed later as reparations to her husband. That amount will be fixed by a civil tribunal.

Neither Mrs. Patino, former New York debutante, nor her husband, Jaime Ortiz Patino, who filed the defamation action, was in court.

U.S. AND RED CHINA ENVOYS HOLD 35TH GENEVA MEETING

GENEVA, Feb. 4 (AP)—Ambassadors of the United States and Communist China held their thirty-fifth—and longest—secret meeting today in the deadlocked negotiations for a Chinese renunciation of force.

Agreement appeared more remote than ever after Red Chinese Premier-Foreign Minister Chou En-lai's recent reassertion of Communist determination to take Formosa by force if necessary.

United States Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson and Red Chinese Ambassador Wang Ping-nan, at the end of their five hour meeting, announced only that they agreed to meet again next Thursday. Today's meeting brought the talks into their seventh month.

LOSS PUT AT $1200 IN APARTMENT FIRE

Two Rooms Damaged Badly — Blaze Starts in Painter's Cloth.

Fire caused extensive damage to two rooms in a two-story wood shingle flat at 3826 Minnesota avenue yesterday. The first floor of the building was being redecorated when the fire started in a painter's cellophane drop cloth.

Owner of the building, Eugene Johnston, 3118A Chippewa street, was talking to the painter, Richard Senn, 5216 Loughborough avenue, in a hallway when the fire started in the first floor front room. After trying to extinguish it, Johnston called he fire deparment. Two alarms were sounded.

Occupants of the first floor, Mr. and Mrs. T. Carney and their week-old baby, and those of the second floor, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Portell and their two-year-old daughter, were not in the building. Firemen estimated damage to the building at $1000 and to the contents at $200.

Police formed fire lines at the height of the blaze to keep back spectators, who were attracted by the heavy clouds of smoke which hampered firemen only slightly. The blaze was extinguished in about 30 minutes.

MRS. ROOSEVELT SAYS U.S. MUST ACT IN MIDEAST

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 4 (UP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today the United States must take the initiative in bringing about peace between the Arab states and Israel.

The widow of the President, speaking at the opening session of a campaign to sell bonds for Israel, said "the entry of Communist arms into the Middle Eastern situation places a solemn responsibility on our Government to use all its influence to prevent an outbreak of hostilities and to promote the establishment of an enduring peace.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who received an award as the "woman of valor," told some 800 Jewish leaders from the United States and Canada that "a peace must be based on mutual understanding and economic co-operation" in the Middle East.

REPORTS RUSSIANS WORKING ON ATOMIC ICEBREAKER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP)—Representative Craig Hosmer (Rep.) California, said today Russia is working on an atomic icebreaker which will shoot out jets of steam to carve a passage through the ice.

He told of the Russian plan in a summary of a speech he plans to make in the House Monday outlining world programs for atomic energy. He said the Russians contend the icebreaker would have a speed of 24 knots and be 512 feet long.

"Reliability of Soviet announcements and stated intentions in the nuclear field must, of course, be regarded with the same caution as those in other fields," Hosmer said.

FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN BED

Melvin Cain, a laborer, was found dead in bed yesterday in his room at 3701 North Ninth street. Police said there was a bullet wound in his head and a .32 caliber pistol was beside the body.

Relatives told police Cain, 37 years old, had been having domestic difficulties.

NIXON STRONGER THAN KNOWLAND, SAYS GOV. KNIGHT

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4 (AP)—Republican Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California, long at odds with Vice President Richard Nixon in his home state, said today he believes Nixon would be a stronger candidate for President than Senator William F. Knowland.

All three Californians have been mentioned as possible Republican candidates if President Eisenhower does not run again.

"I think it is quite obvious that Vice President Nixon has more friends in the Eisenhower administration than does Senator Knowland," Knight said in an interview before a speech at the City Club. "We have our intra-party rifts in California, but we cannot afford permanent differences because of the predominately Democratic population of California."

Knight said he thought there was "a better than 50-50 chance that President Eisenhower will run again."

"The President has recovered well and I think he realizes his unique position of leadership," he said.

The California governor, a favorite son candidate who says he would support President Eisenhower if he runs, declared he would accept the nomination himself if it is offered him, but said he would not campaign outside California.

BELIN UNIVERSITY HERE MOVING TO CHILLICOTHE

Belin Memorial University of St. Louis, an interdenominational interracial institution, has begun renovation of buildings at the old Chillicothe (Mo.) Business College and will complete purchase of the property next week, the Rev. Clyde Belin, founder and president of the university, said yesterday.

The property, unused since the business college closed in September 1952, has four classroom and administrative buildings, a gymnasium-auditorium, four dormitories, two administrators' homes, six cottages and a 75-acre farm northwest of the campus. Classes will be opened Feb. 20 the Rev. Mr. Belin said.

Belin Memorial is a foundamental and pentecostal school with a curriculum including liberal arts, Bible, music, commerce, engineering, home economics and law. It is now at 2300 Miami street. Facilities here probably will be closed when classes are opened at Chillicothe, about 200 miles northwest of St. Louis.

$124,000,000 U.S. DONATION TO U.N. CHILDREN'S FUND

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Feb. 4 (UP)—The United States, through 1956, will have contributed more than $124,000,000 to the United Nations Children's Fund, its director disclosed tonight.

A UNICEF financial review disclosed that while the proportion of United States contributions to total government contributions since 1954 has been going down, the amount has risen by $700,000 in each of the last two years. For 1953, 54 governments outside the United States gave $4,453,000, for 1954 60 gave $5,308,000 and for 1955, 70 gave $6,600,000.

4 WOUNDED AS MAN SHOOTS UP TAVERN

Two Men and Two Women Hit—Gunman Escapes in Confusion.

Two men and two women were wounded last night when a customer in a crowded tavern at 517 Ohio avenue suddenly started firing a pistol, police reported. All were taken to Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

The victims, all Negroes, were: Miss Lulu Henry, of the 5100 block of St. Louis avenue, shot twice in the abdomen and once in the right forearm; Miss Geraldine Ross, 2600 block of Randolph street, wounded in right chest; Mickey Jones, 500 block of Ohio, wounded in left shoulder, and Harvey Shaw, 2300 block of Spruce street, shot twice in left forearm.

Police said they were informed there were about 65 customers in the place when the shooting started. A man who had been among the customers suddenly started firing, without warning and apparently at random, police said.

When he finished, police continued, he ran out and escaped in the confusion. Six empty cartridges were found on the floor by police.

A total of 12,324 persons viewed 125 exhibits on the opening day of the Bildors Home Show at the Arena yesterday. Exhibits included construction materials, home plans, appliances, decorations and accessories. The show will run through next Sunday.

850 ATTEND CHARITY FETE HELD BY UNICO NATIONAL

About 850 persons attended a $10-a-plate charity ball and dinner of the St. Louis chapter of Unico National, an organization serving civic and charitable groups, last night at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson.

Principal speaker was United States District Judge Alfred Modarelli, of Newark, N. J., who praised the work of Unico. The program was to raise money for the group's 1956 projects, which include donations for the Pope Pius XII Memorial library here, expansion of library facilities, scholarship awards and aid to boys' towns.

The very Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S. J., urged backing of the Pope Pius library which will house microfilms of documents from the Vatican Library in Rome. Unico is an organization of business and professional men and educators of Italian descent.

16 FACE CHARGES AFTER POLICE RAID DICE GAME

Sam Taylor and 15 of his customers face gambling charges in police court Feb. 15 because an angry wife told police a dice game was in progress in the basement of Taylor's tavern at 3193 South Kingshighway early yesterday.

Sgt. Robert Heitz and two other officers were admitted to the tavern at 2:10 a.m. by the bartender after the wife complained her husband lost his paycheck in the game. The preoccupied dice shooters were surprised when the officers walked into the basement.

A pair of dice and $50 in currency, which was scattered about the floor, were seized as evidence. Taylor was booked suspected of violating state and city liquor laws as well as permitting gambling on his premises. Sgt. Heitz said the bartender who admitted him disappeared in all the excitement.

Lake Michigan Car Record.

MUSKEGON, Mich. (UP)—A record 80,000 new cars valued at $200,000,000 were shipped across Lake Michigan on carferries from Muskegon to Milwaukee, Wis., during 1955, port officials said.

TAX BUREAU TO CRACK DOWN ON FILING INCOME ESTIMATES

Federal income tax payers were warned yesterday by District Director of Internal Revenue Ernest M. Flinn that there will be a sharp tightening of enforcement of requirements for filing declarations of estimated income this year.

The crackdown is intended both to reduce penalties which taxpayers may have to pay if declarations are not filed, and to simplify the work of the bureau, Flinn said. Agents are giving 1955 returns a close check to see that the regulations are fulfilled, he said, and this will be extended to include 1956 income when the first declarations become due April 15.

Generally speaking, taxpayers are required to file declarations of estimated income when gross income can reasonably be expected to include more than $100 from sources not subject to withholding tax; where income of a head of a household, widow or widower exceeds $10,000; where it exceeds $5000 in the case of other unmarried individuals; where it exceeds $5000 in the case of a married person not entitled to file a joint return; or where it exceeds $5000 for a person entitled to file a joint return and where the combined income of husband and wife can be reasonably be expected to exceed $10,000.

7 ASSOCIATES OF VITALE QUESTIONED IN BROWN KILLING

Seven associates of John Vitale, notorious gangster, were arrested in five taverns last night for questioning about the death of Robert L. Brown, lawyer and Board of Aldermen parliamentarian, who was shot to death Jan. 24.

Detective Lt. John Daugherty, who took them into custody, said they would be asked where they were at the time of the shooting, and that their answers would be checked.

Brown was in the tobacco business and also dealt in cigarette vending machines.

JANUARY STOCK DECLINE WIDEST SINCE MAY 1940

Favorable Corporate News, However, Helps Restore Traders' Confidence Last Week and Market Improves.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.
Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.

THERE were few tears shed in Wall Street when January's market became just another statistic for the record book. In 21 days of trading the stock market underwent its widest decline since May, 1940. Numerous favorable corporate developments, however, helped materially in restoring traders' confidence this week, and the market improved.

These columns were filled all week with reports of record-breaking operating results for many leading corporations. Topping them all was General Motors, which passed the billion-dollar mark in net earnings last year for the first time in history.

There were other pleasing announcements, such as the unexpected proposal for a 5-for-1 split of Atchison, Tokepa and Santa Fe common and preferred shares. The carrier's common jumped 11⅞ points on the day of the announcement.

Week Starts Hesitantly.

The market started the week on a hesitant note in the dullest trading in three months. Sharp gains in selected oil, rail, metal and chemical issues put the list higher on Tuesday, and the rally extended into Wednesday with a moderate expansion in trading. Led by oils and chemicals, stocks were stronger on Friday in more active trading. Thus, the market ended the week with the best gains this year.

This resume would not be complete without some mention of Ford, although more than one big trader in the issue said he wished he had never heard the name. This week the company declared its first public dividend — 60 cents — promised when it filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The stock—which less than two weeks ago traded above 70 — dropped to 63½ bid, 64½ asked on Wednesday, the day the dividend was announced. By Thursday it changed hands at 63⅛. It closed on Friday at 63¾ bid. The syndicate that floated the stock last month at $64.50 a share was relieved of its stabilization responsibilities on Tuesday.

Large-Scale Road Building.

It now seems assured that the nation's economy will have the sustaining influence of large scale road-building for many years to come. An agreement has been reached between the Administration and Democratic leaders on a tax-financing plan for a multibillion-dollar highway program. Increased taxes on gasoline and other products bought by highway users, aimed at raising a billion a year over a 15-year period, would be applied, instead of bond financing.

One of the sore spots in the economy—the farm problem—brightened a bit last month. Products of the farm, which declined 7 per cent in price last year, rose 1 per cent between mid-December and mid-January. But the gain was offset by increases in prices of goods and services that farmers must buy to operate farms and maintain families.

The decline in automobile production is having little effect on the volume of orders being received by the steel companies according to "Iron Age." Steel consumers, the magazine says, are not halting their pressure for deliveries. Demand for all types of steel products is still going strong and "tinplate consumers are taking no chances" on building their inventories "until labor negotiations are out of the way."

Buying on the Cuff.

Buying "on the cuff" came in for further attention during the week. Senator J. William Fulbright, Democrat of Arkansas, said his banking committee might give consideration to regulating such credit. The Federal Reserve Board reported that installment debt in December rose $648,000,000 — the largest gain since June—to $27,895,000,000. The gain in December, 1954, was $453,000,000. For the year 1955 the debt rose $5,428,000,000.

Wall Street stresses, however, that the stock market is not the culprit in the credit story. Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, told Congress that only 1.3 per cent, or four and a half billion dollars of the nation's private debt of 350 billion dollars, was being used in the securities business on June 30.

An additional $920,000,000 was made available to the business from cash balances owed by brokers to their customers—the so-called free credit balances investors have on hand in brokerage offices. However, the exchange announced this week that, effective Feb. 13, it would raise the minimum cash requirement for opening margin accounts from $500 to $1000.

Stock Averages.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed the week 10.88 points higher at 477.44. The 20 rails gained 4.03 points on the week at 159.22 and the 15 utilities rose 1.24 to 64.68. The total 65 stocks was up 3.89 at 169.95.)

(Associated Press average of 30 industrials was 6.4 points higher than last week, closing at 252.6. The 15 rail index gained 5.7 points at 134.9 and the 15 utility average gained .9 of a point at 73.0. The total 60 stocks was up 4.4 at 177.6.)

GOVERNMENT BONDS SHOW GAINS ON WEEK

Corporate Issues Wind Up Higher After Brisk Trade.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)—The corporate bond market wound up higher on balance this week after relatively brisk trading. United States Treasury obligations advanced fractionally in rather dull dealings.

The Government's victory 2½s of December, 1972-67, inched up 2-32 for the week, closing Friday at 95 31-32 bid. The 2½s of 1963 and the 30-year 3¼s added 4-32 each at 98 2-32 and 106 2-32 bid, respectively. The 40-year 3s advanced 6-32 for the week, closing at 100 27-32 bid.

New York bank statistics reflected purchases of Government securities by the Ford Foundation with proceeds of its sale of 10,200,000 shares of Ford Motor Co. common stock. On Jan. 26, the foundation received $642,000,000 from underwriters and immediately put it into Government securities and high grade corporate bonds.

The New York bank figures for the week showed that banks had sold $470,000,000 of Government obligations. Much of this total presumably went to the foundation, financial circles said.

Corporate bond trading for the week rose to $24,943,600 par value on the big board from $24,327,600 the previous week. This compared with $19,574,600 for the like week in 1955.

Rails and utilities led the corporate advance. High quality investment issues improved fractionally while industrial liens eased a fraction.

Foreign dollar bonds were generally higher. Italian and South American issues were in demand. The Japanese Oriental Development Co. 5½s of 1958 jumped 15 points to 160 on small turnover.

LIVESTOCK TRADE IS UNSETTLED BY SEVERE WEATHER

Receipts were curtailed sharply by weather and snow covered highways but distribution was too uneven for satisfactory trading conditions. Combined steer and heifer receipts were only 325 loads, compared 415 loads week previous. Steers numbered only 235 loads, compared preceding week's 315 loads. Steers opened strong to 50c higher but the trend shifted downward when 115 loads appeared Tuesday, and continued lower the remainder of week ended Friday, both steers and heifers closing steady to 50c net lower. Cows advanced 50c and good to prime vealers $1; other vealers, calves and bulls steady; stockers and feeders steady to 50c higher. Fully a third of steers were 1100 lb. and over, indicating continued overlapping of new and old crop steers which has been one of the main contributing factors in the current price downturn. Good to low-choice steers predominated; bulk $16.50@18.50; bulk comparable heifers and mixed yearlings $16@18; scattered sales choice mixed $18.50@20. About 20% steers were choice from $18.75@20.75; about three loads high-choice and prime $21@22; week's top $22. Roughly 15% of steers and heifers were commercial grade at $13.50@16. Most utility and commercial cows brought $11.50@12.75; a few $13@13.50; canners and cutters mainly $9@11; utility and commercial bulls $12.50@14.50; good and choice vealers $24@30; a few prime $32@34; lower grades mainly $14@22; bulked medium and good stocker and feeder steers $15@16.50; a moderate showing good and choice $17@18; top $18.50 for load high quality fleshy 996-lb. Angus feeders.

Compared with Friday last week, barrows and gilts, 180 lb. up finished mostly 50c lower, instances 75c lower, lighter weights 50c to $1 lower and sows 25 to 50c lower. Top for the week was $15.25 Monday, highest since late in October, the Friday top being $14.25. Sows sold up to $11.75 but closed with a top of $11.25. For the week, bulk of 180- to 230-lb. barrows and gilts sold at $13.50@14.75; 230 to 270 lb. $12.50@14.25; 270 to 325 lb. $11.75@13.25; 140 to 170 lb. $12.25@14.25 and 110 to 140 lb. $11@13.25. Sows up to 450 lb. bulked at $10.50@11.50, heavier sows $9.75@11. Boars ranged from $6.50@8.50.

ALL GRAINS ARE FIRM IN WEEK'S TRADING

Good Export Business in Some Commodities — Await Support Figure.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (AP)—All grains firmed on the Board of Trade this week and dealings at times became fairly active. Gains weren't very large, although wheat managed its best upturn since the start of 1956. This came largely because of short covering the March and May contracts. Good export business in some commodities, light receipts of cash grain, movement of wheat from Chicago and the possibility 90 per cent price supports might be restored on basic crops supported the buying.

Wheat closed the week 1⅝@4¾c higher, corn 1¾@2¾c higher, oats ⅜@⅝c higher, rye 1⅛@1¾c higher, soybeans ¾c lower to 3½c higher and lard 7 to 15 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Corn's advance stemmed partly from reports producers were impounding very large quantities of the yellow grain under the Government loan. This means less free corn on the market.

Bulls also used the argument corn prices were so low there wasn't any way for them to go but up.

The 1955 crop was supported at $1.58 a bushel in the commercial growing area. This equals $1.75 at Chicago. Cash corn and the March future are selling at around $1.30, or about 43 cents under the loan.

From a statistical standpoint there isn't too much to cheer the bull in corn. The carryover on Oct. 1, 1955, the start of the new crop year, set a record at 1,029,000,000 bushels. Then came the harvest of a 3,185,000,000 bushel crop.

Some energetic buying came into March and May wheat on news about 700,000 bushels of wheat would be shipped from Chicago to Gulf of Mexico ports. Free wheat supplies are not large. March wheat hit a new seasonal high.

The advance in soybeans, led by old-crop months, was pegged upon sharply higher soybean oil prices. This in turn was based up very heavy exports of bean oil. As the week ended, Greece and Spain were said to be in the market for bean oil.

Rye firmed in sympathy with wheat while oats were ahead with corn. Lard fell back when it was revealed stocks of lard in cold storage warehouses were quite large.

40,000,000 YARDS OF PRINT CLOTH SOLD IN WEEK

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)—The broader demand for cotton textiles, anticipated by dealers recently developed at least partially last week. Extensive inquiry for print cloths in the preceding week were translated into actual sales with estimates that converters and other users bought upwards of 40,000,000 yards of print cloths, mainly the popular 80 square construction, for third and fourth quarter delivery. Prices paid for these forward deliveries were 19¼ cents with some third quarter business done at 19½ cents. Other sections of the market including drills, twills, and broadcloths did not participate in the activity to any extent although sales of bag sheetings picked up for second quarter. The spot price for the popular 80 square print moved up ⅛ cent to 20⅝ cents a yard for average makes.

Rayon goods were quiet. Second-hand offerings were lighter. Interest in linen effect rayons improved. Selling was mostly for nearby deliveries. Finished rayon lining twills were said to be slightly higher with recent yarn increases tending to bolster the price structure although not appreciably stimulating forward buying of cloth.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

THRICE-TOLD TALE

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)

THE bluest of industry's blue chips came up with a batch of jet-propelled 1955 earnings reports this week that left the record profits of earlier years in the model "T" category. Topping the star-spangled list of reporting firms was General Motors Corp., the world's biggest automaker. First company in United States history to break through the billion-dollar profits barrier, G.M. last year racked up net earnings of $1,189,000,000. That's what the company had left after setting aside $1,600,000,000 for federal, state and local taxes.

Also heard from were the world's biggest oil company, the world's biggest steel firm and the world's biggest copper producer.

Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), reporting the "best year in the company's history," estimated its 1955 profits at $717,000,000, up 23 per cent from the year before. A 90 per cent hike was announced by United States Steel Corp. with profits at a new peak of $370,197,000, sales and shipments also set new highs. Kennecott Copper Corp. boosted its net earnings 61 per cent, to a record $125,615,000. Net income of Union Carbide & Carbon Corp. shot to a new high of $140,755,858.

Looking Into 1956.

Contributing further to the ebullient tone of business were predictions by industry leaders of more lush profits in 1956. The stock market snapped out of its January doldrums with oil shares leading the advance. Retail trade moved ahead. Steel set new production records.

Outstanding soft spot was the auto industry which announced new cutbacks to bring production into line with sales.

Beginning Monday, all Chrysler divisions in Detroit (including the Chrysler, DeSoto, Dodge and Plymouth divisions) will go on a four-day week. Already shut down for two weeks was the Packard-Clipper division of Studebaker-Packard Corp., with 5500 idle. For the industry at large, it's estimated that some 33,000 auto workers have been laid off since the start of the year.

January output of cars and trucks was 8 per cent under December and down nearly 7 per cent from January 1955. Bucking the trend was big General Motors which upped its output by around 2 per cent. A slight dip in production of G. M. cars was more than offset by rising truck output.

Outside of Detroit and other auto manufacturing centers, the cutbacks scarcely caused a ripple. The steel industry was swamped with orders from other customers, with capacity operations sighted for months to come. Falling store sales in Detroit were all but submerged by a slow but consistent rise in retail volume elsewhere.

Department store sales across the nation at latest count were a hefty 8 per cent over the like 1955 week, after loafing along at only 2 or 3 per cent above a year ago during most of January. Merchants continued to report vigorous consumer response to the usual January-February clearance sales of furniture, bedding and apparel.

Control of Credit.

There was an apparent change of signals in Washington on the controversial question of government controls on credit.

The issue was revived by President Eisenhower about 10 days ago when he proposed that Congress consider giving the Government standby authority to regulate down payment and monthly installment terms on consumer installment loans. This week, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey sided with manufacturers, finance company leaders and retailers who don't want any Government regulation of consumer credit. Said Humphrey: "I think it is better not to have standby controls. . . . You're taking on a lot of responsibility when you tell 157,000,000 people what they can afford to buy."

Behind the latest discussion of consumer credit was a Federal Reserve Board report which showed that free-spending Christmas shoppers helped boost consumer indebtedness during December by more than a billion dollars.

By year end, American consumers were 36¼ billion dollars in hock—a new record for consumer debt and an increase of six billion over the year before. "Consumer indebtedness" represents the money you owe on installment purchases and personal loans. The total does not include the 89 billions Americans owe in mortgage loans on nonfarm houses.

The Farm Position.

Farmers were told by the Government this week that the downward trend in farm prices was reversed in January. Prices for the 30 days ended Jan. 15 advanced about 1 per cent. Consumers in the cities paid higher prices for chicken and pork. Prices of coffee and gasoline also moved higher.

Briefly over the business scene:

Oil companies handed out wage increases averaging about 6 per cent to thousands of their workers. . . . International Business Machines Corp. announced plans for a major expansion program in the three Pacific Coast states. . . . The Chicago convention bureau reported that trade shows and conventions brought 1,276,330 visitors to the Windy City last year. They spent $209,688,250.

HIGHER ELECTRIC RATES PROPOSED IN SOUTHWEST

Co-op Representatives Protesting Against Increases by Power Agency.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP) —Electric bills of some 250,000 farmers in five southwest states would go up under a new set of rates proposed today by the Southwestern Power Administration.

The new SPA schedule, which requires approval of the Federal Power Commission was disclosed by Assistant Secretary of the Interior Fred G. Aandahl SPA is an agency under Interior Department jurisdiction.

Aandahl, saying that rates would be "somewhat higher," asserted the increases were necessary because SPA is operating at a deficit. The old rates, he said, failed to consider the increased cost of building power facilities in the postwar period. He explained the rates were pushed up also by a new formula devised by this Administration, allocating more of the costs of multi-power dams to power.

Any farmer who buys electricity from co-ops distributing power sold by SPA would be affected. Aandahl said the distributors' rate, under the new schedule, would be increased from 5½ to 7.71 mills per kilowatt hour.

SPA sells power to distributing co-ops in Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana. This would be the first increase in SPA rates since the schedule was originally drawn up in the 1940s.

Aandahl's disclosure came as representatives of certain southwest rural electrification co-ops were buttonholing their congressmen here, protesting against the proposed rates as "ruinous." They said the new schedule would mean a 40 per cent increase in rates to distributors.

One member of a group of four Oklahoma co-op men said these four agreed that if the rates ever went into effect many farmers would have to disconnect service and "go back to the gasoline lantern."

The four Oklahomans were H. N. (Dick) Dillon of Okmulgee, Rex Dewey of Vinita, H. G. Templeton of Hollis and E. E. Karnes of Andarko. They said also that co-op electricity rates under the proposed schedule would be pushed above these of competing private power firms. They viewed the move as an attempt to "put public power out of business," the spokesman said.

But Aandahl said "the rates are not arbitrarily determined and are not ruinous to any customers."

Democrats heading two House groups — Chairman Engle (Dem.), California of the Interior Committee and Davis (Dem.), Tennessee, of the flood control sub-committee — wired Aandahl today, urging him to hold up the proposed rate schedule until their committees "have an opportunity to investigate this matter."

BANKER WHO COVERED UP OVERDRAFTS GETS 5 YEARS

OWENSBORO, Ky., Feb. 4 (UP)—A United States district court jury today convicted Bernard Barrett, former cashier of the Bank of Whitesville, on five counts of making false entries in a period in which he allowed customers of the country bank to overdraw their accounts by $520,000.

Judge Henry L. Brooks fined Barrett $5000 and sentenced him to five years in prison on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

Barrett's attorneys had based his defense on a contention that the one-time Sunday School teacher was of unsound mind during the period in which he bankrupted the small town bank, and that he did not profit personally. Several psychiatrists were called as witnesses, but disagreed on Barrett's mental condition.

Barrett also faces 19 counts of misapplication of federally-insured funds, along with depositor L. E. Owens; and 37 counts with J. D. Logsdon.

Long-Range Foreign Aid Plans to Counter Russia In Trouble in Congress

"Prospects Dim if Not Impossible"—Administration's Request for Means of Committing Assistance for Five- or Ten-Year Periods Runs Into Skepticism—Aswan Dam Project at Stake.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.

THE Eisenhower-Eden declaration issued at the close of the British-American talks this week put additional pressure behind the Administration's campaign for congressional approval of limited long-range foreign economic aid.

The declaration signed by President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Eden stressed the desire of their two governments "to help economic progress in the less-developed countries and to raise the living standards of their people." It noted that the Communists now have added "economic inducements" to the military and political force they have used in the past. Long-range aid is aimed at countering Soviet economic moves.

In the effort to influence a generally hostile Congress, Mr. Eisenhower, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and International Co-operation Administration Director John B. Hollister have enunciated their views in recent days. Dulles and Under Secretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr. have been before Congress. Top Administration officials have conferred privately with congressional leaders and have held off-the-record briefing sessions with reporters.

George and Knowland Skeptical.

In the face of this, however, such powerful Senators as Walter F. George of Georgia, Democratic chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and usually an Administration mainstay on foreign policy, and William F. Knowland of California, Senate Republican leader, have manifested skepticism while not actually closing the door to the Administration's proposals.

"The Administration," one influential Senator said, "has a long and difficult row to hoe."

The basis for the Administration position is deep concern over the Soviet Union's intensified program of economic aid to underdeveloped countries and Russia's evident intention of continuing to deny its citizens consumer goods in favor of promoting the world-wide aims of Communism.

Although the State Department has no firm and detailed proposal, what it appears to be seeking is a means by which it can cope with the fast-moving and flexible policy operations of a totalitarian state. It wants to be able to present a united legislative-executive front and to be able to declare its intention of committing certain funds on a five- or 10-year basis rather than on a year to year basis. Appropriations still would be made annually by Congress.

Armed with the desired authority, the State Department could extract the maximum propaganda value from its aid grants. The Soviet Union is adept at this very procedure.

One Congressman who is unusually well informed, respected and influential in the foreign aid field summarized his estimate of congressional reaction for the Post-Dispatch in these words:

"The Administration is falling back on the same old idea, give us the money and we will solve the problem. The main point here is the building of the Aswan high dam on the Nile. The Egyptians are just playing us off against the Russians.

"Prospects for congressional acceptance of an over-all long-range aid commitment, say for 10 years, are very dim, if not impossible. As to long-range commitments on a few specific projects, there is a good deal of skepticism unless this aid is considered on the basis of long-term low-interest loans, not grants.

"Prospects are good for a substantial increase in the Point IV program of technical assistance, the 'people to people' program."

Point IV appropriations have usually increased slightly each year and Mr. Eisenhower has recommended another increase in the fiscal year starting next July 1. The appropriation this year was $156,000,000.

Mounting Opposition for Years.

There has been mounting congressional opposition to foreign aid for some years. Most of this has been on the ground of economy, although there are experts willing to spend the money who still question whether large-scale grants provide the answer to the problem.

Some resistance originates in purely local situations. For example, Senator George, who is 78 years old, faces an uncertain political future. His term expires next Jan. 3 and he is likely to be challenged in the coming primaries by young Herman Talmadge. In order to attract campaign contributions and other support George must consider the Georgia electorate above all else.

Here is another example. Ten days ago Hoover went before the Senate Appropriations Committee to argue for the Aswan dam. This great engineering work would increase arable Egyptian land by 25 per cent. Egypt's main crop is cotton, a commodity that was bartered recently to Communist Czechoslovakia in return for arms. The United States has about a year's supply of cotton surplus over its domestic and export needs, and naturally Congressmen from cotton states are not eager to increase the potential of Egypt, even though the types of cotton grown in Egypt and the United States are different. Government officials contend that Egypt wants to get away from a one-crop economy and put the new land into truck gardens for food which would be sold in Europe.

There may be a question of how appealing that position is to the cotton Senators who dominate the controlling Democratic side of the Appropriations Committee. The chairman, Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona, and six other members are from major cotton-producing states. There are 12 Democrats on the committee.

As a third example, it is estimated privately by a responsible Congressman that if an appropriation for the Aswan dam should come before Congress as a clear-cut issue as many as 70 representatives with sizeable Jewish communities in their districts would be subject to pressure to vote against granting the funds. This would result from general bitterness generated by the Arab-Israeli dispute. There is virtually no "Arab vote" in the United States.

Aswan Dam Project for Egypt.

The Aswan dam is the only project the Administration is considering at the moment in connection with the long-term aid proposal. Its scale is so enormous that nothing else can be discussed in the same terms. Engineers have said the scheme is larger in relation to the Egyptian economy than all the public works constructed in the United States since 1900 are to the economy of this country.

The significance to Egypt is clear, but the project has, of course, a much broader aspect. The western allies are trying to hold the Middle East and safeguard the oil so essential to Europe. It is also necessary for the West to protect its access to the Suez canal. The West wants to avoid an arms race and preserve the power balance between Israel and the Arab states and to prevent Soviet penetration of Africa. In this context, economic aid to counter that offered by Russia assumes added importance.

The Administration's Aswan dam appeal is prefaced by this reasoning:

The achievement of the Communists in bringing Russia to a top industrial position in less than 30 years has had a profound effect on underdeveloped countries which have won freedom since 1945. These countries now seek industrial development. The Russians are saying that Asia can do what Russia did and that Russia will help. This Soviet challenge can be met by the West only by long-range aid.

The Aswan dam project is regarded as one which cannot be undertaken a bit at a time, although it can be divided into two phases, the first of four to five years, the second of 10. Of the total cost of $1,300,000,000, the Egyptians would put up the equivalent of $900,000,000, leaving the need for $400,000,000 in foreign exchange. It is reported the Russians have offered the equivalent of the $400,000,000 as a loan to be repaid over 50 years at 2 per cent interest.

A total of $140,000,000 would be required to get the project under way. The western proposal is that the Egyptians furnish the equivalent of $70,000,000, the Americans $56,000,000 in the form of an outright grant and the British $14,000,000. The World Bank then would be in a position to lend about $200,000,000; but details of the World Bank position are not known.

This financing plan would leave about $130,000,000 in foreign exchange lacking. It is apparently this figure that the Administration would like to underwrite, at least in part, over a period of perhaps 10 years. An official familiar with the operation of the World Bank said it could be assumed that if the bank offered to lend $200,000,000 it was confident the $130,000,000 would become available.

Egyptians are reported to be objecting to these two conditions to the bank's proposal:

- A requirement that contracts for work on the dam will be awarded on an international competitive basis, and a requirement that the bank is given a strong voice in the Egyptian program to prevent inflation.

Proposals to Be Spelled Out Soon.

Administration proposals, now rather vague, are likely to be spelled out in the coming weeks. The ICA will present the over-all foreign aid program to Congress in March. The Administration has announced it will seek an authorization of $4,900,000,000 for foreign military and economic aid in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

There is considerable confusion about some aspects of the Administration position. Several days ago Government officials were asked by reporters whether the long-range plan would be dropped if congressional reaction was adverse, and they replied "not necessarily." Asked a similar question, Hollister replied it was easier to make a deal and to "enlist additional capital" if assurances were on hand.

An official familiar with the operations of the World Bank said the situation appeared to be one in which everything was contingent on something else. He said the United States and Britain would not have offered $70,000,000 unless they were confident the bank would come in, and that the bank would not have considered the project unless it was reasonably sure there were firm sources for all funds making up the total.

The official said the bank would lend not more than $200,000,000 and that it could not lend money for a project unless the financing plan was complete. He said the bank might advance $200,000,000 in a series of loans on the basis of the $70,000,000 and public and private assurances by Government officials that the remaining $130,000,000 in foreign exchange would become available.

He pointed out that a World Bank loan on such a basis is not unprecedented, that loans have been made to Japan that were predicated on the assumption United States aid would continue to shore up the Japanese economy.

Eden-Eisenhower Talks Tempered by Domestic Politics of U.S., Britain

Election Year Climate in America and Economic Issues in England Make Time Inauspicious for Decisive Determination of Policy, but Meeting May Serve to Quiet Middle East.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.

WITH the glowing generalities generated by the Eden-Eisenhower talks scarcely more than pleasant haze in the air, the governments of Great Britain and the United States must now do the hard spadework on the grave tasks that still confront them. It is an inauspicious time for both London and Washington to try to adjust the differences which kept President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Eden from reaching any agreed solutions.

In the United States it is an election year. Any alteration of the basic assumptions of American foreign policy is therefore bound to come under fire.

The Prime Minister and his party left the United States professing to believe they had an American pledge not only to review the list of strategic goods kept from Communist China but to revise it downward.

Senator William Knowland of California, the Republican leader in the Senate, believes it will be difficult, if not impossible, to demonstrate any gain to Britain or the free world in increased trade with Red China. He is convinced the United States will not sanction such an increase while Red China's leaders threaten to take Formosa by force. Knowland has important support in both parties on this sensitive issue; and, what is more, in the State Department are those such as Assistant Secretary Walter Robertson, in charge of Far Eastern affairs, stoutly opposing any change in the present line.

Hard Row to Hoe in London.

In London, the Eden government has a hard row to hoe. While the Conservative party rebellion that flared up a month ago has subsided, the root causes of disaffection remain. Continuing inflation and the decline of exports and the drop in the gold and dollar balance have produced a political-economic crisis that is partly disguised by a domestic prosperity feeding on itself. Eden is still sharply criticized for his indecisiveness in the face of new wage demands from labor and continuing high dollar imports.

A footnote to the Eden-Eisenhower talks, revealing inhibitions on both sides of the Atlantic, concerns the interest payments which the British must make on the three and a half billion dollar loan advanced by the United States in July, 1946.

The agreement covering the loan, reached in the aftermath of the war when Britain had expanded virtually all of her overseas investments, contains a complicated waiver clause.

As set out in that clause, under certain circumstances the British can inform Washington that they are passing the interest payment. In a tight squeeze this could be important in balancing income and outgo. At the end of 1955 London paid $71,000,000 in interest and $48,000,000 on the principal, but British Treasury experts were told last fall in Washington that the language of the waiver clause is so ambiguous that the exemption probably could not be claimed. Congress would have to approve some clarifying language.

Sure to Draw Political Fire.

Britain would like to have that done in order to be able to omit the interest payment should a severe emergency develop at the end of this year. The Prime Minister may have made mention of it informally in his talks with the President although this was denied by the British delegation.

Obviously in an election year even such a relatively minor change would produce some campaign oratory and Congressional leaders would like to avoid that embarrassment. After all, the new Eisenhower budget is theoretically balanced by a hair-line fraction or a per cent and the loss of the British interest payment would make a difference.

The claims of the budget-makers in both capitals inhibit any new or bold approach to the challenge of Communism in the Far East and Middle East. In London the new Chancellor of the Exchequer, Harold Macmillan, who moved to that post from the Foreign Office, is staring down the cannon's mouth. Preparing the budget he must present to the House of Commons in April, Macmillan must take some extremely unpleasant decisions if the present drift is to be checked.

According to private reports from London, he is considering two drastic steps. One is to impose a capital gains tax. Britain has never had such a tax and the fact that it hasn't has made it possible for a small group at the top of the economic heap to live on at least an approximation of the old British upper class standard.

Such a move would draw down the wrath of the right wing of the Tory party and jeopardize Eden's position. Any such move would have to be balanced by the second of the two steps said to be contemplated by Butler—re-imposition of stringent controls on dollar imports. This would help damp down the inflation. There is some reason to believe that if Macmillan is able to master the current fiscal crisis, he would put himself in a position so strong as to be a powerful rival for the Prime Ministership.

The latest report, for Jan. 31, showed a slight gain in Britain's gold and dollar balance. There was an increase of $29,000,000 to a total of $2,149,000,000. The low point was in 1947 when London undertook, at American prompting, a disastrous experiment in making the pound freely convertible.

Nothing Settled in Middle East.

So far as the Middle East area of greatest urgency is concerned, the talks settled nothing although they prepared for three-way conversations including France. In 1950, France joined Britain and the United States in a declaration guaranteeing the borders of Israel.

There was discussion of getting some kind of international police force to patrol the Arab-Israel borders, but the Russians would demand the right to participate in any United Nations patrol and, what is more important, any such border force could function only at the request of Egypt and Israel after they had reached agreement on how and where it should serve. In the current state of tension, Egypt and Israel can agree on nothing.

A border patrol would presumably be assigned to a demilitarized zone between the two enemies, but Israel would block any move to carve such a zone from territory she claims on the ground that this would be a step toward eventual surrender of that territory. The government of Premier Ben-Gurion has steadfastly refused to consider any compromise involving substantial alteration of present boundaries.

With the continuing flow of Communist arms into Egypt, the tension increases and the demand of the Israel government for military help from the United States grows more insistent. The clamor of election year politics underscores this demand. The Israelis claim that Egypt has already achieved superiority in arms and there is some evidence to support the claim.

Part of the deal by which Moscow intervened to upset the balance of power in the Middle East called for delivery of 200 Russian MIGs. While, comparatively speaking, the MIG is an obsolete plane, it is superior to anything that Israel has. The deal is said to include six submarines and there have been recent reports of Egyptian crews going behind the Iron Curtain for training with Soviet submarines.

Almost daily news stories contribute to the tension and the growing fear felt by Israel, a nation of some 2,000,000 people, surrounded by 40,000,000 Arabs. From Cairo the Egyptians recently reported their first maneuvers, held on Israel's

Political Scientists Reconsidering Whether Primaries Work Better Than Conventions

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb 4.

NOW is the time for all good men—and women—to come to the aid of their party if they want to take a more effective part in the selecting of public officials from President to dogcatcher.

During the next seven months the politicians and pressure groups will be busier than usual taking over the machinery of the caucuses, primaries and conventions that pick the candidates whose names appear on the election ballot.

Under the two-party system, voters in these elections are often given only a bare choice between two candidates for the same office. One or both may be qualified for the job or they may be puppets of the politicians and special interests.

That wise British observer, James Bryce, saw realities of the system when he wrote in "The American Commonwealth":

"In every American election there are two acts of choice, two periods of contest. The first is the selection of the candidate from within the party by the party; the other is the struggle between the parties for the place. Frequently the former of these struggles is the more important, more keenly fought over, than the latter."

A cynical observation has been that you don't have to fool all the people all the time to be elected, you have to fool only 50 per cent. When rank-and-file voters abstain from taking part in caucuses, primaries and convention and leave the pre-election machinery to politicians and pressure groups this percentage is greatly reduced. In many instances, the actual picking of the candidates whose names go on the ballot can be done by small groups, usually office-holders or would-be office holders who represent less than 5 per cent of the voters.

For presidential candidates, Missouri is in many ways typical of states not having preference primaries, which at least give ordinary voters an opportunity to express their personal choice with a minimum of time effort. The Missouri system of local meetings and congressional district and state conventions for the nominating and electing of delegates to the national party convention is described in a five-volume study of the 1952 presidential campaign prepared under the auspices of the American Political Science Foundation with the co-operation of the Brookings Institution of Washington.

The factual studies of the state's pre-convention and election activity were prepared by political science professors at Washington University and the University of Missouri. The entire survey of the 48 states, territories and the District of Columbia was written by three well known political scientists, Paul T. David, Malcolm Moos and Ralph T. Goldman. Their conclusion about the Missouri system was:

"A review of the delegate selection process in Missouri would seem to provide grounds for an argument that democratic party control was absent throughout. Less than 5 per cent, and probably not more than 2 or 3 per cent, of the voters in each party participated in any manner in the series of meetings and conventions that culminated in the selection of national convention delegates.

"In some cases no actual public gatherings were held at the lowest party organization levels and therefore delegates to the next in the hierarchy of conventions were handpicked even more than usual by local party officers and party leaders. In the great majority of cases the ward and township meetings were perfunctory, cut and dried affairs, with the results a foregone conclusion to any person acquainted with the local political scene. The same was true of many of the district conventions.

"Yet these circumstances do not support the thesis that the Missouri delegates to the national convention did not represent opinion in their respective state parties. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe that delegates did take seriously their representative function and did mirror party views on prospective presidential candidates to a considerable degree. Local party leaders, or combinations of such leaders, in most cases managed the local conventions but were well aware of grass-roots feeling and were generally inclined to view it with respect. Their responsiveness to rank-and-file sentiment may have been self-serving but seems to have been nonetheless real."

The authors were impressed by the report by Juhn W. Schwada, assistant professor of political science at Missouri University, on a Republican meeting in St. Louis's Fifth ward which selected delegates to the eleventh congressional district convention. The district convention, under the Missouri system, was entitled to nominate its own delegates to the national convention. This ward meeting, attended by 38 persons, lasted 18 minutes.

"The nominating committee took 45 seconds to select the eleventh district delegates," the report said. "Former State Representative Peter Ferrara closed the meeting with the following: 'You have seen here tonight a good example of real democracy in action. This meeting has given the voters in the whole ward an opportunity to vote for their own choice of delegates to the nominating convention.'"

Schwada also reported this Republican situation: "In St. Louis county, the 'county convention' turned out to be a meeting of the county committee, which constituted itself a convention and made its 28 members the only voting delegates. These 28 selected the county's delegates to the district and state conventions. Five persons other than the county committee members were present."

The report on how the 42 delegates to the Democratic national convention were chosen was written by Carl A. McCandless, associate professor political science, and David W. Salmon, associate professor of political science, both of Washington University. The formal election was made by the state convention at Jefferson City with an authorized voting strength of 1199 delegates. The 42 national convention delegates had 34 votes because some cast only half votes.

The report said the St. Louis delegates were elected from wards directly to the state convention rather than to a city convention comparable to the county conventions.

"Elsewhere," the report said, "the selection of township and ward delegates went on about as usual. Party committeemen responsible for arranging the mass meetings had little difficulty in handpicking their delegates. In the outstate townships the meetings consisted of little more than the committeeman, committeewoman and a few faithful workers. Although the ward and township committeemen were usually consulted in drafting the slate of delegates, those chosen by county conventions generally represented persons on whom the county and district leaders had agreed."

Of the makeup of the 42 national delegates the report said:

"Many of the delegates held elective state offices. Two were state senators, two were mayors, one was a representative in the lower house of the state legislature, one a county prosecuting attorney, one the treasurer and another the sheriff of St. Louis. Most were active workers on the precinct, county and state levels. Five members of the delegation had also served at the 1940 national convention, four in 1944 and five in 1948."

Political scientists, who once almost unanimously advocated primaries for measuring popular favor and disfavor of presidential aspirants, are no longer certain they are reliable or even desirable methods for influencing the national conventions.

There are several reasons for the changed attitude which may be summarized as follows:

1. Convention delegates, in the absence of explicit authority, do not feel bound by the primary returns.

2. All aspirants do not enter all primaries.

3. "Favorite son" candidates with strong local influence can usually get more votes than national candidates.

4. Conflicting dates of primaries make it impossible for candidates, particularly those who already hold public office, to campaign in a large number of states.

5. The cost of entering a large number of primaries is prohibitive for most candidates.

The students of politics are generally convinced, however, that for state and local offices primaries produce better candidates than the older caucus and convention systems which the professional politicians often ran in disregard of popular sentiment.

The American system, in comparison with the British, French and German parliamentary methods of selecting candidates for national and state offices, gives the ordinary voter the opportunity to participate actively in the naming candidates in the election. It is easier to vote in a primary than to attend precinct, ward and county meetings or conventions, but active participation in the last named is far more effective because a comparatively small number make the decisions.

Members of trade unions, civic groups, leagues of women voters and party discussion clubs are beginning to take a more active interest in primaries and party nominating conventions. The means of expressing public opinion are available even though the professional politicians are in charge of the machinery. The two-party system has its faults but political scientists and politicians agree that it can be made to work fairly and efficiently when a local electorate takes enough interest to make it work.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Appetite for Conquest

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

To Sir Anthony Eden's rumored proposal that Israel yield territory to Egypt and Jordan in the quixotic hope that this might buy peace, we trust that Secretary of State Dulles will cite Mr. Dulles's own eloquent words, which may be found on page 25 of "War or Peace," published in 1950.

Mr. Dulles wrote: "Strong nations which want peace cannot buy it by throwing pieces of weaker nations into the jaws of ambitious despots. That only makes them more rapacious."

If, however, Mr. Dulles is restrained by a sense of modesty from accepting this excellent piece of advice, he may find encouragement in a similar foreign policy statement by President Eisenhower.

On Oct. 24, 1952, while making a campaign speech in Detroit, Dwight D. Eisenhower said: "To vacillate, to hesitate—to appease even by merely betraying unsteady purpose—is to feed a dictator's appetite for conquest and to invite war itself."

One Reader's Penalty

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

For publishing an article such as the one recently headed "South Is Still Fuming But Knows It Cannot Beat Segregation," the Post-Dispatch should be tarred and feathered and run out of town on a rail.

Prices at Our Hotels

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Alfred Stern's letter about taxi rates was very interesting. I come to St. Louis about every three weeks and have been doing this for many years. In the past six months the hotel rate has increased three times.

When you now make a long distance call from your hotel and the call is $2.75, including tax, the hotel adds a service charge of 50 cents for placing the call.

I like your fine city, its people and the spirit of friendliness. It would be nice if the hotels would get their house in order on some of their increases, and I am sure more people would like to come to your fine city. J. P. MALONE.

In Words and Pictures

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

You are to be congratulated on the account in last Sunday's PICTURES describing the dedication of a Torah, a ceremony of interest particularly to Orthodox Jewish people; a difficult and strange subject was made intelligible. The depiction in pictures by Sam Caldwell and words by Robert E. Hannon was faithful even in detail. The whole story was a job well done.

Integrating the News

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It is almost a daily habit of mine to read your paper; therefore I feel entitled to share a concern with you.

On the subject of integration of the races you have taken a sensible democratic position. You tend to support the Supreme Court decision. You report favorably the interracial character of big league baseball and other sports. You were critical of the recent vote in Virginia which seeks to by-pass the abolition of segregation. For this I am grateful.

Yet, contrary to the above attitude, you still practice segregation in your news reporting. Why?

Do your reporters unconsciously follow the pattern of segregation? It would be just as logical to identify all those having red hair, big feet, or long noses, when they chance to get into trouble.

Since this policy is contradictory of your platform to "always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice" it would certainly contribute to our democratic principles if you could simply report a man as a man regardless of pigmentation.

Hothouse Offerings

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I read the remarks of Senator Morse to the Teamsters as reported in the Post-Dispatch. Now, there's a full-blown, super-giant, double-and-fringed petunia for you, and one not born to blush unseen. May he also bloom loud until next November.

DWARF SINGLE.

Terre Haute, Ind.

I should like to do my bit to lessen the loneliness of "Little Petunia." Not only do I rate Ike a miserable President but I believe many millions in this nation to whom country means more than party, agree with Petunia and me.

In my book there are more weak spots in Ike's record as President than in the record of any President since McKinley, the first I lived through as an adult. Our nation and the world need a lot more in our White House than a big grin, hearty hand-shake, a Five-Star golfer and an over-tender concern for G.M., Texas oil and the like.

DON'T LIKE IKE

Great Examples

This year will see centennial celebrations for two great American leaders, Woodrow Wilson, President, 1913-1921, and Louis D. Brandeis, Supreme Court Justice, 1916-1939.

The centenary of the birth of Justice Brandeis occurs Nov. 13 and that of Woodrow Wilson not until Dec. 28. But already in the second month of the year the memorial services have begun. Between now and their respective anniversaries, convocations and public meetings will be held in many cities and at leading universities.

If the nation did less it would be guilty of ingratitude. Woodrow Wilson was one of our most progressive, far-sighted Presidents, and Louis Brandeis, Wilson's second appointee to the Supreme Court, one of our most distinguished jurists. We all will do well to reflect on their lives, their contribution to government and their example as citizens as well as public figures.

Probably no President has ever been more gifted intellectually than was Wilson, the one-time head of Princeton University. Yet before he was called to the White House, he had more than proved himself in the practical politics of the Governor's chair at Trenton, N.J. He had his faults, but he had the superb virtues of vision, integrity, and perseverance. The reforms of his "New Freedom" included the creation of the Federal Reserve Banking System, the Clayton Anti-Trust Act, establishment of the Federal Trade Commission and the Tariff Commission and many other constructive steps to protect the interests of ordinary citizens.

Thus the progressivism of the first Wilson Administration preceded by two decades the New Deal of Franklin D. Roosevelt. And the latter was expanded in the Truman Administration and now is largely adopted by the G.O.P. Administration of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Partisan politics got into foreign policy in 1918 and 1919 and Wilson was defeated in his plan to make the United States a member of the League of Nations. But his defeat was that of the pioneer whose efforts open the way of the future. The Yale historian, Charles Seymour, writing in the Dictionary of American Biography before the creation of the United Nations, said:

> It was Wilson who, by his qualities and not merely because of his office, capitalized the tragic lessons of the war and wakened the world to a great vision. Just as it is certain that the nations will pursue the hope of establishing an international organization for the guarantee of peace, so it is certain that Wilson will remain historically the eminent prophet of that better world.

Inevitably a leader such as Wilson found and drafted the services of a Louis Brandeis. Disappointed that he could not enlist this very able lawyer, advocate and publicist for his Cabinet in 1913, he dared to make the first appointment of a Jew to the Supreme Court three years later. Four long months the bitter battle raged. Six past presidents of the American Bar Association, including William Howard Taft, signed a public statement that Brandeis was "not a fit person to be a member of the Supreme Court." A seventh also denounced the selection.

But Wilson knew why he had appointed Brandeis. Returning the fight but on the highest plane, the President told the Senate: "This friend of justice and of men will ornament the high court of which we are all so justly proud. I cannot speak too highly of his knowledge of modern economic conditions and of the way they bear upon the masses of the people, or of his genius in getting persons to unite in common and harmonious action and look with frank and kindly eyes into each other's minds. . . ." These words hardly more than suggest the quality as well as intensity of Wilson's successful appeal for confirmation.

Afterward many men were ashamed. Taft apologized. Borah said his "Nay" vote was the one above all others in his career he wished he could change. And when Brandeis retired in 1939, those who had condemned him 23 years earlier joined in praising his hundreds of opinions and utterances on the side of freedom and justice and the common man.

This is a presidential election year. In it the temptation will be strong to distract, to distort, to confuse, to mislead. The careers of Woodrow Wilson and Louis D. Brandeis remind us how straightforward and honest public men can be. It is a fortunate fate that sets them before us in the political year of 1956 as examples of American leadership.

Change at Tuscaloosa

The University of Alabama was founded in 1831. That makes it 125 years old and one of the oldest state universities in the country. Not until last Wednesday had it admitted to its classes any students who were not white. But on Feb. 1 it enrolled in its College of Education, Arthurine J. Lucy, a secretary from Birmingham, and the old racial regulation was set aside.

The South is taking a lot of criticism these days for its opposition to the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools. All the more reason to applaud Alabama and its university at Tuscaloosa for ending a prejudice that had stood for a century and a quarter. The world does move.

The Jayhawkers' Fight

Gov. Fred Hall of Kansas, who gained national attention with forthright and enlightened advice to the Republican party, faces a hard fight with the party's old guard in the Sunflower state.

Kansas has approached the one-party status of the Deep South, for reasons also partly traceable to the bitterness of the Civil War. Often the Republican primary offers the state its most significant choice of candidates. And a few days ago State Representative Warren W. Shaw, Topeka lawyer, filed as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Mr. Shaw has challenged Gov. Hall on two main issues. The challenger is against the new Hall budget and any tax increases, and he opposes the Governor's courageous veto of a "right-to-work" bill aimed at labor union security.

With the party's old guard against him, Gov. Hall will have to count on independent support and labor votes to retain office. But there is one other issue which may work to his advantage. It involves J. Wesley Roberts, who resigned as Republican national chairman because of a Kansas scandal.

A legislative committee found Mr. Roberts had "violated the spirit" of state lobby laws by taking a fee for the sale of a hospital to the state. Mr. Shaw championed Mr. Roberts and even presented him with a silver platter for his party service. The new candidate's defense on this point is that he was an attorney for Roberts, and only presented the platter because he was asked to do so by a group whose names were on it—including President Eisenhower.

Naturally, in the President's home state, a campaign struggle involves counter claims as to which candidate is the best Eisenhower man. But since nearly all Kansas Republicans are Eisenhower men, no peace treaty will be signed that way. As The Kansas City Star reported: "A party divided over its state government, and squabbling in its legislative session, enters a national election year with chips on its shoulders and knives in its belts." That description fits the original Kansas Jayhawkers, so maybe there is still only one way to fight out politics in Kansas. That is hard.

Enough Vague Talk

The time has come to stop talking generalities, and to start acting in specific ways, with respect to the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. That, in capsule form, is the substance of an able report to the congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy by a citizens' panel led by Robert McKinney of New Mexico.

The report will strike a strong response among Americans who are getting tired of our Government's vague references to "atoms for peace" while we continue a super-secret program still devoted overwhelmingly to weapons. Not that anybody wants the weapons program neglected, in the present state of the world. But if our country seeks to be a real leader in "atoms for peace," it must start performing, instead of just fuzzily promising, in this area also.

The McKinney report pins down this responsibility by calling for specific commitments to help build outside the United States in the next five years as much atomic power capacity as we build within our borders. And it strongly recommends that no less than a million kilowatts of generating capacity be the goal in each case.

Central to the report is the idea that truly important steps must now be taken for a truly important relaxation of secrecy. Instead of viewing all atomic information as "born classified," the panel would free all facts about reactor technology of all restrictions. It would concentrate secrecy upon weapons specifically, and end the dual system which treats atomic information as different from other defense information.

Chairman Strauss of the AEC declares, with characteristic vagueness, that new proposals for greater aid to friendly countries and greater effort at home are being prepared. The promise must be matched against Mr. Strauss's past performance, and the McKinney panel obviously found it inadequate.

Atomic power, says the panel, "may be the most tangible symbol of America's will to peace through the peaceful atom. . . . Peaceful uses of atomic energy will inevitably be developed throughout the world. The United States must lead."

But are we leading? There is grave reason to doubt it. That is why the McKinney panel's recommendations should be studied most seriously by the congressional and administrative leaders responsible for atomic energy.

Dirksen Takes His Stand

Senator Dirksen has now declared himself on the bill to exempt natural gas from federal regulation. The Illinois Republican is for the exemption. He says the Fulbright-Harris bill is needed to protect the natural gas industry from "harassing" regulation. Apparently Senator Dirksen does not trust the Federal Power Commission, even though it is well filled with Eisenhower appointees, to be fair to the gas industry.

This is a stand that the gas users of Illinois doubtless will remember and if Senator Dirksen's vote is one of those by which the exemption narrowly passes this coming week, it will be remembered all the more in November when the Senator runs for re-election.

With Senator Dirksen for the bill and Senators Hennings, Symington and Douglas against it, the Missouri and Illinois Senators will vote 3 to 1 against the powerful oil and gas lobby and on the side of the consumers. That would be a wholesome ratio for the entire Senate.

Better Than Searching Graves

If Shakespeare really invoked a curse on those who would disturb his bones—and there are doubts that the inscription on his grave came from his hand—he was a genius of foresight as well as of the drama. Look at what has been done to other graves, mostly for the sake of showing that Shakespeare did not write Shakespeare's plays. Now the Kentish tomb of Sir Thomas Walsingham is to be opened in the hope that it will yield evidence that the plays were by his friend, Christopher Marlowe.

Why there is such a continuing effort to write Marlowe's name or those of Sir Francis Bacon or the Earl of Oxford on the title-page of "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" is an intriguing mystery. Some say that learned scholars cannot abide the thought that an unlettered man wrote so magnificently. But that hardly fits the facts. After all, Ignatius Donnelly—who wrote "The Great Cryptogram" in 1888 as a Baconite—was not a man of the academy. This Minnesota Legislator and Congressman who deserted the Republicans after the Civil War to become a Granger and then leader of the Populists is remembered as the agrarian advocate of reforms which now seem modest enough, but which for a while set the country on its ear.

This friendly and popular politician, however, has a neglected claim to fame of a sort. He makes many contemporary expounders of odd theories seem rather old-hat. Not only did he write a book demonstrating (to his satisfaction) that Shakespeare was really Bacon, or that Bacon was Shakespeare. He wrote another to back up Plato's story of lost Atlantis, and still another—long before Velekovsky put pen to paper—to argue that the earth's gravel, clay and silt were proof of a collision with a mighty comet.

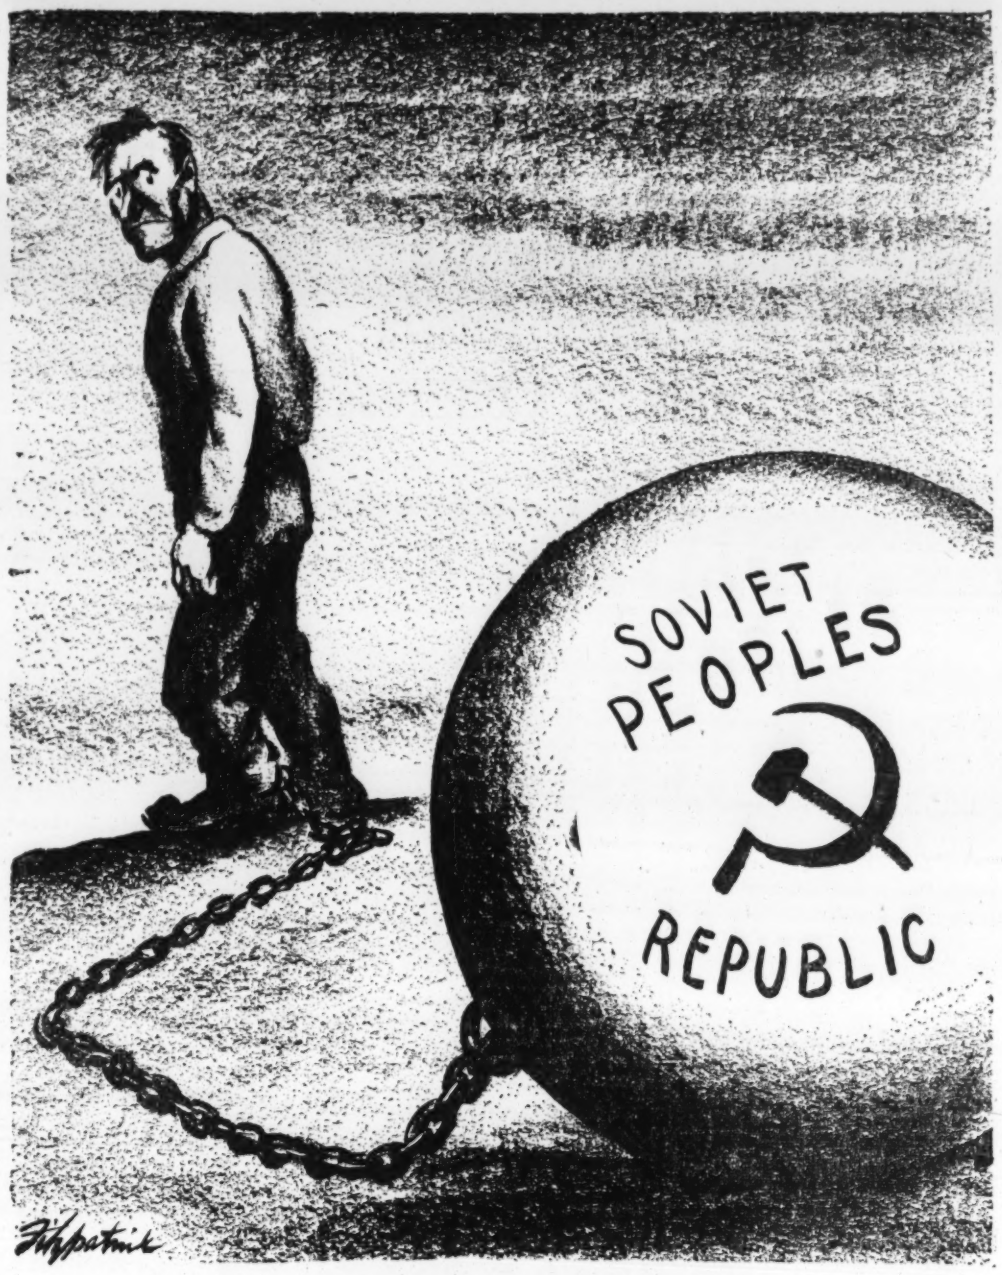

That Donnelly was accepted as a contributor to The North American Review indicates that he was not taken lightly. But it is just as well that the American people paid less attention to his geology, history and literary scholarship than to his arguments against monopoly and for reform through the ballot box. Grave-searching is old-hat; not so democracy.

More Than Fence and Flowers

The National Park Service's request for a supplemental appropriation of $150,000 for the further enhancement of the Old Courthouse in St. Louis is a recognition of the Government's obligation to complete the riverfront memorial. Now that the Administration has made this acknowledgement, Congress should concur in it, not only by approving the $150,000 supplemental appropriation out of this year's budget, but by approving the $5,000,000 requested by St. Louis area Congressmen out of next year's budget.

The smaller sum would be used only for a granite and iron fence around the building and some flowerbeds within the fence.

The fence and the flowers might be pretty, but they do not approximate the concept of the national monument which the Government and the city agreed to develop and for which St. Louis long ago took 40 blocks of property off its tax books, not to mention the voting of a $7,500,000 bond issue. A gate in a fence is no substitute for the "Gateway to the West."

THE NEW COLONIALISM

Mencken, the Uncommon Scold

The Mirror of Public Opinion

If he had died a generation sooner, college students would have skipped classes to mourn his loss; he was their demi-god who cut down false images with a meat-ax; he assailed education, radio, marriage, Communism and osteopathy impartially.

From Time Magazine

Henry Louis Mencken's death will send a twinge of nostalgia to many a middle-aged American—a feeling which will be difficult to explain to his son or daughter.

A generation ago, Mencken's passing would have caused wholesale sorrow in certain speakeasies and newspaper city rooms.

College students would have cut classes for a day to mourn the loss of the stormiest figure on the United States conversational scene.

Henry L. Mencken

And in many a parish house and political forum, his death would have been considered an act of God.

Mencken was an editor of surpassing skill, a journalist of scintillating brilliance, a rare humorist and a savage critic. For years he was the brightest star on the Baltimore *Sun*papers. He was the forward lance in the march of American letters from John Fox Jr. ("The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come") to Sinclair Lewis, helped kill off much of the trash in American writing.

For the Jazz-Age Iconoclast

Many of the best United States writers of the century (Lewis, Dreiser, Cather, Pound, Fitzgerald) were discovered or trundled by Mencken in his happy days as co-editor (with George Jean Nathan) of the Smart Set (1914-23) and the old American Mercury (1924-33).

He took out after United States criticism, which he said "smells of the pulpit, the chautauqua, the schoolroom."

For a generation of jazz-age iconoclasts, Mencken was a demigod who cut down false idols with a meat-ax.

He fought the censors and prohibitors like an enraged impala, and destroyed shibboleths with a whimsical delight that has seldom been equaled.

On his overheated typewriter he minted words and phrases that became part of the national currency: "booboisie," "bozart," "Comstockery," "Bible Belt."

With roars of laughter, Mencken insulted at least half his countrymen as "morons" and "boobs" led by "medicine men."

A vociferous agnostic, he roared against the "whooping soul-savers." (One of his favorite letter endings: "I pray for you incessantly.") Religion, he maintained, was simply a "conditioned reflex."

His View of the New Deal

Politicians were barbecued with relish. In 1938, during an unhappy interlude as editor of the Baltimore Evening Sun, he covered the editorial page with 1,000,075 dots, each representing "one person in the Federal Government's immense corps of jobholders."

The New Deal was "simply an amorphous agglomeration of discordant hooeys." But Mencken was politically impartial, and attacked Hoover, Coolidge, Wilson and Lincoln with the same vicious delight. And he backed Roosevelt for a third term because, he said, "he ought to be made to bury his own dead horse."

His sense of humor was gargantuan and as unsubtle as a kick in the pants. On his one visit to Hollywood, he borrowed Actor Tom Mix's white, initialed and well-known car and parked it outside a notorious brothel.

Inside with his drunken pals, he virtuously kept his hat on, jammed a cigar in his mouth and, seated at the piano, kept pounding out "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

He delighted in autographing Gideon Bibles "with the compliments of the author," boasted that he liked to "swear in the presence of ladies and archdeacons."

To him, everything was a racket—God, education, radio, marriage, children, Communism, astronomy ("a lot of pishposh"), osteopathy, Hollywood.

In 1930, after 50 years of rollicking bachelorhood and contempt for the institution of marriage, Mencken sheepishly announced his own engagement. It was a national sensation.

Mencken took the hilarity in good grace. "Getting married," he said, "like getting hanged, is probably a lot less dreadful than it has been made out." The marriage was a gentle and happy one.

It ended with Sara Mencken's death, in 1935, of meningitis.

Day Faded With Depression

A lot of Mencken's caterwauling was merely the caprice of a man who doted on the outrageous. Few believed that he actually deplored democracy.

His remark that "the atomic bomb is the greatest of all American achievements and one of the imperishable glories of Christianity" was shocking. But its sole intention was to shock.

"My writings, such as they are, have only one purpose," he once said "—to attain for H. L. Mencken that feeling of tension relieved and function achieved which a cow enjoys on giving milk."

But on many matters he was as earnest as a sword. It took real courage to risk jail and defy Boston's Watch & Ward society by selling his banned Mercury on Brimstone corner.

He was passionately sincere in his famed, acid dispatches to the Evening Sun on the Scopes "monkey" trial of 1925.

Mencken's day faded fast. First the depression and then the repeal of prohibition outdated both him and his straw men.

He tried to laugh off the depression. But the college men, now unemployed, who had always laughed with Mencken, failed to get the joke.

The old Mercury lost its following, and less than five years later many a bright college boy did not know who Mencken was.

At a political convention, when a photographer asked him his name and occupation, Mencken solemnly wrote: "Retired six-day bicycle rider."

Under the Hardboiled Shell

But in his sundown, Mencken found new activities that assured his reputation as a man of letters. His monumental "American Language," his three-volume autobiography (a final volume, covering Mencken's days as a magazine editor, will be published in 50 years) and "A New Dictionary of Quotations," all written just before and during World War II, will be read long after his yellowed news clips and acid essays are forgotten.

Under his hardboiled shell Mencken was a kindly man, with a dozen godchildren, and legions of good friends who disagreed with every one of his opinions and prejudices.

He had a passion for great literature, classical music and for people (even preachers, politicians and boobs).

He liked nothing better than a terrapin dinner, washed down with good beer (and a toast to Lydia E. Pinkham), followed by an Upmann cigar and an evening of sparkling conversation.

In his robust way, he loved America, once said: "As an American I naturally spend most of my time laughing."

Profiles of the Winds

(On a TV Weather Chart)

From The Christian Science Monitor.

LONDON.

Mr. McAllen, Mr. Cowling, Mr. Dean,
Televisioning the weather for the BBC,
With the lines of pressure firm upon your charts
And the black-blobbed fronts inexorable
Everything so sharp and clear, except the forecast,
There's one thing wrong (I think when viewing)
That you do not show the winds as characters,
Puffing or whistling from the compass points across the painted sea,
As our cartographers were wont to do in other times
With less technique,
But possibly more reason,
For every wind is in his own humor
And it takes all kinds to make an island.

The west wind, the urgent queen,
Trailing her gray train endlessly across the sky,
Rushing in the afternoon
Busily watering her gardens,
Hurrying with bucket-slopping haste
From green to green to make all greener:
And then in the brilliant night serene and quiet
Formally dressed in the puffs and flounces of the clouds
On the dark balcony of the rooftops
Watching the great winged moon and the bright stars
Fast-flying in formation overhead.

And the south wind, the commoner,
The wind of moods,
Boisterous but warm
And sometimes gentle as a summer's afternoon,
Bowling its clouds
Or drifting slowly down the stream of the sky
Trailing its fingers,
And sometimes doodling idle pictures in an open sketchbook.

The east wind, analytical,
Cold, penetrating, sharp,
The wind that sees so clearly with its flower-blue eyes
But whose clarity is not the warming kind.
The northwest wind, the sailor wind, piling up the tides,
Pushing the great green rollers up the steep hills of the sea,
The bluff wind with the rough red weather-beaten cheeks,
Slapping its arms across its chest,
Stamping its black and glistening rubber boots,
And glowering kindly out from under the sailor's tussock eyebrows.

And the north wind, raw,
But somehow often comforting
Ruffling the white pages of a nursery book,
The wind with the child's compassion for the robin in the snow
And the child's delight in the magic flight downhill
And the father's snugness in the chair by the leaping fire.
Such characters declare the weather cannot be Foretold with lines of pressure firm upon a chart
For the weather is a play
And the play not written yet.
Therefore the weather man is not a forecaster
But rather a dramatic critic.
And this, I'd say, for meteorologists is comforting,
For we do not expect a critic to be right or wrong
But only interesting. Do you not agree
Mr. McAllen, Mr. Cowling, Mr. Dean?

The TRUMAN MEMOIRS

Communists Invade South Korea . . . Decision to Oppose Aggression But Avoid Bringing on Third World War.

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
Thirty-third President of the United States.

THIRTEENTH ARTICLE, VOLUME II

INTELLIGENCE reports from Korea in the spring of 1950 indicated that the North Koreans were steadily continuing their build-up of forces and that they were continuing to send guerrilla groups into South Korea.

There were continuing incidents along the 38th Parallel where armed units faced each other.

Throughout the spring, the Central Intelligence reports said that the North Koreans might at any time decide to change from isolated raids to a full-scale attack. There was no information to give any clue as to whether an attack was certain, or when it was likely to come. But this did not apply alone to Korea. These same reports also told me, repeatedly, that there were any number of other spots in the world where the Russians "possessed the capability" to attack.

On Saturday, June 24th, 1950 I was in Independence, Missouri, to spend the week end with my family and to attend to some personal family business.

It was a little after ten in the evening, and we were sitting in the library of our home on North Delaware Street when the telephone rang. It was the Secretary of State calling from his home in Maryland.

"Mr. President," said Dean Acheson, "I have very serious news. The North Koreans have invaded South Korea."

My first reaction was that I must get back to the Capital, and I told Acheson so. He explained, however, that details were not yet available and that he thought I need not rush back until he called me again with further information. In the meantime, he suggested to me that we should ask the United Nations Security Council to hold a meeting at once and declare that an act of aggression had been committed against the Republic of Korea. I told him that I agreed.

U.N. Security Council Called into Session.

Acheson's next call came through around 11:30 Sunday morning, just as we were getting ready to sit down for an early Sunday dinner.

Acheson reported that the U.N. Security Council had been called into emergency session. Additional reports had been received from Korea and there was no doubt that an all-out invasion was under way there. The Security Council, Acheson said, would probably call for a cease-fire, but we had to expect that the U. N. order would be ignored. Some decision would have to be made at once as to the degree of aid or encouragement which our government was willing to extend to the Republic of Korea.

I asked Acheson to get together with the Service Secretaries and the Chiefs of Staff and start working on recommendations for me. I informed the Secretary I was returning to Washington at once.

The plane left the Kansas City Municipal Airport at 2 o'clock, and it took just a little over three hours to make the trip to Washington. I had time to think aboard the plane.

Communism was acting in Korea just as Hitler, Mussolini, and the Japanese had acted ten, fifteen and twenty years earlier. I felt certain that if South Korea was allowed to fall, Communist leaders would be emboldened to override nations closer to our own shores. If the Communists were permitted to force their way into the Republic of Korea without opposition from the Free World, no small nation would have the courage to resist threats and aggression by stronger Communist neighbors. If this were allowed to go unchallenged it would mean a third World War, just as similar incidents had brought on the second World War. It was also clear to me that the foundations and the principles of the United Nations were at stake unless this unprovoked attack on Korea could be stopped.

Emergency Meeting at Blair House.

When the "Independence" landed, Secretary of State Acheson was waiting for me at the airport as was Secretary of Defense Johnson, who himself had arrived only a short while before. We hurried to Blair House where we were joined by the other conferees: Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews, and Secretary of the Air Force Thomas Finletter, General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, the Army Chief General Collins, the Air Force Chief General Vandenberg, and Admiral Forrest Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations. Acheson was accompanied by Under Secretary Webb, Assistant Secretaries Dean Rusk and John Hickerson, and Ambassador-at-Large Philip Jessup.

It was late, and we went at once to the dining room for dinner. I asked that no discussion take place until dinner was served and over and the Blair House staff had withdrawn. I called on Dean Acheson first to give us a detailed picture of the situation. Acheson read us the first report that had been received by the State Department from our Ambassador in Seoul, Korea, at 9:26 the preceding evening:

"According to Korean army reports * * * North Korean forces invaded ROK territory at several points this morning * * * About 6 a.m. North Korean infantry commenced crossing parallel in Ongjin area, Kaesong area, Chunchon area and amphibious landing was reportedly made south of Kangnung on east coast. Kaesong was reportedly captured at 9 a.m., with some 10 North Korean tanks participating in operation. North Korean forces, spearheaded by tanks, reportedly closing in on Chunchon.

"It would appear from nature of attack and manner in which it was launched that it constitutes all-out offensive against ROK."

Security Council Action—Recommendations.

Earlier that Sunday evening, Acheson reported, the Security Council of the United Nations had, by a vote of nine to nothing, approved a resolution declaring that a breach of the peace had been committed by the North Korean action and ordering the North Koreans to cease their action and withdraw their forces.

I then called on Acheson to present the recommendations which the State and Defense Departments had prepared. He presented the following recommendations for immediate action:

1. That MacArthur should evacuate the Americans from Korea—including the dependents of the Military Mission—and, in order to do so, should keep open the Kimpo and other airports, repelling all hostile attacks thereon. In doing this, his air forces should stay south of the 38th Parallel.

2. MacArthur should be instructed to get ammunition and supplies to the Korean army by airdrop and otherwise.

3. That the Seventh Fleet should be ordered into the Formosa Straits to prevent the conflict from spreading to that area. The Seventh Fleet should be ordered from Cavite north at once. We should make a statement that the Fleet would repel any attack on Formosa and that no attacks should be made from Formosa on the mainland.

At this point I interrupted to say that the Seventh Fleet should be ordered north at once, but that I wanted to withhold making any statement until the fleet was in position.

After this report I asked each person in turn to state his agreement or disagreement and any views he might have in addition. Two things stand out in this discussion. One was the complete, almost unspoken acceptance on the part of everyone that whatever had to be done to meet this aggression had to be done. There was no suggestion from anyone that either the United Nations or the United States could back away from it. This was the test of all the talk of the last five years of collective security. The other point which stands out in my mind from the discussion was the difference in view of what might be called for. Vandenberg and Sherman thought that air and naval aid might be enough. Collins said that if the Korean army was really broken, ground forces would be necessary.

Recommendations Ordered into Effect.

I then directed that orders be issued to put the three recommendations into immediate effect.

General Collins reported that he had a teletype conference with General MacArthur. The Far East Commander, he told us, was ready to ship ammunition and supplies to Korea as soon as he received the green light.

I expressed the opinion that the Russians were trying to get Korea by default, gambling that we would be afraid of starting a third World War and would offer no resistance. I thought that we were still holding the stronger hand, although how much stronger, it was hard to tell.

I instructed the service chiefs to prepare the necessary orders for the eventual use of American units if the United Nations should call for action against North Korea, and meanwhile, General MacArthur was directed to send a survey party to Korea to find out what kind of aid would be most effective and how the military forces available to the Far East commander might be used.

As the meeting adjourned, Acheson showed me a message which had reached him from John Foster Dulles who had just returned to Tokyo from Korea. For some time Dulles had been at work for the State Department on the preparation of the peace treaty with Japan, and he, too, seemed to have little doubt about the course of action we had to take.

"It is possible," his message read, "that South Koreans may themselves contain and repulse attack, and, if so, this is best way. If, however, it appears they cannot do so then we believe that U.S. force should be used even though this risks Russian counter moves. To sit by while Korea is overrun by unprovoked armed attack would start disastrous chain of events leading most probably to world war."

Alarming Message from Gen. MacArthur.

Throughout Monday the situation in Korea deteriorated rapidly. I called another meeting at Blair House Monday night. McArthur's latest message was alarming:

"South Korean units unable to resist determined Northern offensive. Contributory factor exclusive enemy possession of tanks and fighter planes * * * our estimate is that complete collapse is imminent."

There was no doubt! The Republic of Korea needed help at once if it was not to be overrun.

I directed the Secretary of Defense to call General MacArthur on the scrambler phone and to tell him in person what my instructions were. He was to use air and naval forces to support the Republic of Korea with air and naval elements of his command, but only south of the 38th Parallel.

Meanwhile the Security Council of the United Nations met again and adopted on June 27th the resolution calling on all members of the U. N. to give assistance to South Korea.

That same morning, Tuesday, I asked a group of Congressional leaders to meet with me so that I might inform them on the events and the decisions of the past few days.

The Congressional leaders approved of my action. On that same day, Thomas E. Dewey, Republican leader, pledged his full support.

Our allies and friends abroad were informed through our diplomatic representatives that it was our feeling that it was essential to the maintenance of peace that this armed aggression against a free nation be met firmly. We let it be known that we considered the Korean situation vital as a symbol of the strength and determination of the West.

National Security Council Meeting.

The top level policy discussions were continued on Wednesday, June 28th, when I opened another meeting of the National Security Council.

Averell Harriman, who had just arrived from Europe, observed that the people there had been gravely concerned lest we fail to meet the challenge in Korea. After my decision had been announced, he said, there had been a general feeling of relief, since it had been believed that disaster would otherwise be certain.

The Secretary of the Air Force, Thomas Finletter, brought up the question of mutual understanding between Washington and the Far East Command in Tokyo. He felt that personal contact might help us avoid mistakes, and suggested that General Vandenberg be sent over to inform General MacArthur more specifically on the thinking in Washington.

It was my opinion, however, that at the present moment the Chiefs of Staff were most urgently needed in Washington. Nevertheless, I understood the need for mutual understanding between Washington and Tokyo, and expressed my regret that General MacArthur had so consistently declined all invitations to return to the United States for even a short visit. There had been no opportunity for him to meet me as Commander-in-Chief. I felt that if the Korean conflict was prolonged, I would want to see General MacArthur.

The National Security Council met again Thursday, when Secretary of Defense Johnson introduced a proposed directive to General MacArthur. The final paragraph of this proposed directive, however, permitted an implication that we were planning to go to war against the Soviet Union. I stated categorically that I did not wish to see even the slightest implication of such a plan. I wanted to take every step necessary to push the North Koreans back behind the 38th Parallel. But, I wanted to be sure that we would not become so deeply committed in Korea that we could not take care of such other situations as might develop.

Secretary Pace expressed the belief that we should be very careful in authorizing operations above the 38th Parallel, and that we should clearly limit such operations. I agreed, pointing out that operations above the 38th Parallel should be designed only to destroy military supplies, for I wanted it clearly understood that our operations in Korea were designed to restore peace there and to restore the border.

Secretary Acheson said that the Air Force should not be restricted in its tasks by a rigid application of the 38th Parallel as a restraining line, but he wanted to be sure that precautions would be taken to keep the air elements from going beyond the boundaries of Korea. He suggested that the directive to MacArthur include some instructions in the case of Soviet intervention, perhaps to the effect that he defend his positions, and our forces, and report at once for further instructions from the President. I accepted this suggestion.

The Secretary of State then reviewed the reply received from the Soviets to our appeal to them to help bring the fighting in Korea to an end. Acheson expressed the belief that a statement which had been released in Peiping, taken together with the Russian reply seemed to indicate that the Soviets would not intervene themselves, but might help the Chinese Communists to do so.

Before closing the meeting, I asked the Secretary of Defense to prepare a directive in my name to General MacArthur instructing him to make a full and complete report on the situation in the Far East each day.

Offer of Help from Chiang Kai-shek.

A little later that day, Secretary Acheson returned to the White House, and among the things we discussed was a communication from the Chinese Government offering assistance in Korea. Chiang Kai-shek had instructed his ambassador to tell us that he was willing to send ground forces numbering up to 33,000 men but that he had neither air nor sea units and that U. S. assistance would be needed to get the ground forces from Formosa to Korea and then to supply them there.

I told Acheson that my first reaction was to accept this offer, because I wanted, as I had said to the National Security Council earlier in the day, to see as many of the members of the United Nations as possible take part in the Korean action. Acheson suggested that the situation of Nationalist China was different from that of other U. N. members. Formosa was one of the areas most exposed to attack. That had been the reason we had dispatched the Seventh Fleet, and it would be a little inconsistent to spend American money to protect an island while its natural defenders were somewhere else.

The following morning I was still inclined to accept the Chinese offer. Frank Pace, the Secretary of the Army, telephoned me at five o'clock in the morning. He said that he had just spoken to General Collins, who had had a long telecon conference with MacArthur. General MacArthur had asked for the conference immediately upon his return from a flying trip to the Korean front line. MacArthur said he was convinced that only American ground units could stop the North Korean advance. He had asked for permission to commit one regimental combat team at once and to build up to two divisions as rapidly as possible.

I told Pace to inform General MacArthur immediately that the use of one regimental combat team was approved.

At seven that morning a staff colonel from the Joint Chief's office came over to brief me on the night's reports from Korea. As soon as he had finished, I called Pace and Johnson and told them to be prepared to discuss at a meeting at 8:30 a.m. MacArthur's request for authority to commit the two divisions and the offer of troops by Chiang Kai-shek.

Offer Declined; Decision to Use U.S. Forces.

At this meeting I had with me about the same group that met with me at Blair House the evening of my hurried return from Independence. I informed the meeting that I had already granted authority for the use of the one regimental combat team and that I now desired advice on the additional troops to be employed. I asked if it would not be worthwhile to accept the Chinese offer, especially since Chiang Kai-shek said he could have his 33,000 men ready for sailing within five days. Time was all important.

At the same time I asked them to consider carefully other places where trouble might break out. What, for instance, would Mao Tse-tung do? What might the Russians do in the Balkans, in Iran, in Germany?

Secretary Acheson suggested that if Chinese troops from Formosa appeared in Korea, the Communists in Peiping might decide to enter that conflict in order to inflict damage on the Generalissimo's troops there and thus reduce his ability to defend himself whenever they might decide to try an invasion of Formosa.

The Chiefs of Staff pointed out that the 33,000 men offered, even though the Generalissimo called them his best, would have very little modern equipment and would be as helpless as Syngman Rhee's army against the North Korean tanks. Furthermore, the transportation they would require would be better used if we assigned it the task of carrying supplies and additional manpower of our own to MacArthur.

After some further discussion, I accepted the position taken by practically everyone else at this meeting, namely, that the Chinese offer ought to be politely declined. I then decided, that General MacArthur should be given full authority to use the ground forces under his command.

Factors of National Willingness and Ability.

What a nation can do or must do begins with the willingness and the ability of its people to shoulder the burden. In 1945-46, the American people had chosen to scuttle their military might. I was against hasty and excessive demobilization at the time, and stated publicly that I was; and General Eisenhower, then Army Chief of Staff, spoke out against it also. The Press and the Congress, however, drowned us out.

Then there is the problem of what kind of a military force to maintain—within the limits of what Congress and the people are willing to support. Today's military leaders are almost all technical specialists, and it is only natural that each shollld feel that his particular specialty is the most important aspect of the national defense picture. The same goes for the geographic distribution of national strength. Each area commander feels that it is his duty to have his area interests taken care of first, often without consideration of what goes on elsewhere in the world.

I have always understood this kind of thinking. When I was in command of Battery "D" in World War I, that was the center of the whole war effort for me, and I could and did argue with the battalion staff for always more and better equipment and attention for my outfit. As Senator, my investigations had given me an insight into the constant contest between the war theaters for the lion's share of the war production, and as President, I always tried to listen to all sides before approving what I thought was the most balanced approach.

I did not lose sight of this approach when Korea broke on us. In Korea, the Communists challenged us, but they were capable of challenging us in a similar way in many places, and, what was even more serious they could, if they chose, plunge us and the world into another and far more terrible war.

I could not agree with the tactics or approach of those who, like Chiang Kai-shek in a speech on July 3, 1950, wanted the U. N. to charge the Russians with the full responsibility for this Korean conflict and to demand that Moscow put an end to it. This kind of bluster is certain to lead into an impossible dilemma. If these suggestions had been followed, and the Soviets had ignored the order, as in all likelihood they would have done, the United Nations would either have stood convicted of weakness, or World War III would have been on.

It was in line with this policy that certain proposed flying photo reconnaissance missions were not permitted. Some Air Force planners had proposed, on July 6th, to fly some very high-level photo missions over Dairen, Port Arthur, Vladivostok, Karafuto and the Kurile Islands. Fortunately, the Air Force asked for State Department advice. Dean Acheson brought the matter to me. I asked him to get in touch with the Secretary of the Air Force Finletter and tell him that I wanted him to make it very plain to the Air Force commanders in the Far East that it was contrary to our policy to engage in activities that might give the Soviet Union a pretext to come into open conflict with us.

It was only natural for the Air Force commanders in the Far East to plan such reconnaissance missions. The information to be gained in this way would have been of help to their local situation. But there were over-all considerations that outweighed these local advantages, and the decision therefore had to be against the proposal.

This view was also taken by the agencies that prepared the studies on which I based my decisions.

MacArthur's Request Given High Priority.

General MacArthur's request for additional troops deserved high priority. I gave approval to an immediate alert order for the 2nd Infantry Division, in addition to the First Marine Division which was already preparing for the move to Korea, instructed Secretary Johnson to call on Selective Service to furnish the armed forces with manpower needed to fill up the skeleton units and ships. I then directed that General Collins and General Vandenberg fly to Tokyo to confer with General MacArthur.

Meanwhile, our forces were still fighting a rear-guard action and were withdrawing steadily and doggedly toward the beachhead city of Pusan.

The American press made dramatic news out of this retreat. News stories spoke of entire units being wiped out, and exaggerated the rout and confusion. The truth was that a small band of heroic youngsters led by a few remarkable generals was holding off a landslide in order that the strength for the counterpunch could be mustered behind their thin curtain of resistance.

By this time, however, General MacArthur had already conceived the basic plan for the counterattack. On July 7th the general had advised the Joint Chiefs of Staff that his basic operation plan would be to stop the enemy armies; to exploit fully the control of the sea and of the air; and by amphibious maneuvers, to strike behind the mass of the enemy ground forces.

These major plans were the topics which General Collins and General Vandenberg discussed with General MacArthur during their visit with him. They had also discussed the problem of meeting the needs of the Far East Command within the over-all requirements of national policy, and the use of allied troop elements in Korea.

General MacArthur agreed to the use of allied troops within his command. He did, however, advise against accepting the offer of 33,000 Chinese Nationalist troops made by Chiang Kai-shek. He offered the opinion that these troops would be of little effect in Korea; they were infantry, without artillery or other support elements, and of unknown quality. They would, he said, require extensive logistical support from us and, in fact, would be an albatross around our necks for months. Furthermore, it was his opinion that the diversion of this force from Formosa to Korea would leave a gap on that island that would invite attack. He suggested that he would himself go to Formosa and explain the situation to Chiang Kai-shek.

As for the plans for the counterattack, it seemed that General Collins had serious misgivings about it. The MacArthur plan was for two divisions to land by sea near Inchon, in the vicinity of Seoul and for one Regimental Combat Team to be airdropped in the same area. At the same time, the forces in the Pusan beachhead would break out toward the north. It was a bold plan worthy of a master strategist.

To make this plan possible required, however, a considerable stepping-up of the rebuilding of the armed forces, and almost every time he communicated with us, the Far East Commander asked for increased numbers of troops.

On July 19th, I had asked Congress to remove the limitations on the size of the armed forces, and had urged legislation to authorize the establishment of priorities and allocations of materials, to prevent hoarding and requisitioning necessary supplies.

An advance copy of this message was sent to General MacArthur to inform him of the approach that was being taken at home. He thanked me for this in a most courteous telegram.

Big Soviet Industrial Expansion In East Siberia, Central Asia

Iron, Coal and Other Raw Materials Reported Found in Strategically Less Vulnerable Regions.

By STANLEY JOHNSON

MOSCOW, Feb. 4 (AP).

THE Soviet press has just announced new plans for a vast development of industry in the strategically less vulnerable East Siberian and central Asian regions of the U.S.S.R. The scheme is similar to those which built up huge industrial complexes in the Urals before, during and immediately after World War II. That program was credited by many with a great role in Soviet resistance to the Nazi invasion.

Leading Soviet authorities say the development of Kazakhstan and the Irkutsk region of Siberia west of Lake Baikal have been given priority. Deposits of iron, coal and other raw materials are reported to have been explored in both regions recently.

The exploitation of this new wealth, along with development of associated industries, would give the Soviet Union what would amount to a whole new industrial system in previously under-developed regions.

Tells of Big Investment.

Writing in Izvestia, D. Kunayev, chairman of the Kazakh Council of Ministers, said more money would be invested in that Soviet republic in the next five years than in the 38 years since the Russian revolution. The program, he said, will include factories for production of trucks, tractors, diesel locomotives, mining and metallurgical equipment, which never have been manufactured in that region.

V. Krotov, economic chief of the East Siberian branch of the Academy of Sciences, wrote that the Soviet Union's biggest aluminum plant would be established in Irkutsk, using power from the world's two biggest hydro-electric stations, the Bratsk and the Krasnoyarsk stations, scheduled to have an output of 3,200,000 kilowatt hours each.

Academician V. Nemchinov, chairman of the academy council for study of productive forces, wrote that new discoveries of iron and coal, plus planned hydro-electric and industrial development, essentially change the prospects of distribution and production.

"The U.S.S.R. lately has discovered vast deposits of coking coal in the southern part of the Yakut autonomous republic and rich iron ore deposits close by," he continued.

Huge Iron Deposits.

Proximity of these raw materials for steel manufacture plus big supplies of electric power would form the basis of a new industrial complex, he added. He said new iron deposits five times as large as those of Krivoi Rog in the Ukraine had been found between Kustanai and Magnitogorsk in Kazakhstan and by 1960 the region would produce 5,600,000 tons of finished ore annually.

To meet the challenge posed by these plans, S. Rumyantsev, the deputy minister for higher education, called for a big upsurge in the training of technicians and movement eastward by Moscow and Leningrad experts for the opening of new institutes in the east.

G. I. Zelenko, chief of the central labor reserves administration which provides a pool of labor for industry, said more than 90 per cent of the 632 new labor reserve schools now planned would be set up in eastern regions.

EDEN-EISENHOWER TALKS TEMPERED BY DOMESTIC POLITICS

borders, with their new Communist weapons. This is like lighting a match in a powder mill. An explosion could occur at any time.

What Britain and the United States would do in the event of an explosion may have been decided secretly in the Eden-Eisenhower talks but it is unlikely. The Israelis fear that with a country which is 30 miles wide at the widest and seven miles at the narrowest, they would be overrun before any restraining action could be taken. On the other hand, when Ben-Gurion was hinting at preventive war and before the Communist arms had begun to weight the balance against Israel, the Egyptians were afraid that the Israeli forces, with their superior training and equipment, could take Cairo in from two to three weeks, and United Nations observers tended to confirm that estimate.

One Concrete Suggestion.

The one concrete suggestion for this trouble center contained in the communique issued at the end of the talks was for an increase in the number of United Nations truce observers. These observers—about 50 at the present time—report violations of the uneasy truce. Their findings were the basis for the recent resolution of censure against Israel adopted by the United Nations.

As unarmed watchmen, they must cover a long, irregular border in desert country. The Israeli government argues that to be effective the truce team would have to be greatly enlarged so that the border would be continuously under observation. Only in this way, so the Israeli argument runs, would it be possible to detect the constant day-to-day violations which Israel charges. Incessant harassment was the provocation, from the Israeli perspective, for the Israeli raid that resulted in the United Nations vote of censure.

The Optimistic View.

Those who take a hopeful view of the Eden-Eisenhower talks—and the hope is stronger on the British side than on the American—say two things were achieved.

First, the talks will have a quieting effect in the Middle East. Moscow as well as Egypt and Israel are on notice that Britain and the United States will act jointly in the event of any aggression. By reaffirming faith in the Baghdad pact the two powers have told the world that they do not intend to retreat from the northern tier pact. This should put an end to agitation against the pact.

Second, despite the strong opposition in this country from critics such as Knowland, the British are confident of a relaxation in the barrier to trade with Red China. They believe that rubber will come off the embargo list. This will mean the sale of about 50,000 tons from Malaya and Ceylon where, in the British view, the failure to sell basic raw materials has resulted in economic hardship which has in turn encouraged the spread of Communism. By their confidence, the British indicate that they were privately promised some relaxation although the communique referred only to agreement that trade controls "should be reviewed now and periodically as to their scope."

If Eden has won a change in the strategic list, he will have increased his stature at home. That can be his answer to critics in Commons who accuse him of subservience to United States policy.

The Prime Minister and the President could be prodigal with only one thing—words. In the declaration of Washington they are brave words, sometimes noble words, but with the continuing drift in the Middle East and the Far East toward Communism, one may well ask whether words are sufficient.

U.N. Road Rules Indorsed.

UNITED NATIONS, Feb. 4 (AP) — The United Nations in 1949 set up a uniform code for road traffic. Since then 30 countries have indorsed it. The latest is Denmark.

VENEZUELA PERMITS TWO EX-PRESIDENTS TO RETURN

CARACAS, Feb. 4 (AP)—President Marcos Perez Jimenez today confirmed reports that visas have been granted for former Presidents Romulo Gallegos and Romulo Betancourt to return to Venezuela. He said some political prisoners also had been released.

Betancourt led a 1945 coup which established Venezuela's leftist Accion Democratica administration. Gallegos was elected President in 1947 and overthrown by a military revolt in November 1948. He has been living in exile in Cuba. Betancourt also has been in exile in Cuba and various Central American countries.

RUSSIA AGAIN BERATES IRAN FOR JOINING BAGHDAD PACT

TEHRAN, Feb. 4 (UP)—Russia protested anew to Iran today its action in joining the pro-Western Baghdad pact.

The protest note was delivered by the Soviet ambassador here to Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Gholi Ardalan.

Ardalan told newsmen the note was in reply to Iran's answer of Dec. 6 to an earlier Soviet protest note. He said the new protest repeated the earlier Soviet complaints and did not contain anything basically new.

The Baghdad pact includes Britain, Turkey, Pakistan, Iran and Iraq.

On the Passing of H. L. Mencken

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

H. L. MENCKEN

THE late H. L. Mencken was the high priest of a cult back in the twenties. The cult was never accurately defined but it was composed largely of boys and girls who fancied themselves as intellectuals and, in some cases, really were. Mencken aroused the enthusiasm of this group by his ribald attacks on the "mountebanks" of American society and his lofty disdain of the "peasantry." In those days the word "peasant" was a term of supreme contempt even though its user in many cases was himself not far removed from the farm or the village green.

Mencken had very little in common with his half-baked followers and imitators but he had only himself to blame for being loved for the wrong reasons. The extravagance of his invective when he took the offensive and the fact that he seemed to be making war against everything that was associated with "the American way of life," gave him the appearance of the iconoclast and revolutionary. So the bright boys and girls who wanted to smash everything and start all over again naturally regarded him as one of their own.

Actually Mencken was conservative if not reactionary in most things. In matters of food, politics, art, music, architecture and sociology he looked back to the eighteenth century as the time when civilized man was most at ease and most respected in the Western World. He distrusted all the processes and features of democracy. The only modern American President he could tolerate was Grover Cleveland.

A VIRTUOSO of language, however, frequently outruns his own logic. Mencken would never weaken the rhythm of a sentence by inserting a qualification. He had no time and no inclination for the measured, judicial and fair-minded approach to his intellectual enemies. They were "charlatans," "frauds," "hinds," "oafs," "backwoods Savonarolas," "tinpot Messiahs." And these objects of his wrath were everywhere. He qualified a new cadre every time he took pen in hand.

So an assessment of Mencken that started with a roll-call of his victims would get nowhere. You couldn't love him for the enemies he made because he made too many. But he WAS important, and a measure of that importance can best be realized by examining first what he was for and what he assisted rather than what he attempted to destroy.

As an editor of the Smart Set and the American Mercury he gave substantial encouragement and constructive aid to young writers who departed from the "genteel" tradition of American letters and struck out for themselves. He stimulated a new interest in Theodore Dreiser, he effectively sounded the gong for Sinclair Lewis, Eugene O'Neill, Thyra Samter Winslow, Ruth Suckow, Scott Fitzgerald and many others. He helped to produce a receptive climate for writers such as Ernest Hemingway and William Faulkner.

He also drew renewed attention to European writers. Almost single-handed he created a vogue for Joseph Conrad in the United States which lasted until Conrad's death.

HE was a superb lexicographer. His original and revised versions of "The American Language" are important pieces of scholarship which will certainly form the basis for future inquiries into the growth of the language. For though conservative in most things he understood better than most writers that the art of communication should reject nothing that makes it more vivid, more intelligible and more responsive to the exposition of ideas.

By precept too he provided a stimulating model to the writer who was interested in effective expression rather than the cultivation of a "respectable" literary style. All of his pieces were free from weak locutions; but in his sober essays—where he was intent on developing an idea rather than lampooning the booboisie—his fine ear for sound and his vivid imagery were easily combined with a remorseless logic in the statement and development of ideas.

It is ironic that Mencken should be remembered more for his essays in hyperbole than for his mellow book of reminiscences called "Happy Days." The accident of a sudden change in the American social climate was responsible for the eclipse of his popularity. But it is useless to speculate on what might have happened if he had been subject to a different time schedule. As it is he certainly wrote enough to make him a memorable figure to those who read him; and an irreducible deposit of his writings will remain to charm, amuse and edify the readers of many another day.

Meet Forgotten Wm. Smyth

THE LESSONS OF HISTORY: LECTURES ON MODERN HISTORY AND THE FRENCH AND AMERICAN REVOLUTIONS, by William Smyth. Abridged and edited by Wallace Brockway, with a foreword by Bernard M. Baruch. (Simon and Schuster, 461 pgs., $6.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

SOMETIMES it pays to browse among old forgotten books, just as it does among old paintings. Occasionally such browsing will yield a work worth resurrecting. Bernard Baruch says such browsing is one of his favorite forms of relaxation. "A stroll down some deserted lane of literature or history, like a walk along a secluded country road, clears my mind and helps restore my perspective."

On such a stroll, he tells us, he came across a work in five formidable looking volumes, which he bought at auction and took to his home in South Carolina to read at his leisure. "I have been reading in it ever since. I know of no book which has given me more instruction and more pleasure."

That is how the volume under review came into being. Mr. Baruch communicated his enthusiasm for this forgotten work, which bore the title "Lectures on History," to "the perceptive M. Lincoln Schuster," who agreed with him that it should be rescued from obscurity. So in a much abridged form, reduced from five volumes to one, it has been restored to the world of letters.

William Smyth, the author of this forgotten opus, was Regius Professor of Modern History at Cambridge University in the early 1800s. The book consists of the lectures he delivered to his students, and it was first published in 1840. The editor, Mr. Brockway, makes no great claim for Smyth. Shortly after his lectures were published Macaulay came along and completely submerged them. "There is no use pretending that posterity did not make the right verdict."

There is no question, of course, that Macaulay or Acton, who was to succeed Smyth in his chair at Cambridge, were greater historians than he, and that their work deserves far greater fame and attention. Yet I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Baruch in his high appraisal of Smyth.

"The significance of Smyth's work lies in his reflections on human nature and on the character and conduct of men—the great and the not so great, the thinkers and the doers — such as Cromwell, Pitt, Godwin, Burke, Voltaire, Robespierre, Washington, to name a few at random. It lies in his observations on the enduring problems of the world—on war and peace, liberty and tyranny, reform and revolution, poverty and wealth, and chiefly on the use and abuse of power. It lies in brief in his attempt to read the lessons of history."

What amazed me as I read his pages was to see how well his historical judgments and reflections stood up after the passage of 150 years—with all the growth of knowledge and change of ideas that those years have brought. In this respect at least he survives far better than cocksure Macaulay, whose views and judgments have been under constant attack.

AS examples of the kind of reflective wisdom which gives Smyth the best claim to revived attention I would quote these two:

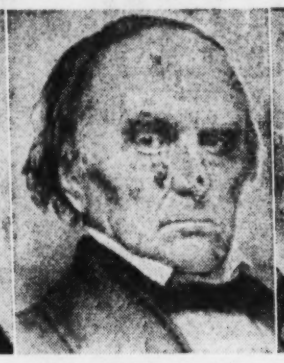

"Power is like money; men should be accustomed as much as possible, as much as they can bear, to the handling of it, that they may learn the proper use of it: they are so, more or less, in free government; not so in arbitrary; and this is the circumstance which always constitutes the insecurity of arbitrary governments, while they stand, and the difficulty of improving them, when they can stand no longer."

"All history shows, what all theory announces, that speculative truth, particularly in religious questions, can be left with best advantage to the silent influence and ultimate decision, not of creeds and councils, but of free enquiry."

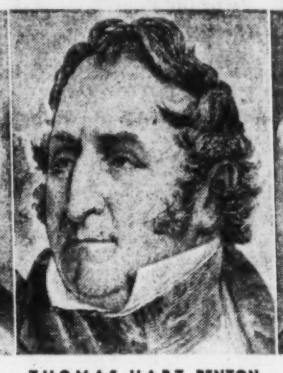

For reclaiming from the grave this thoughtful scholar with his wide fund of mature wisdom—characteristic of the eighteenth century at its best—Messrs. Baruch and Schuster deserve our warm thanks. A word of praise, too, is due the editing job done by Wallace Brockway. By judicious cutting he has produced a work that can be read with ease and pleasure by a modern reader, impatient with the interminable sentences and paragraphs of that day.

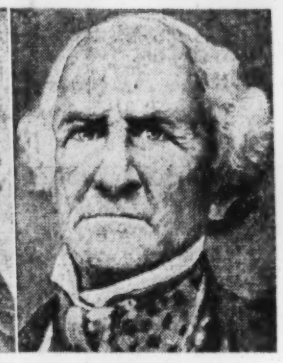

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS (1767-1848) of Massachusetts—for his willingness to break with his party and become the only Federalist to support Jefferson's purchase of the Louisiana Territory in 1803.

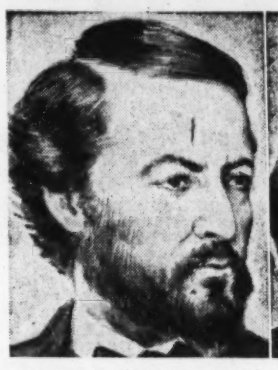

DANIEL WEBSTER (1782-1852) of Massachusetts—for taking his stand behind Clay's compromise on the slavery question "not as a Massachusetts man, nor as a Northern man, but as an American."

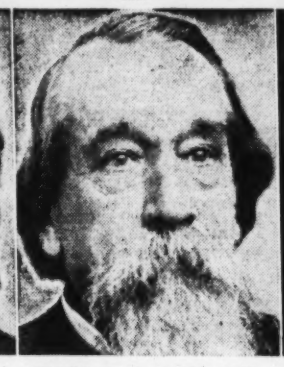

THOMAS HART BENTON (1782-1858) of Missouri—for his battle against disunion although he believed his first reward for so doing would be defeat at the hands of his angry constituents.

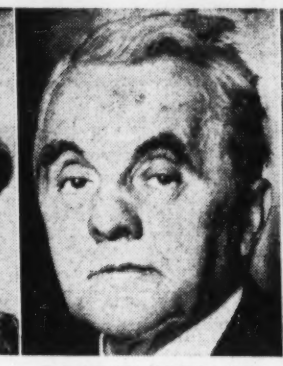

SAM HOUSTON (1793-1863) of Texas—for doing his utmost to keep his State from joining the Confederacy, and for saying frankly, "I know neither North or South; I know only the Union."

EDMUND G. ROSS (1826-1907) of Kansas—for voting against sustaining the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson, knowing that his vote in defiance of instructions meant political death.

LUCIUS Q. C. LAMAR (1825-1893) of Mississippi—for outraging his constituents when as the first Confederate officer to be elected to the Senate he advocated reconciliation with the North.

GEORGE W. NORRIS (1861-1944) of Nebraska—for daring to oppose the armed ship bill of 1917 and during his five Senate terms consistently voting his convictions regardless of consequences.

ROBERT A TAFT (1889-1953) of Ohio — for his independent stand on public issues and his criticism of the Nuremberg war trials as "a blot on the American record that we shall long regret."

Eight Senators Cited for Political Bravery

PROFILES IN COURAGE, by John F. Kennedy. (Harper and Bros., 266 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by IRVING DILLIARD

IN October, 1954, John F. Kennedy, junior United States Senator from Massachusetts, underwent a serious spinal operation to overcome an injury suffered during his wartime service with the Navy in the South Pacific. During the long hospitalization which followed he took up a line of reading suggested by a biography of John Quincy Adams. This was to look into the careers of senators and others in American political history who displayed "that most admirable of human virtues—courage."

Not many convalescents have employed their time so appropriately. The result is one of the best books this reader has had in his hands for a long time.

The Senator tells the stories of eight predecessors whose courage earned his special admiration. He also salutes others who have shown courage in politics, including two outstanding governors, Charles Evans Hughes of New York and John Peter Altgeld of Illinois.

Valuable as these "profiles in courage" are, Senator Kennedy's book has an additional value. This is his own analysis of courage in politics. He takes up the pressure on members of Congress — the pressure of wanting to be liked, the pressure of wanting to continue in office, the pressure from constituents. His conclusion is that while compromise is inevitable on issues, principles must be respected.

He does not accept the view "that assumes the people of Massachusetts sent me to Washington to serve merely as a seismograph to record shifts in popular opinion." For one thing, he confesses that he rarely knows how the great majority of the voters feel, or even how much they know of the issues that seem so burning in Washington.

Old Sea Yarn Still Has Its Impact

THE WRECK OF THE GOLDEN MARY, by Charles Dickens and Wilkie Collins. (Library Publishers, 159 pgs., $3.75.)

Reviewed by
NELL CONVERSE PUTZEL

THE Library Publishers, who, among other things, are doing an interesting work in reprinting little-known or long-out-of-print works which may appeal to modern readers, have brought out, in book form, a sea-story by Charles Dickens and his friend, Wilkie Collins.

The story was originally written for Dickens's beloved magazine "Household Words," and that issue sold 100,000 copies. The suspense, sentiment and poetic feelings of both writers are in focus here, and the short book has literary form and dramatic impact.

Dickens, in the person of the brave captain of the beautiful ship, "The Golden Mary," writes the first third of the book, describing the passengers and crew setting out from England to the Californian gold mines and suffering a terrible shipwreck on the way.

When the Captain becomes unconscious, Collins, as the sensitive and stalwart first mate, takes over the ship and the narrative. The contrast in the styles of the two writers, therefore, adds to the effectiveness of the book.

In the second part, Collins incorporates the stories, songs and poems which the shipwrecked party told one another to distract themselves from the reality of their terrible plight.

News About Writers

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the death of the famous Russian writer Fyodor Dostoyesky falls on Feb. 9. In order that the Russian people should be told more about him and his place in world literature than what they will learn from their own government—which has only recently taken him off the tabooed list—a number of American writers and critics have recorded statements which will be broadcast round-the-clock to Russia over Radio Liberation, the anti-Communist emigres' radio in West Germany. Among them are: James T. Farrell, W. H. Auden, Bennett Cerf.

Existentialist's Views Far Ranging

LITERARY AND PHILOSOPHICAL ESSAYS, by Jean-Paul Sartre. (Criterion Books, 239 pgs., $4.)

WILLIAM BLEIFUSS

RIGHTLY or wrongly, philosophers presume to have the right to speak on anything. In the case of Sartre, French existentialist, author, and commentator on man's agonizing and exhilerating "aloneness," the latest volume of his essays ranges in subject matter from the early William Faulkner to Marxian dogmas, from New York City's provincialism to Descartes' concept of freedom.

The one unifying element throughout the thirteen essays is Sartre's existentialism, which provides a base for discussing the radicalism of Dos Passos, the Christianity of Francois Mauriac, the "absurdity" of Albert Camus, and the Aristotelian sense of form in Jean Giraudoux.

Dos Passos' early books are highly praised for their delineation of the nakedness of man and his materialistic world. Faulkner's reveling in the intricacies of time results in novels where man has a past but only a closed future, and this the freedom-loving Sartre refuses to accept. He can accept Faulkner's despair in the early novels, for to Sartre man has been pushed into a meaningless universe, where the only order possible is that which each man himself can and should assert.

The existentialist interest in freedom leads him to question Descartes' interpretation of freedom, a freedom which Sartre feels permits man to sin but declares that man's goodness stems from God. Consequently Sartre questions that Descartes' concept really grants man freedom of the will. To Sartre man shows his freedom by his actions. Hence, though he finds the world is drab and degraded, man's actions can and ought to lend dignity to the "debacle." Sartre offers humanism without optimism.

IN one of the clearest commentaries available on Albert Camus' "The Stranger," a novel in which the central figure commits murder without any motive and welcomes execution for his crime because death is the greatest experience a man can have, Sartre defends Camus' concept of viewing our world as "absurd," absurd, that is, because the world and man are at odds. There is a cleavage between man's "drive toward the eternal and the finite character of his existence." Man's desire to make intelligible that which is capricious, unintelligible, and absurd—all terms that Camus and Sartre would apply to our world—gives dignity to man. Sartre echoes Pascal who emphasized "the natural misfortune of our mortal and feeble condition, so wretched that when we consider it closely, nothing can console us."

An interesting essay on Marxism and revolution points out the fallacious thinking of Communists. Sartre does not concern himself with the economics of communism, but instead with its materialism and its denial of freedom. Marxian materialism supports a myth that revolution is inevitable, but at the same time conformity and fear of independent thinking stifle the revolution. Communists, he feels, have reached a status quo ideologically. It is no longer a party of revolution but is bound by a doctrine that destroys thought.

For the ordinary reader the most interesting essays discuss American cities and American conformity. Our cities, says Sartre, look alike and are "frail and temporary, formless and unfinished," but they are "open to the world, and to the future." They have "their adventurous look and, even in their ugliness and disorder, a touching beauty."

FREEDOM in American society, on the other hand, is of a type unfamiliar to most Europeans. Americans want to be free, but are afraid to go it alone. Instead we seek for universals and try to apply them to our society. Sartre feels that the average American finds freedom in raising himself to the impersonality of the Universal.

Behind the typical American's desire to join clubs and to enter into social contracts with others is the feeling that the association confers upon him individuality and personal worth. "Within the association, he can take the initiative, can advocate his personal political views and influence, if he is able to, the line of the group."

Sartre's essays are for the thinking readers, and although many will disagree violently with him, they should not dismiss his existentialism because philosophically it may not seem palatable. Sartre's beliefs leave room for action and freedom.

Wielder of a Sharp Pen

HERBLOCK'S HERE AND NOW, by Herbert Block. (Simon and Schuster, 280 pgs., $2.95.)

Reviewed by
ROBERT LASCH

ST. LOUISANS who heard The Washington Post cartoonist speak here not long ago know that in addition to a sharp pen, Herblock can wag a sharp tongue. He wields both in this book, which collects 250 of his recent cartoons and some 30,000 words of text, the whole composing one of the most sustained and blistering attacks on the Eisenhower Administration that is available today.

As art, Herblock's cartoons leave much to be desired. He frequently overcomplicates the pictures. His black, bold lines are too seldom contrasted with other values. Nearly all of his characters look like something out of a comic strip whether this is the appropriate mood or not. And he is basically a gag-line cartoonist, depending for punch on the caption more than the conception or the drawing.

As polemics, however, Herblock's cartoons overcome any shortcomings they may have as art. They are bitter, biting, merciless and above all true. He may be partisan, but he defends partisanship ably in his text, and it must be said that even as a partisan he can only take advantage of the openings left him by his adversaries. They leave him plenty, and looking through this book you get the idea that he did not leave many unexploited.

The salty flavor of the prose can be judged from the chapter in which Herblock dissents from the "father-image" theory of Eisenhower's popularity:

"If we're going to get into psychopolitical stuff, I want to play, too, because I know just as little about psychiatry as the rest of the boys who bandy the terms about. The way I see it, fellows, President Eisenhower is more what you might call an 'uncle image,' a technical term that came to me one day while drawing a picture of Uncle Sam and wishing I was lying down on a couch.

"Papa is a guy who has to cope with a lot of little day-in-and-day-out problems of running a family. He has to double in housework and help the kids with their homework. He sometimes has to get mad and say, 'Hey, I told you to STOP!'

"But Uncle is a regular guy and everybody likes him. Uncle buys the kids pistols and popcorn and takes them to the ball game, although with all his charm and glamor he's not quite so close to us and our little problems as Papa is. Eisenhower seems to me to be like a favorite uncle who won fame and fortune abroad."

American Drama Is in Good Health

NEW VOICES IN THE AMERICAN THEATER. Foreword by Brooks Atkinson. (The Modern Library, 559 pgs., $1.45.)

WILLIAM G. B. CARSON

THE six plays collected in this small volume represent, on the whole, the American theater of the mid-century at its best. The authors are gifted young playwrights who have risen to take the places of their predecessors who, led by Eugene O'Neill, after World War I, brought new life and vigor into the native theater, and established American drama as a literary form worthy of serious consideration along with our poetry and our novels. Few of the men of the 1920s are left in the field today. But these "new voices" should be heard in our theaters for years to come. There is no need to bewail the state of our playwriting today.

As Brooks Atkinson points out in his foreword, each of the dramatists represented here writes in his own individual way, paying scant heed to the conventions and the so-called "laws of the drama" which for years shackled the imaginations of the men and women who used the stage as a medium for the expression of their views. Each one has something to say, and he says it in the way he considers most effective for his purpose, with but little regard for precedent. He also avails himself to the full of recent advances in staging and lighting.

Happily for St. Louis drama-lovers, all six of these plays have been seen in this city. Yet they bear careful reading even by those who have had the good fortune to see them in the form the author intended, for they offer much that can elude us at a single performance. If others will read them with their imaginations as well as with their eyes, seeing past the black letters on the white page to the living stage, they will find the experience both entertaining and rewarding.

Tennessee Williams opens the volume with his "A Street Car Named Desire" and its pathetic Blanche Du Bois. Arthur Miller is represented by "The Death of a Salesman," William Inge by his first success, "Come Back, Little Sheba," George Axelrod by "The Seven Year Itch," the only comedy in the collection, Robert Anderson by his moving "Tea and Sympathy," and Herman Wouk by the enormously popular "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial" with its controversial closing act. It is not likely that many who read these six plays will subscribe to the all too frequently heard lament that the American drama today is in a deplorable state of health.

Teaching Opportunities for College Graduates

The St. Louis public schools need more teachers.

In co-operation with St. Louis University and Washington University, and with the approval of the State Department of Education, the Personnel Division of the St. Louis Public Schools has devised a plan whereby qualified graduates of accredited colleges and universities may prepare themselves for temporary or permanent employment as elementary school teachers. There is still time to enroll in the program for the second semester of the current school year.

Minimum qualifications for participation in the plan are:
1. Bachelor's Degree.
2. Applicants for permanent positions must not have reached their fifty-first birthdays at the time of their appointments.

Interested persons are requested to bring their educational transcripts and credentials in person to the Personnel Division, sixth floor, Board of Education Building, 911 Locust Street.

TWO BROTHERS SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR RAPE

Victim of Kidnaping and Assault Says Penalty Is What 'They Deserve.'

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 4 (UP)—A jury in United States district court sentenced two brothers today to death in the Georgia electric chair for kidnaping and rape of a spinster.

"I certainly think they deserve it," was the reaction of the victim, Miss Sunie Jones, 53 years old, of Chattanooga, when the jury found George, 33, and Michael Krull, 31, guilty after almost eight hours of deliberation.

Attorneys for the brothers indicated they would appeal the death sentence and Judge Frank Hooper delayed fixing of the execution date until Feb. 24.

The verdict was death for each of the brothers on rape charges. The jury could have specified life imprisonment or left it to the judge's discretion to fix punishment. Additionally, the brothers were given life sentences from the jury for kidnaping the woman.

Execution of capital cases from federal court is carried out in the state penitentiary at Reidsville, Ga.

The Krull brothers were convicted of abducting Miss Jones from a Chattanooga street corner, driving her into Georgia and subjecting her to hours of rape and torture in Chickamauga national battlefield.

The brothers, who both have long criminal records dating back to their youth in the Pittsburgh area, were pictured by United States prosecutors as roaming "like hungry wolves through the streets of Chattanooga in broad daylight" seeking a woman they could molest. They finally grabbed Miss Jones who testified to the agony they put her through.

"I wouldn't have been happy if it hadn't turned out like it did," she said after the verdict. "It was a terrible thing to go through and I hope no other woman ever has to experience it. I'm so happy I'm still living."

PRAVDA, IZVESTIA PUBLISH TEXTS OF 3 DOCUMENTS

MOSCOW, Feb. 4 (AP)—Pravda and Izvestia published three important documents in complete text today in somewhat startling juxtaposition:

1. The text of President Eisenhower's reply to Premier Bulganin's first letter to him. This rejected Bulganin's appeal for a Soviet-American friendship treaty. The Russians had delayed publishing it for nearly a week after its text was made available in Washington.
2. Bulganin's second letter to Mr. Eisenhower.
3. The Eisenhower-Eden "declaration of Washington" issued Wednesday on conclusion of their talks.

Only yesterday the Soviet press described the Eisenhower-Eden statement as "full of hostility to the Soviet Union."

In diplomatic circles one suggestion was that Soviet readers were being told, in effect:

"Look how friendly Eisenhower is when he talks to Bulganin and then look what he has to say about the Soviet Union when issuing a statement with an ally for the rest of the world."

3 INDEPENDENT ARTISTS ARE AWARDED $25 BONDS

Virginia Bohling, Victor Joseph Kunz and Leona A. R. Ottofy have been awarded $25 Government bonds for their paintings on display at Kiel Auditorium refectory, it was announced last night. The awards were based on voting by members of the exhibiting group, the Society of Independent Artists of St. Louis.

The show will run through March and will be open to the public whenever the refectory is in use during symphony concerts and other auditorium attractions. A silver anniversary celebration of the society's founding will be held at a costume ball next Friday at Hotel Sheraton.

An exhibition of 35 prints by New Jersey artists, which was announced as about to open last Wednesday at Central Public Library, has not yet been received from its last place of display, the library announced last night.

LEO C. FULLER TO HEAD BROTHERHOOD OBSERVANCES

Leo C. Fuller has been named general chairman for Brotherhood week observances here from Feb. 19 through Feb. 26. Virgil Border, local director of the National Conference of Chirstian and Jews, sponsoring organization, announced yesterday.

"The goals of Brotherhood week include rededication to the ideals of respect for people and human rights, demonstration of practical ways in which Americans can promote these ideals and enlistment of more people in year-round activities to promote brotherhood," Fuller explained.

Fuller, chairman of the board of Stix, Baer & Fullers Co., will co-ordinate local activities with nationwide observance of Brotherhood week, for which President Eisenhower is honorary chairman.

U.S., Britain Reported Seeking Withdrawal by Israelis, Egypt

Forces Would Be Pulled Back One Kilometer—Then U.N. Patrols Would Police Frontier Zone.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—An agreement between Israel and Egypt on mutual withdrawal of all military forces one kilometer (five-eighths of a mile) in each direction back from their common frontier is the first objective of New Britain-American efforts to obtain peace in the Middle East, it was learned today.

If the withdrawal agreement can be obtained—and the British believe there is a good chance since the idea has originated with Egyptian premier Nasser—then the second step calls for interposing some sort of United Nations patrol up and down the fronier between the two sides.

The third step would be the enunciation at that point of a new tripartite guaranty against aggression in the Middle East, backed up this time with some specific commitments as to how and under what circumstances force would be used to halt an aggressor.

Finally would come the real peace effort of working out frontier rectifiactions and agreements on the Arab refugee problem and the economic aspects of a peace treaty.

For the moment the British and Americans, as a result of the talks at Washington between Prime Minister Eden, appear to have given up any ideas about working immediately toward an over-all settlement of the Israeli-Arab conflict and will concentrate instead on "disengaging" Egyptian and Israeli forces on the borders in order to create a more peaceful atmosphere.

Nasser first broached his "one-kilometer withdrawal plan" in Cairo about five weeks ago in a conversation with Alfred Robens, Laborite member of the House of Commons, who was on a fact-finding tour of the Middle East and who serves as party spokesman in foreign policy debates.

Various withdrawal plans on a more limited scale have been put forward from time to time by the U.N., but this was the first time that anybody had suggested such a full-scale operation along the entire border.

Robens, on his return to London, had a long talk with Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd as the latter was preparing to accompany Eden on his visit to Washington. Robens's account of the Nasser interview was such as to convince the British that the suggestion was not only serious but also offered the break in the situation for which the Western powers have been looking. Lloyd, therefore, made the proposal a starting point for the proposed new diplomatic strategy.

Exactly how the proposal will be explored is being kept a secret. It might be done by British-American diplomatic initiative in Cairo and Jerusalem, or it might be handed to the U.N. truce supervisory chief, Canadian Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, to work out.

If a mutual withdrawal is agreed on, the next move would be to provide Gen. Burns with a sufficient patrol force to move up and down continuously from the Gaza strip to the Red Sea between the Israeli and Egyptian armies.

At present on the Israeli-Egyptian frontier, patrols move almost side by side glaring at each other across the border which is scarcely marked at all, and in a situation of tension it is scarcely surprising when somebody starts shooting.

If the two forces were separated by two kilometers, with a U.N. patrol going up and down the middle, the chances of avoiding incidents and maintaining peace would be enhanced.

The British are prepared to intervene to support an anti-aggression declaration with ground and air forces, and in fact have a plan for such intervention within approximately 48 hours of an outbreak of trouble.

If the Egyptian offer of a withdrawal is genuine and serious, it is difficult to see how the Israelis can fail to accept.

JERUSALEM, Israel Sector, Feb. 4 (AP)—An Israeli army spokesman said an Egyptian position in the Gaza strip opened fire today on an Israel patrol near Beeri village. He said the patrol returned the fire and suffered no casualties.

Fifth Atom Submarine Planned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP)—The Navy announced yesterday it will lay the keel of its fifth nuclear-powered submarine Feb. 21 at the Mare Island naval shipyard, Vallejo, Calif. It will be the first nuclear-powered vessel to be built on the West Coast.

Explaining Display on Beavers

CONNOR DEPLORES COUNTY POLICE BILL

Crime Board Chief Says Year's Residency Rule Would Hurt Department.

A bill pending in the County Council requiring one-year residency for all county police department members would be a tremendous handicap to progress of the department, James W. Connor, operating head of the St. Louis Crime Commission, said yesterday.

The restriction would prevent the county from hiring officers with the highest qualifications, Connor declared. He termed the requirement "an outmoded restriction which would seem to have political overtones."

Connor pointed to recent action of University City in temporarily canceling a plan to have the municipality's policemen deputized as members of the county department. The action was taken, he said, because City Manager Elder Gunter of University City believes the residence bill will prevent the county department from operating at top efficiency.

"The reason is a valid one," he said. "The action by the University City Council is evidence of the damage which the pending bill will do, not only to recruitment of officers but to deputization of officers in municipal forces throughout the county."

Connor said the Board of Police Commissioners in St. Louis has stated repeatedly its department was hampered by a charter provision that officers and civilian employes, with a few exceptions, must have resided in St. Louis a year before their appointment.

"State laws," he said, "require that deputy sheriffs and police officers must be residents of Missouri at the time of their appointments but does not strangle recruiting by imposing a year-long residency requirement. County regulations now call for state residence."

IDEA GOD IS 'WHITE, AMERICAN' ASSAILED

Church Council Berates 'Ridiculous' Belief in Race Relations Plea.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP)—The National Council of Churches said yesterday that many church-goers in the United States think of God as a "white and American idol" molded in their own image.

In its annual race relations message, the council likened many white American church members to the ancient Greeks, whose mythology made their deities into fellow Greeks, with the same physical characteristics.

"Of all the ancient peoples they were most like us in being ridiculously proud of the wrong things," the council said in an appeal for racial justice to the 35,500,000 members of its 30 member denominations.

"We have no right or reason to be proud of the color of our skin, white or yellow or black or red, or the purity of our blood all red and all mixed and we know this," the council said, adding: "Yet after 1900 years and more, we often continue to mold our God into a white and American idol."

Written by Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, the council's president, and approved by its 250-member general board, the message was made public for use in connection with the thirty-fourth annual race relations Sunday Feb. 12.

The statement urges forthright steps be taken toward ending discrimination in the churches, and asks each Christian church to consider these questions:

"Is our church door really open to all people for whom Christ died?

"What steps must we take now to show our repentance for the sins of our church in regard to race?

"Is our church communion a foretaste of the fellowship of all God's children in the kingdom of Christ?"

200 Area Pupils Exchange Ideas On Exhibits for Science Fair

Final Meeting Held to Show Grade Students How to Prepare for April 16-20 Event.

Elementary students from schools in the St. Louis area yesterday exchanged ideas and know-how on scientific matters at the last in a series of "how-to-do-it" meetings in preparation for the 1956 Greater St. Louis Science Fair.

About 200 pupils attended the meeting at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney downtown store auditorium. They were there to get ideas and suggestions for preparing their own exhibits for the annual event, which will be held April 16-20 in the Washington University Field House.

Pat Owen and Patsy Glazer, fourth grade pupils at Glenridge School in Clayton, explained their exhibit called, "How Beavers Live and Work."

How Beavers Live.

It consisted of a paper and clay model of a beaver colony and a poster explaining how beavers live together in a pond.

Gary McFarland of Normandy Junior High School, had prepared an exhibit on soil conservation. He explained how a farmer may conserve soil by planting soil-holding crops in between stands of wheat and other staple grains, thus preventing valuable top soil from being washed away by rain.

Other exhibits included "Water on the Earth," "Why We Need Light," "Leaf Prints," "Coal Gas," and "Sponges."

Following the meeting, another group of students appeared with their completed exhibits on a half-hour television show on Post-Dispatch Station KSD-TV with Frank Eschen.

"Preparing for Weather."

Among exhibits on the program was one entitled, "Preparing for Weather," constructed by Allan Barker and Bob Blumenthal, third graders at Glenridge School.

The two boys displayed a barometer and thermometer, weather maps and weather forecasts, showing how people can prepare themselves for weather eventualities by using instruments and information.

Norman R. D. Jones, general chairman of the fair, also appearing on the program, again urged students to get busy on their exhibits, which must be as nearly completed as possible by March 14, deadline for submitting entries.

A series of 13 weekly shows similar to yesterday's program will be televised on education television Station KETC by "The Finder" beginning at 6:30 p.m., next Friday.

This year's fair will be the ninth since the annual event began in 1948. The Post-Dispatch is sponsoring the 1956 fair in co-operation with Washington University.

CAT OUT ON LIMB 2 DAYS RESCUED BY TREE CLIMBER

The story of Ferdinand, the frightened cat, came to a happy ending yesterday.

A dog chased Ferdinand into a tree on the grounds of the Military Personnel Records Center in Overland last Thursday. The owner, Mrs. Alan Smith, 9572 Pagewood court, called the Animal Protective Association of Missouri.

Field agents Andrew Nappier and James Ray put up a ladder and tried to snare Ferdinand with a wire loop at the end of a pole, but the cat climbed still higher, taking refuge on a dead branch 60 feet above the ground.

The agents borrowed a hose line from the Records Center fire department and tried to drive Ferdinand down with water, but that didn't work. When they asked the Community fire department to send its 85-foot aerial ladder, the chief told them he would not tie up his equipment in a cat chase without special authorization from his board of directors.

After the cat had remained on its lofty perch for two nights and two days Agent Ray got Ambo Bros. Nursery to donate the service of Roy Atkins, a tree specialist. Using a 50-foot ladder and safety ropes, the professional climber hoisted himself, snared the cat and finally brought it down.

RED TRADE UNION ORDERED TO GET OUT OF AUSTRIA

VIENNA, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Austrian government today ordered the Communist-controlled World Federation of Trade Unions to dissolve its headquarters in Vienna immediately.

The decree—in effect an order to the WFTU to move out of Austria—charged the Red-controlled organization was violating Austrian laws and "endangering the interests of the Austrian state."

Notice of the decree of the Austrian Ministry of the Interior was delivered to Louis Saillant, French Communist secretary general of the WFTU.

The government accused the organization of overstepping its legal rights and of conducting activities which exceed and violate its own operating charter.

WFTU, kicked out of France earlier, is one of the two big Communist-controlled international organizations with permanent headquarters in Vienna. The other is the World Peace Council.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 4 (AP)—Marion county clerk H. Dale Brown made a leap-year offer for bachelor girls yesterday, but wasn't too worried about any of them accepting.

He pledged to pay the cost of a marriage license issued on Feb. 29 for any girl who will swear in writing that she did the proposing.

"But," Brown said confidently, "I don't think any girl would have the nerve to do that."

Alaska State Constitution Drafted, Ready to Be Signed

Expected to Be Ratified by Territory Voters in April 24 Primary — Entry Into Union Pressed.

By LAWRENCE E. DAVIES
The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Feb. 4—A 14,400-word charter for the forty-ninth or fiftieth state came out of the Alaska constitutional convention today. Fifty-five delegates from all parts of the territory, twice as big as Texas, prepared to sign the simply written "Alaska state constitution" at a ceremony Sunday.

The result of their 75 days of work means that almost 90 years after the purchase of this 586,000-square-mile land from Russia, it is ready to become a state, once a reluctant Congress gives the word.

It puts Alaska, on the charter's expected ratification by the territorial voters at the April 24 primary, in a position identical with Hawaii. The mid-Pacific territory got the jump and produced a state constitution in 1950 when Hawaiians—to their bitter disappointment afterward—thought statehood was within their grasp.

Document Applauded.

The document now awaiting a final formal vote and the delegates' signatures at the University of Alaska near here, was applauded by stateside consultants as "the most distinctive modern constitution."

The delegates, in their determination to construct a near-perfect instrument for Alaska's needs, often consulted the New Jersey Constitution as overhauled in 1947, the Hawaii Constitution and a model constitution compiled by the National Municipal League.

Their watchwords for their own charter since the convention opened on Nov. 8 have been clarity, brevity and strength.

Bush pilots from this subarctic city and the Eskimo village of Kotzebue, beyond stretches of tundra and mountains far to the west; fishermen from the southeastern panhandle; druggists, storekeepers and lawyers from widely scattered urban and rural districts—all brought a knowledge of Alaska to the charter-writing task.

Their number—put at 55 by a sentimental territorial legislature aware that 55 delegates had produced the United States Constitution— represents many other occupations.

There are Presbyterians and Evangelical Mission Covenant ministers. A newspaper editor and a city planner took months off from their work to help write the constitution. So did a political scientist turned soft drink distributor; a news distributor trained as an engineer; a homesteading philosopher with seven children, who emigrated from Switzerland before the war; mining experts, transportation and construction men; hotel operators; an architect; a photographer; a public relations consultant; a real estate developer; housewives, and civic leaders. Their ages ranged between 30 and 82.

The women totaled six. One of them is among the 13 lawyers on hand. Another is a bank cashier.

Indian Presides.

Frank Peratrovich, a Tlinget Indian from southeast Alaska, "where the natives all memorize Roberts Rules of Order," has occasionally sat in the chair as vice president of the convention when the president, William A. Egan, a Valdez store owner, was otherwise occupied. Both have served in the legislature.

Democrats outnumber Republicans by about two to one, with a few independents in the list, but their emphasis has been not on party but on "the good of Alaska." Their resistance to pressure groups has been noteworthy.

There was sharp eleventh-hour debate over the best method of attaining early statehood. This was an aftermath of a decision at midweek, by a vote of 47 to 5, recommending a dramatic move made first by Tennessee in 1796 and followed by several other states.

This calls for the election this year of two United States Senators and a United States Representative even if Congress, as expected by most realists, takes no action toward granting Alaska statehood. This delegation would go to Washington next January and camp there during the regular terms of Senate and House members, lobbying for statehood on a dignified but unrelenting basis.

To implement this plan a nine-member standing committee, headed by Robert J. McNealy, a Fairbanks attorney, approved the following proposal without a dissenting vote:

"If, after the people of Alaska ratify this constitution, Alaska has not been admitted as a state before the fourth Monday in January, 1959, the territorial legislature shall provide for the election of officers under this constitution and for proclaiming the date on which the constitution shall become effective."

Rush by Objectors.

Objectors rushed to the attack on the convention floor. This would mean, they asserted, that Alaska, which now has a territorial governor appointed by the President, a territorial legislature and a federal court system, would also have in 1959 a rival governor, legislature and court system, with resultant chaos.

The plan was rejected decisively by the convention delegates, and McNealy apologized for taking the convention's time with the prolonged debate.

The finished constitution is a document of 15 articles and three ordinances that include in its Bill of Rights, as a reflection of thinking about some well publicized Congressional inquiries, this provision:

"The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigations shall not be infringed."

The constitution envisages for the state of Alaska especially strong executive and judicial arms. The Governor and the Secretary of State, who would serve as a lieutenant governor, would be the only elective state officials. The Governor would appoint all department heads.

As in the substantially integrated New Jersey judicial system, the chief justice would be the administrative head of the whole state court system of Alaska. The Governor would appoint judges from nominees chosen by a judicial council, as in the "Missouri plan."

Use of Joint Session.

Nevertheless the Governor, after vetoing a piece of legislation, would find the legislature voting in a joint session over whether to override the veto. This joint use of Senate and House is provided also for such purposes as confirming appointments.

This article on the executive and the legislature was described as coming nearer than those in any state constitution now in use to being the ideal visualized by political scientists.

The convention agreed on a senate of 20 members and a house of 40 after discarding the idea of a one-house legislature, like Nebraska, on the ground Congress might think it too radical.

As members of the first territory-wide convention ever held in Alaska in which rural areas purposely were not overshadowed by the cities, the delegates set up a legislative apportionment system designed to preserve this situation after statehood is granted.

They fixed the voting age at 19. They sought to bar from Alaska what some delegates saw as a hydra-headed monster — county government in the states. In so doing they provided for streamlined counties to be called "boroughs." Their borders, as well as those of the cities, would be determined by a state boundary commission appointed by the Governor.

Instead of having elective sheriffs and other elective officers as well as a multiutde of taxing agencies within a borough, the convention made the borough assembly the only elective body. If a first-class city was situated within a borough, the borough assembly members representing the city itself would be elected from the city council as a means of achieving some automatic co-ordination of city and borough governments.

Power to Tax.

Only the boroughs and cities would have the taxing power although a borough could establish service districts—a school district for example—and permit them to levy limited charges. A borough could not nurse home rule along by designating a native Eskimo village such as Barrow as a service area.

Alaska's tremendous natural resources centered unusual attention on their constitutional treatment. The result, according to one expert, is a natural resources article "that reads more like an essay on conservation but that should provide the framework for a good job in exploiting resources in the constructive sense."

SYMINGTON ASKS WHO CUT CITY FLOOD PLANNING FUND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), of Missouri, tried today to find out who cut planning funds for the proposed $130,987,000 St. Louis flood protection project for the 1957 fiscal year.

In a letter to Maj. Gen. E. C. Itschner, Assistant Chief of Engineers for Public Works, Symington asked how much the Corps of Engineers had asked in its original request to the Department of Defense or the Bureau of the Budget. The amount earmarked for the St. Louis project was only $101,000 by the time it reached Congress.

"Our question is based on a report that the Bureau of the Budget allocated all you requested for fiscal year 1957," Symington told Itschner. Symington's office declined to reveal the source of its information.

Symington also asked what was "the maximum amount the Engineers could use on this project in fiscal 1957."

The Corps had told Congress last fall that it could expeditiously use $600,000 for planning the project in the coming fiscal year. Minimum amount required was put at $200,000. Total estimated cost for advance planning is $1,200,000.

LEHMAN BELITTLES G.O.P.'S 'LEAP YEAR LIBERALS'

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—Senator Herbert H. Lehman (Dem.), New York, belittled President Eisenhower and the Republican party last night as "leap year liberals" and called for a resurgence of "the spirit of the New Deal."

"Today, in place of that spirit," he said, "we have the stodgy, stifling atmosphere of caution and restraint—a spirit of search—not for solutions, but for slogans, an emphasis not on pioneering, but on merchandising.

"This is the spirit of 1956—the spirit of this Administration, the spirit of this time."

Lehman was guest of honor at a $50-a-plate dinner given by Americans for Democratic Action at the Roosevelt Hotel. It was one of a series sponsored by A.D.A. throughout the nation in the eighth annual Roosevelt day observance commemorating the Jan. 30 birthday of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. A.D.A. describes itself as a non-partisan liberal, political organization.

STAND-BY CREDIT CURBS OPPOSED BY 4 IN CONGRESS

Members of Economic Committee Back Humphrey — President's View Cited.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Four members of the Senate-House Economic Committee agreed today with Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey that stand-by controls on consumer credit are not needed now.

President Eisenhower told Congress in his annual economic message that stand-by controls over installment buying "would be a useful adjunct to other stabilizing measures," and that "this is a good time . . . to study the problem." He added there is no need now to use such controls.

Humphrey told the committee yesterday, however, that he thought it was "better not to have stand-by controls." He said he preferred action "when you know the conditions you have to meet."

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (Rep.) Vermont, and Representative Wilbur D. Mills (Dem.), Arkansas, said they had thought Mr. Eisenhower had asked for enactment of stand-by control legislation, but Senator Arthur V. Watkins (Rep.), Utah, said the President had asked only that it be studied, and had not "actually recommended" it.

Still a fourth member of the joint committee, Senator John J. Sparkman (Dem.), Alabama, said he felt Mr. Eisenhower's economic report "indicates" he would like authority to regulate installment buying. But if this is what the President wants, Sparkman said, he should so advise Congress.

Secretary Humphrey said the subject deserved careful consideration by Congress and the executive branch. He said the President had recommended only that the matter be studied, and told a reporter he did not consider his opposition to controls as contradicting the President's stand.

All four committee members said they agreed with the Secretary that there is no need at this time for the auhority.

Under regulations in effect in World War II and some subsequent years, the Government put limits on installment buying of automobiles, washing machines and other durable goods by fixing the amount of down payments and the time for paying off the balance. Authority for such controls expired in 1952.

2 DOLLS CRY IN COURT, JUDGE GIVES ONE VERBAL SPANKING

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP)—Two dolls cried in United States District Court yesterday, but the judge ruled only one had a right to and the other was stealing her stuff.

Judge Roszel C. Thomsen decided in favor of Jacob and Max Brock and their American Character Doll Co. of New York, manufacturers of Tiny Tears weeping dolls. He held that their patent for the tear-producing mechanism had been infringed by Ideal Toy Corp. of New York and its Betsy Wetsy weeping doll.

In an 11-page opinion, Judge Thomsen said the "accused doll," Betsy Wetsy, used the same mechanism for producing tears as that for which the Brocks own the patent.

He described it as "an inefficient air pump which produces drops of water through slits in the eyes of the doll but prevents it from squirting out in a jet stream.."

WEST END COMMUNITY GROUP TO HEAR MAYOR

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker will be the principal speaker at the fourth general meeting of the West End Community Conference, to be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at St. Rose School Hall, Goodfellow boulevard and Etzel avenue. He will discuss neighborhood conservation.

The conference, organized last year to preserve the 150-block area bounded by Delmar, Union and Page boulevards and Hodiamont avenue, will review what has been accomplished and outline plans for the future.

Zoning changes to improve Bartmer, Maple and Plymouth avenues have been made, and residents of nearby streets are petitioning the city for similar legislation. The City Plan Commission is working with the conference to develop an over-all plan for the entire area.

A WANT AD

talks business to everybody...and is heard

If it's a salesman you want, you'll look far before you'll find a better one than a want ad.

Small as it is, it packs a mighty wallop, and gets in places where a two-legged salesman can't get the tip of his shoe. There are no barriers a want ad can't hurdle; it encounters no sales resistance because it's paid for by the advertiser and sought by the reader who buys the Post-Dispatch to know what's for sale and who has it for sale. It's wanted.

The want ad is a tireless worker for anyone willing to hire its services.

It is a guide to business opportunities, often a promoter of an enterprise. It sells real estate, unused commodities and has a voice in thousands of transactions like no other medium of advertising.

It talks business to everybody, and is heard.

For the price you pay, a Post-Dispatch want ad is a force in selling you can't afford to ignore. Better than a million individual ads have been published during the last twelve months in the Post-Dispatch, and a million-plus of anything is worth consideration.

So, for things you want to buy, sell or rent, read and use Post-Dispatch want ads.

For as little as

a day you can run a WANT AD ON the local 7-day rate.

All you do is to pick up the receiver and dial...

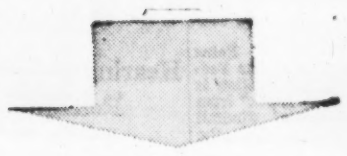

MA 1-1111

talk to an ad-taker and charge it.

ADMINISTRATION SAID TO IMPERIL SLUM CLEARANCE

'Roadblocks and Strangling Red Tape' Charged in House Subcommittee Report.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP) —A House investigating subcommittee accused the Eisenhower Administration today of jeopardizing the national slum clearance program through "roadblocks and strangling red tape."

The House Banking subcommittee on housing reported also it had found that the urban redevelopment program to encourage new rental housing was "hopelessly bogged in administrative bungling." It said some people uprotted from slums are being forced to move into even worse living quarters.

The charges were made in a report approved by a majority of the nine-man, Democratic-controlled subcommittee. The group spent six months taking testimony in New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Chicago.

Chairman Albert Rains (Dem.), Alabama, said the Federal Housing Administration is still in a "state of shock" from the 1954 expose of windfall profits to builders under the previous FHA program. He added that this is no excuse for FHA officials to become "overly cautious and timid to an extreme."

The housing program calls for federal aid to slum clearance projects coupled with urban redevelopment to provide better low-rent homes.

"Federal law requires that families displaced by slum clearance be furnished with decent, safe, sanitary housing which they can afford," the subcommittee said. It added that between 40 and 50 per cent of the families being uprooted are so poor they can afford only subsidized, low-rent public housing.

The subcommittee said an expanded public housing program is the answer.

"There was disturbing testimony to indicate that some families have been forced to move to dwellings inferior in quality to those vacated," the report said. "If displaced families are merely shunted to another slum area, or an area which is on the verge of becoming a slum, the problem is only aggravated further."

The program of FHA-insured loans for construction of multi-family rental housing and rehabilitation of existing homes in urban renewal areas has proceeded "with exasperating slowness," it continued. "The subcommittee believes the basic problem has stemmed primarily from the negative attitude and philosophy displayed by many of the Government officials concerned."

Only One Commitment.

Only one commitment has been issued by FHA under this program so far, involving 762 proposed units in New York City. The subcommittee said that even this would not have been done if it had not been for the investigation.

The program for FHA insurance for low-cost sales and rental housing outside urban renewal areas for displaced families has been "a complete disappointment," the report continued.

The subcommittee called for raising to two from one billion dollars the amount available in loans and grants under the slum clearance and urban renewal programs. It suggested also a number of technical changes, including a possible increase in the profit allowance for urban renewal construction.

FHA at first held to a maximum of 5 per cent profit, the subcommittee said, but now allows 7 per cent. The committee suggested the maximum may have to be raised to 10 per cent.

It said that just prior to publication of its report FHA made "several liberalizing changes" but that they were made on the basis of individual projects.

"Such a practice, if continued, could develop favoritism," the group cautioned.

Program for Old People.

It criticized also the Administration's proposed program to aid housing for old people as being impractical "window dressing."

It proposed instead a loan program in the housing and home finance agency similar to the present college housing program. Long-term loans would be provided at low interest rates to non-profit corporations interested in supplying housing for elderly people.

President Eisenhower has recommended liberalization of the regular Government mortgage insurance program to spur home-building for the aged.

4826 HOURS IN TB WORK

A total of 4826 hours of volunteer work for the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis was donated by 883 persons during 1955, the society announced yesterday.

Almost half of that time was spent mailing 51,000,000 Christmas seals and sorting letters containing contributions, while the remainder was spent in community X-ray surveys and sale of tuberculosis pins.

Anderson and Adm. Strauss Set To Wage Nuclear Secrecy War

Hearing to Provide Arena for Dispute Over Releasing Information on Peaceful Use of Atom.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Both R. Adm. Lewis L. Strauss and Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, picked up fresh ammunition this week for use in a head-on conflict that has flared up between them.

Their dispute is on the issue of secrecy. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, wants to keep the present tight restrictions on information about efforts to harness the fusion principle of the hydrogen bomb for peaceful uses. Anderson, chairman of the Senate-House Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, wants to abolish secrecy in the entire field of controlled hydrogen reactions and has gone out of his way to stir up public debate on the question.

The two men will have a chance to debate the subject face to face and in public for three days, starting Tuesday, when the joint committee has scheduled hearings on the report this week of a special citizens' panel on the impact of the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

A Middle Course.

Conclusions of the special panel, headed by Robert McKinney, editor and publisher of the Santa Fe New Mexican, apeared to steer a middle course between the divergent views of these two top figures in the nation's atomic energy program.

The panel stressed the Government's dual responsibility to "stimulate scientific contributions from every quarter" and to keep potential investors informed on the possibilities of developing this possible new source of cheap power.

It recommended: "That the commission, within the limitations which national security considerations impose, permit the maximum interplay of scientific and engineering ideas, and develop procedures by which more people can contribute to the controlled thermonuclear program in the United States."

Strauss accepted this as support for the AEC's current policies. He observed that the panel recognized the "need for prudence," while urging "the maximum possible interchange of such information."

Information Available.

"This is being done, to the fullest extent consistent with the requirements of national security," he said. "Information about the research underway on controlled fusion is available to industry under the system of access permits."

The report did, however, strip away some of the mystery as to why controlled fusion research has anything to do with national defense. Senator Anderson quotes two eminent scientists, AEC commissioner John von Neumann and Edward Teller, a leader in developing the H-bomb, as saying the possibility is slim and remote, if it exists at all, that a controlled fusion reaction might have military significance.

When the Anderson-Strauss dispute came close to a name-calling stage two weeks ago, Strauss issued a statement saying he had told Anderson about "the legal basis" for the secrecy policy in a letter last October. But Strauss did not say what was in the letter.

'Restricted Data.'

With publication of the panel's report last Tuesday night Strauss's reasoning finally became known. The report quoted his letter as saying: "It appears that any thermonuclear reactor will be a substantial neutron producer capable of producing substantial quantities of special nuclear material. Hence, it is our opinion that information relating to controlled thermonuclear reactions is 'data concerning . . . the production on special nuclear material' and falls within the definition of 'restricted data' as defined in Section 11 (R) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954."

The same reasoning is the only justification for what secrecy remains in the field of fission reactors, the current type of nuclear furnace, which employs the atomic bomb principle. They also produce "special nuclear material" — plutonium or other atomic fuels—as by-products, and these substances can be used to make atomic weapons.

Yet, in the case of fission reactors, the panel recommended that the AEC "remove all reactor technology from the restricted date category."

Apparent Contradiction.

It was left unclear why plutonium by-products require continued secrecy in one field but not in the other. The joint committee can be expected to explore this apparent contradiction.

Anderson is not likely to be mollified by the AEC's announcement that controlled fusion data would be made available to specially-cleared persons who hold "access permits" admitting them to secret information. He has ridiculed the entire access program, started a year ago, as "an example of supposed security which is not security at all."

The AEC would not even acknowledge that it was working on the controlled fusion project until late last summer. The subject had been successfully kept off the agenda of the International Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy, held in Geneva last August. But the conference chairman, Homi J. Bhabha, chairman of the Indian Atomic Energy Commission, brought the subject into the open by predicting that controlled fusion would be achieved within 20 years.

Disclosed Project.

Strauss shortly afterward disclosed that the AEC had begun a controlled fusion project, but he told little more than that bare fact.

Anderson, meanwhile, had been growing more and more impatient about the secrecy surrounding the subject. He wrote to Strauss asking why secrecy was necessary and considered Strauss's reply, the October letter, unsatisfactory.

Anderson took his case to the public last December. In a speech at Cleveland, he declared he had heard no sound military reason advanced for keeping our work on this subject "classified."

"It is my considered opinion that the time has now arrived when we should declassify, not merely downgrade, all our work in the controlled hydrogen field," Anderson said.

Then Strauss, speaking in Anderson's home town of Albuquerque, said some of those who complained about secrecy did so because of "a limited understanding of what is involved."

Open Letter to Strauss.

Anderson took this personally and snapped back last week in an open letter to Strauss. If the chairman of the joint committee was limited in his understanding, Anderson wanted to know, was it because Strauss was disobeying a section of the Atomic Energy Act which requires the AEC to keep the joint committee "fully and completely informed with respect to all of the commission's activities?" Anderson suggested also that Strauss was making his own "personal interpretation of the law."

Strauss, it has been learned, personally telephoned Anderson's office, in what was described as "an extremely agitated tone," and said he understood a press release was being prepared on the subject. He said he was calling in the hope the statement would be held up until Anderson had a chance to read a letter Strauss was composing. However, copies of the Anderson statement already had been distributed to reporters.

WORST SNOW IN 50 YEARS PARALYZES TEXAS REGION

PLAINVIEW, Tex., Feb. 4 (AP)—The worst snowstorm in 50 years, with drifts as deep as nine feet, paralyzed much of the Texas Panhandle and south plains today.

Most inter-city busses quit running after a number were stranded and passengers had to be rescued by tractor.

Many stores were closed and some main streets were blocked in Plainview, Hereford, Amarillo, Canyon and Borger. Amarillo and Lubbock city busses had quit running yesterday.

Plainview and Hereford, both with two feet or more of snowfall, were hardest hit by the storm which blew through the Panhandle last night and today.

Snow drifted to the eaves of some homes in Plainview. Six and eight-foot drifts blocked some streets.

HAIRCUT CLASSES STOPPED AFTER BARBERS PROTEST

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (UP)—A haircutting class at the McCormick Y.W.C.A. to teach mothers how to trim their children's hair has been dropped after only three meetings.

"It's illegal," said Frank Aliotta, secretary-treasurer of the Master Barbers Association. "No one can run a barber college without a license."

Miss Norma Stauffar, who taught the classes, agreed to halt them.

"We got into this in all innocense," she said. "We thought it was like millinery or sewing classes. We were not teaching anybody to become a barber."

GOLSCHMANN GIVEN PLAQUE BY MUSICIANS

Honored by Those in Orchestra Throughout His Career Here.

Vladimir Golschmann, who is concluding his twenty-fifth and final full years as conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra this season, received a plaque at Kiel Auditorium last night from 24 musicians who have been with the orchestra since the beginning of Golschmann's St. Louis career.

The presentation took Golschmann by surprise. It came as he returned to the podium following the concert intermission in the Opera House. Audience and orchestra applauded the 62-year-old conductor, who becomes part-time conductor and musical director next year.

Golschmann had taken baton in hand for the opening bart of Tcherepnin's Symphonic March Opus 80 when Max Steindel, violoncellist and personnel manager, came onstage and asked permission to speak. Golschmann, looking puzzled, nodded for him to proceed.

"I have a very interesting duty to perform," Steindel said, and he called the names of veteran orchestra members, who came forward and stood in a row. One of them, Stellario Giacobbe, a violist, had left his sickbed to be present.

Steindel, presenting the plaque, remarked that it was something of a coincidence that this waa Golschmann's twenty-fifth anniversary, and there were 25 orchestra-members, including Golschmann, who had been here for the full period.

"This comes from the bottom of the heart," Steindel said, remarking that the group had been through a great many fortissimos, pianissimos and crescendos together.

Golschmann seemd close to tears as he made reply. He said symphony orchestra members "never become millionnaires" but they carry on a great tradition. "Our past is a great one, and we have to give our best," he said.

Inscribed on the plaque were the names of the 24 musicians and the words: "To Vladimir Golschmann, from his devoted friends of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. 1931-1956." The names were the following:

Steindel, Elmer Gesner, percussion and librarian; Clarence Gesner, stage manager and librarian; Isadore Grossman, first violin; Jacob Levine, first violin; Sol Kranzberg, second violin; Rudolph Magin, second violin; Louis Etzkow, second violin; Ernest Walker, second violin; Herbert Van der Burg, viola; Stellario Giacobbe, viola; Victor Hugo, viola.

Joseph Antonucci, oboe; Pasquale De Conto, violoncello; Carl Steppi, violoncello; Antonio La Marchina, violoncello; Mrs. Graziella Pampari, harp; Charles Camacho, bass clarinet; John E. Ferrell, bassoon; Edward Murphy, horn; Robert L. Gustat, horn; Joseph Carione, trumpet; William Ehrlich, tympani; and David J. Rizzo, percussion.

Russia Beats Canada in Hockey, Takes Winter Olympic Title

Czechs Routed By U.S.

CORTINA, Italy, Feb. 4 (UP)—Russia's snow and ice stars clinched the unofficial team championship in the Winter Olympics today by winning the ice hockey tournament and the gruelling, 24-mile cross-country ski race.

Appearing in the winter games for the first time since Czarist days, the Soviets picked up their sixth gold medal and an important 10 points when their high-scoring hocky team followed up yesterday's 4-0 victory over the United States by downing Canada, 2-0.

Canada had ruled as a slight favorite in the hockey tournament but was no match for the undefeated Russians in today's showdown game.

The United States ice hocky team, which bounced back with a 9-4 victory over Czechoslovakia today, wound up a surprising second in the round robin tournament. This silver medal was worth five points and enabled the Yanks to tie Switzerland for fourth place in the overall standings with 54 ½ points.

121 Points by Russia

There is no offical team championship in Olympic competition. But with points awarded on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 basis for the first six places in each event, the Russians now have totaled 121 points. Austria, runner-up with 78 ½, has no chance to catch Russia in Sunday's final event in—the special ski jumping.

The United States won the unofficial winter games team titles in 1924, 1928 and 1932. Norway led in 1936, Sweden in 1948 and Norway again in 1952.

While Fedor Terentiev, Pavel Kiltchin, Nikolay Anikin and Kuzin won the cross-country test in two minutes, 15.30 seconds, Switzerland's Wily, 47-year-old Franz Kapus outfoxed the world's top bobsledders on the hole-dotted chute to win the four-man title.

Kapus, who suffered a broken back on the one mile, 109-yard Cortina course in the 1954 world championships, lulled 20 rival teams into a sense of security by making slow practice runs. But he bettered the old course record three times during four championship heats to win with an aggregate of five minutes, 10.44 seconds.

Tyler Wins Bronze Medal.

Kapus won by more than a second, a tremendous margin in the daredevil sport. Italy's red-haired Eugenio Monti was second with 5:21.1 and Art Tyler, 40-year-old Rochester, N.Y., physicist, won the bronze medal with 5:12.39.

Tyler made a far better showing than the rest of the American bobbers and skiers.

Jim Bickford of Saranac Lake, N.Y., driving the U.S. No. 2 bob, finished nineteenth in 5:25.16. In the cross-country race, Ted Farwell of Montague City, Mass.; Andrew Miller of McCall, Idaho; Larry Damon of Burlington, Vt.; and Marvin Crawford of Denver, Colo., finished twelveth among 14 entries with a time of 2:32.04.

Drastic Changes in Training Camp Picture.

BASEBALL players are packing their bags for the spring training period and probably will take for granted the lush conditions that are commonplace now as the athletes prepare for the championship season.

There have been great changes in the way of spring life for the ball player. Now they are quartered at good hotels, travel first class by air, train or motor. The young player in this age of scarce major league talent, can be assured that he will be given every chance to make the grade. If he is on a major league roster he is certain that he will be kept in the training camp, on that roster, for at least 30 days.

Back in the old days, 30 or 40 years ago, the rookie in a training camp was an exception. Spring squads were small and the training period usually was designed to get the fairly well-known starting lineup of regulars, and a few utility men and the pitching staff, into condition for the season.

The club paid the hotel bill and the players signed meal checks at the hotel, or occasionally at a convenient restaurant. When it was necessary for the athletes to be given meal money the standard in the early days was $2.50 or $3 a day. The club paid train fare from the player's home to training camp, but there was no allowance for incidental expenses. Some clubs were generous enough to pay laundry bills.

It's different today. The major league player in training camp usually eats where he pleases and is given spending money to boot. The Cardinals, for instance, in recent years have given each player $8 a day meal money and $25 a week for tips and incidentals. That amounts to about $340 a month and back in those old days there were fairly good big league players who didn't get that much salary during the regular baseball season. Enos Slaughter, for instance, came up from Columbus, where he hit .381, and went to spring training camp with a $2400 contract. If the Cards had a .381 hitter coming up today, his contract would call for not much less than $10,000 and the club probably would give him a villa on the beach to make sure he was very happy.

Efficiency of Present System Is Questionable.

THERE have been refinements in the training phases of the spring camp, but it's possible that occasionally the camp of today is not as efficient as the rugged camp of the early years.

More time is spent today on instruction in various phases of baseball, such as sliding, base running, pick-off plays, executing and breaking up the sacrifice or squeeze play, bunting, etc. But because there are so many athletes in camp considerable time is wasted, perhaps unavoidably, on players who are known to be destined to leave the big league squad at cutting down time.

Back in 1922, for instance, when the Browns were training at Mobile for a season in which they barely missed the the pennant, there was a small, compact squad, consisting of the regulars, utility infielders and outfielders and the pitching staff. The pitchers on the roster, the prospective starters, did the batting practice pitching. Today there are so many batting practice pitchers in a major league camp, and so many on the club roster, that frequently a prospective regular pitcher will work only a few innings during a six-week training and exhibition game period. Last spring, for instance, there was at least one Cardinal pitcher, with an excellent minor league record, who didn't pitch even one inning in an exhibition game. That's all right if you have a staff like some in Cardinal uniforms a few years ago. For instance if you have Mort Cooper, Howie Pollet, Max Lanier, Johnny Beazley, Ernie White, Al Brazle, Harry Brecheen and men like that, you know they can pitch. What they do in the spring isn't too important.

A year ago, as spring training opened, the Cardinals didn't know much about their pitching staff. And when the championship play started, the staff was so uncertain that Brooks Lawrence, despite a miserable training camp showing, drew the starting assignment in the opening game of the season.

Undoubtedly it will be different this year. Numerous B Squad games have been scheduled and everybody will get a better chance to show what he can do.

Kramer, Michigan Top Bears

By Harold Tuthill
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 4—Washington University, noted for its basketball defense, could find no adequate way to stop Michigan's Ron Kramer here tonight and as a result the Bears bowed to the Wolverines, 81 to 66.

Kramer—big, husky and aggressive—was named as an end on All-America football teams and, after the 28 points he poured in against Washington, the Bears were willing to nominate him for a place on anybody's basketball All-America.

In addition, the 6-3, 220-pound center with springs in his legs, triggered several fast breaks which caught the Washington defense flat-footed.

And, if a great exhibition by Kramer, who improved his 18.9 average considerably, was not enough, the Bears only faintly resembled the fired-up combination which won eight straight after losing to Illinois, 75-74 in December. They made only 17 of 54 field goal attempts for 31 per cent against 29 out of 74 tries for 39 per cent by Michigan.

In fact, had it not been for Bud Cristal's success at the free throw line, the Bears might have been humiliated more than they were in suffering their worst defeat of the season. Michigan's total of 81 was the most scored against Washington, which now has dropped to 11-5 after successive defeats at Wayne Friday and here tonight.

Cristal, who scored three field goals, canned 14 of 18 free throws for 20 points, to lead the Bears. Jim Barton, the Bears' leading scorer, made only eight as the Wolverines of Bill Perigo gave the Edwardsville flash few scoring opportunities.

Score Tied Four Times.

Washington early looked as if it might hand Michigan its seventh defeat to go with as many victories. In the first half Blair Gullion's athletes traded baskets with Kramer and Co., the score being tied four times—at 6-6, 20-20, 22-22 and 24-24.

Then the Wolverines spurted in the last four minutes of the period as Washington found difficulty in moving in close enough for a good shot. At the half the Bears trailed, 36-32.

Starting the second half, the Bears put on a 15-point rally which sent them ahead of Michigan, 47-44, with 13 minutes to play. After Jerry Stern scored for Michigan, the count was tied

HAWKS RUN STREAK TO 7 IN ROW

Beat Ft. Wayne, 98-94; Warriors Here Today

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ELKHART, Ind., Feb. 4—Bob Pettit popped in 40 points, 21 of them in a blazing fourth quarter, as the St. Louis Hawks defeated the Fort Wayne Pistons, 98-94, for their seventh straight National Basketball Association win here tonight.

The Hawks will try to make it eight in succession when they meet the Philadelphia Warriors, leaders of the Eastern Division, in a Sunday afternoon game at St. Louis's Kiel Auditorium. Starting time is 3 o'clock, with high school students and youngsters to be admitted for a 50-cent service charge.

Some 3000 Hoosier fans saw the St. Louis team top the Western Division pace-setters for the second time in three nights. Their margin over the Pistons in a Thursday doubleheader at Kiel was 98-90.

The Hawks were behind in the early stages but moved ahead, 44-42, and 68-64. Ft. Wayne, handicapped by the absence of Mel Hutchins, injured in St. Louis two nights ago, never managed to gain the lead

Georgetown Triumphs Over LaSalle, 67-63, In Overtime Thriller

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4 (AP)—Georgetown University nipped LaSalle, 67-63, in an extra period before 2511 frenzied fans in the second game of a college basketball doubleheader at The Palestra tonight.

Substitute Bob Powers came off the bench in the opener to pace Villanova to a 61-57 triumph over Fordham in a double overtime contest.

Georgetomn led during most of the game, but LaSalle rallied in the second half to go ahead, 53-51, with six minutes to play. The explorers held a 57-53 advantage two minutes later, but a jump shot by Dale Smith and a field ogal by Ken Pichette knotted the count with 3:14 to play. With 2:10 remaining, Georgetown held the ball for a final shot, but Matt White's stab went astray in the final three seconds.

In the overtime session, Pichette sank two field goals to put Georgetown ahead.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 4—The "team with a dream," as the St. Louis University Billikens have been dubbed, moved into a commanding position in the Missouri Valley Conference basketball race tonight by outplaying Tulsa University in a 73-66 victory.

Now 6 and 0 in the 12-game title chase in which all other teams have lost at least twice following Oklahoma A. & M.'s defeat at Detroit tonight, the Bills headed into a week of decision with an almost unbeatable lead.

The St. Louis team that just a year ago had to share the Valley championship and take a back seat in the N.I.T. while co-champion Tulsa went to the more important N.C.A.A. tournament, struck its biggest blow here.

Seven Wins on Road.

As steady as a rock on a foreign court as they have been in winning all seven of their road games this season to equal a school record, the Bills showed no signs of bending under the pressure of low-scoring basketball.

In fact they played it better than Clarence Iba's height-shy Tulsa team as they plugged away for their ninth consecutive triumph. They became only the sixth team in St. Louis history to put together that large a winning streak. The record is 11.

With the Aggies' defeat at Detroit and here at Tulsa the week before, the Bills now appear likely to extend their run Monday night when they play Oklahoma A.&M. at Kiel Auditorium in St. Louis. The Aggies are 2-2 in conference play, Houston is 5-2 and comes to St. Louis next Saturday after having lost at home to the Bills.

St. Louis's season record, which raised the Bills to eleventh ranking in the country in the Associated Press poll, has grown to 14 victories and two early defeats after their pair of road wins this week. Their only remaining conference game away from home are at Peoria with Bradley's weakened team and at A.&M. at the end of the season.

Knocking the eyes out of the hoops at the free throw line, the Bills made 27 out of 32. They were outscored in field goals, 27 to 23; outshot in percentage by .370 to .442, but they mastered the rebounding, 49-24, and controlled the ball well with their usual handling speed and deception of movement.

27 for Grady Smith.

Grady Smith, scoring 15 out of 16 from the free throw line, wound up with 27 points, high for both sides, and his performance was a rebound from an off-night at Wichita Thursday.

Capt. Jim McLaughlin was on the beam as usual and scored 20 points, with six out of six from the free throw line.

It was Tulsa's seventh setback in 18 games and if the Hurricane had ideas of being a spoiler in the conference race, the motion didn't apply to St. Louis on this ice-bound evening when the weather held the crowd down to 4029.

The Billikens took the lead shortly before the 10-minute mark and never lost it. They were ahead by eight at the half, 32-24, and the nearest Tulsa ever got again was the seven-point spread which was the finishing margin.

The Billikens' final total of 73 points was 15 over the average Tulsa yield of 58.1, which has given the Hurricane eighth ranking in defense in the nation. It also was some 15 points under the Bills' average of 88.3.

But Eddie Hickey's athletes always made good on their shots when they needed them and their advantage grew to as much as 12 points early in the second half.

And those free throws kept popping in the basket from the time they missed two at the start of the contest to the moment — with only about five minutes play left in the game—when one of Harold Alcorn's charity shot was cancelled by a Billiken getting into the lane too soon.

Yes, they were a team with a dream, as the Bills' publicist, Phil Dynan calls them, and they expect to keep right on going until they win the title and go to the N.C.A.A. championship.

Dublin-Born Ron Delany First by 15 Yards in Wanamaker Mile

Whitfield Is Beaten By Jenkins

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (UP)—Skinny Ron Delany, the Irish wolfhound from Villanova College, took over with two laps to go and won the Wanamaker Mile by a 15-yard margin in 4:09.5 at the Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden tonight.

With Wes Santee on the sidelines because of expense account difficulties, the Dublin-born Delany had virtually no competition as he finished 15 yards ahead of Len Truex, former Ohio State ace now in the Air Force. Joe Deady of Washington, D.C., the world three-quarter mile record holder, finished third in the five-man field in a slow race before 13,000 spectators.

The crowd got a much greater thrill earlier as unbeaten Charlie Jenkins of Villanova dethroned Olympian Mal Whitfield in the 600-yard run and Dave Sime of Duke and Lee Calhoun of North Carolina College also remained unbeaten this year in winning the 60-yard dash and high hurdles.

Calhoun's chore was made easier because perennial hurdle champion Harrison Dillard was on the sidelines with a pulled thigh muscle.

Tom Courtney of Fordham had won the evening's first major event, when the former Fordham ace now in the Army captured the 880-yard run in 1 minute, 53.2 seconds.

Lanky Sime, the galloping redhead from Duke who is unbeaten in the sprints this year, got off poorly in the 60-yard dash but finished strong to win the event in 6 minutes, .2 second.

Colhoun of North Carolina College, another new undefeated sensation shooting for the Olympic team, sailed to a blanket finish victory in the 60-yard high hurdles in 7 minutes, 3 seconds.

Slender Jenkins of Villanova, unbeaten in three races during the indoor season, jumped into the lead at the gun and led all the way to capture the 600-yard run by 15 yards in 1 minute, 11.2 seconds.

Bob Richards won the Millrose pole vault for the tenth straight year and broke his own year-old meet record of 15-2 by soaring 15 feet 4 inches on his last try.

Greenville 135, Springfield 62

Greenville College smashed its school scoring record last night, defeating Concordia of Springfield, Ill., 135 to 62, in a Prairie Conference basketball game.

Five players scored in double figures for the Panthers, led by Shelby Young and Del Maroon with 29 points apiece.

The previous Greenville record was 124 points, scored against Rose Poly last season.

Henrich Resigns as Brewery President

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 4 (UP)—Thomas (Tommy) Henrich, former New York Yankee outfielder, said today he has resigned as president of the Red Top Brewing Co.

Henrich said he plans to return to the east where he has had offers to go back on radio and television as a sportscaster.

The former ball player came here two years ago to take over the presidency of the brewery. Last fall he relinquished his option to purchase the company to a group of Chicago investors who now control and operate the firm.

New Swim Mark.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 4 (UP)—Ohio State's unbeaten swim team churned to an unexpectedly easy 57-36 Big Ten victory over Indiana at Columbus today when Al Wiggins turned in a new American mark of 2:11.2 in the 200-yard individual medley.

Revamped Sumner Squeezes By Soldan; No. 7 in League

Sumner High's Bulldogs, without three first-liners who graduated in January, gained their seventh straight Public High League basketball victory last night, nicking Soldan, 48 to 46, in a doubleheader at Hadley Gym.

Beaumont smashed Vashon, 68 to 33, in the first game. Tom Stanton's Blue Jackets moved into undisputed possession of secoond place in the standing with a 6-1 record, with Vashon (5-2 now) dropping to fourth. Hadely (6-2) is third.

Although the Bulldogs had many a close moment toward the end, they managed to gain the points they needed in the fourth quarter. Soldan outscored them then, 16 to 5, but it wasn't enough.

Six-foot-three Tom Weathersby led the Sumner scoring attack with 20 points. Don Thompson had 14 for the Tigers.

Beaumont's big center Don Sullivan, pushed in 22 points for the Blue Jackets.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4 (UP)—Needles and Nail, a pair of three-year-olds each of which won juvenile championships last season, were entered for their first race of the year today.

The leading candidates for the $100,000 Flamingto Stakes Feb. 25 and the triple crown classic to follow next spring, were among the six horses named for Monday's $10,000 Golden Glades Purse at Hialeah Park.

Nail, winner of the Remsen Handicap and the Belmont and Pimlico Futurities last year, will be ridden by Jockey Hedley Woodhouse under 124 pounds. Dave Erb will make up most of the 119 pounds aboard Needles, winner of the Sappling and Hopeful Stakes.

THE SPORTS BEAT

by John P. Carmichael

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1956.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4

THE Bear facts are these: "Paddy" Driscoll is the new coach of the Bears, but a synonym would be coordinator. Operations will go on as usual under the supervisory eye of George Halas (retired).

The appointment of Driscoll was a happy solution for all concerned as long as an outside coach, like Bud Wilkinson, was not going to be imported. Speculation favored Luke Johnsos, longtime No. 1 aide to Halas, but there must have been reasons why he didn't get the nod.

One such reason stems from the Halas edict that his successor must be able to devote full time to the job. Luke does have an outside business interest which is lucrative enough to demand some of his time. But primarily the naming of Driscoll forestalled any upheaval in the present coaching alignment.

Johnsos and Clark Shaughnessy, as co-coaches under Halas, didn't see eye-to-eye and it was a foregone conclusion that if Luke got the job, Clark would be able to spend more than six months a year at his Santa Monica (Calif.) home.

The fact that Driscoll will be operating on a one-year contract prompted the question: "Did Halas at any time consider the acquisition of a big-name college coach?" The Papa Bear answered hesitantly, putting these words together carefully:

"Not more than a passing thought. That would be something for the future. It would not be feasible to work such a transition right away."

No Change in Offense.

NATURALLY such an answer begets the possibility that in time to come, perhaps a rather immediate future, "there'll be quite a turnover in the Bear staff." After all, "Paddy" is 60 to George's 61. But by way of further explanation for his current selection, Halas said: "We have just started to crystalize a new type offense." Indicating a lack of of desire on his part to disturb the present functioning setup.

The offense to which George referred isn't anything revolutionary, but the Bears did lead the National League in rushing yardage while running from the "slot" or passing formation, something which they haven't been able to do in recent years. The choice of a new field leader from the ranks should raise little question.

Why Driscoll? Well, for one thing, he won't try to run the whole show. He and George are more than owner and employe. They are social friends.

Halas admitted it was during a dinner at Driscoll's home maybe 10 days ago, to which Fred Gillies and Tom McGuire were also guests, that "Paddy" might be the man to "fulfill the means to an end. To meet the requirements." (George is a cagey talker.)

Actually, Halas didn't have too much choice for his successor in staying within the ranks. "Bulldog" Turner is a top-notch steel salesman with demands upon his time. Johnsos would have demanded complete control and, for that matter, probably did. Shaughnessy is no longer interested in a full-time job with its responsibilities so far from his California hearth.

EAST LANSING, Mich., Feb. 4 (AP)—Michigan State edged Purdue, 20-19, in a Big Ten wrestling meet today.

Far West Girls In International Golf Finals

HOLLYWOOD, Fla., Feb. 4 (UP)—Ruth Jessen and Ann Quast, a couple of youngsters from the Far West, caught fire in the women's international four-ball golf tournament today and easily whipped a pair of veterans, 5 and 4.

They eliminated Mary Ann Downey of Baltimore and Marge Burns of Greensboro, N.C. without losing a hole. They play Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore and Mary Patton Janssen of Charlottesville, Va., in the 36-hole finals Sunday.

Miss Quast is an 18-year-old Curtis Cup team member from Seattle, Wash., and Miss Jessen a 19-year-old freshman at the University of Seattle.

Mrs. Glick and Miss Janssen defeated Barbara Little and Nadyne Grannick, both of Milwaukee, 1 up in the other semi-final match.

Consistent Performer.

BOSTON (AP)—Jackie Jensen of the Red Sox certainly is a consistent performer. Just compare his 1954 and 1955 records.

In both years he appeared in 152 games and batted .276. In 1954 he batted in 117 runs and in 1955 it was 116. In 1954 he slammed 25 homers compared to 26 this year.

Webster Retains Suburban Crown, Edging Ritenour

In a game that was close all the way, Webster Groves slipped past Ritenour in the final minute on a pair of successful free throws by Jerry Wolff to win its fourth straight title in the Suburban League tournament last night. The score was 55 to 54.

Neither of the finalists was seeded, with all four of the ranked teams having been eliminated before the semifinals.

Wolff, whose free throws came with his team trailing 54-53, finished with 18 points. In the four games of the tournament he totaled 89.

After Wolff's shots, Ritenour had one scoring chance but missed, and Webster managed to stall for the remaining 45 seconds.

Arnold Jellison and Bill Allen each had 13 points to pace Ritenour.

Ferguson took the third place trophy by defeating Kirkwood in overtime, 66 to 60. Gary Thompson, who made two field goals during Ferguson's eight-point overtime session, had 33 points in all. Gene McClanahan led Kirkwood with 20.

Holman Started in 1947.

Johnny Holman, knockout victor over Bob Satterfield, began boxing professionally in 1947.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Nice, Easy Evening For Harry Kessler.

"I COULD have been in a wheelchair at ringside; I didn't even have to be in the ring," said Harry Kessler when he got off the plane here after refereeing Friday night's fight in Madison Square Garden in which Hurricane Tommy Jackson defeated Bob Baker.

"Not once did I lay a hand on either of them," he said, "and I can't remember ever seeing or refereeing a fight without clinches."

Harry said there was some diversity of opinion at ringside as to the winner. Harry and one judge voted for Jackson five rounds to four with one even while the other judge voted it a draw as to rounds and points.

"They took a poll of the writers in the Garden and they had it 9 to 5 for Baker," he said.

"I didn't have to say anything to either of them at any time but I did hear Baker tell Jackson to 'close your glove.' Jackson had been flicking Baker with his left with thumb sticking out."

As to his opinion of Jackson, whom he saw fight for the first time, Kessler said he was undecided except for the fact that he is a super man physically.

"There has been considerable talk as to what Rocky Marciano would do with Jackson," Harry remarked. "Some are of the opinion that Rocky would flatten him easily but I just don't know. Maybe Marciano could hit him with those pile-driving punches and Jackson would still come on. You can hurt him but you can't discourage him.

"He is a terrific trainer, as everyone knows, does about 10 to 20 miles every day on the road and spends lots of time in the gymnasium.

"Definitely he is a man who will have to be reckoned with in coming bouts for the heavyweight championship and I think that the victory over Baker will have a bearing on who is the next opponent for Rocky," Harry said.

TV View.

FROM the television, it appeared that while Jackson swarmed all over Baker in nine of the ten rounds, Baker struck the harder blows. But Jackson took them all without going down; he wobbled two or three times but came back in with his arms flailing.

Seldom, if ever, has there been a heavyweight who could travel the pace that Jackson can go. He starts at the opening bell and keeps everlastingly after his opponent until the finish.

In only one round against Baker did he appear to coast. That was the ninth in which it seemed he wanted to save his strength to make a strong finish. And he did so.

Baker is a pretty good boxer and he's a good hitter, although he's slow, both on his feet and with his hands. He seemed to be mystified at times over Jackson's antics.

As Bob would square, preparing to box in the normal fashion, he would be hit three or four times and you could almost hear him say "Where are these punches coming from?"

Coming on the heels of Baker's very unimpressive victory over Nino Valdes of Cuba at Cleveland in December, the loss to Jackson, which snapped a winning streak for Baker after 13 in a row, Bob's cause has been set back for a considerable time.

He has been mentioned prominently as a possible foe for Marciano but he undoubtedly will have to gain some more points before he is given championship consideration.

Jackson, of course, is a real puzzler. When he fights as he did against Baker, that is, simply brawls, he's a mighty tough man to beat. He knows little, and appears to care less, about the finer points of boxing. He just wades in using his great stamina to absorb punishment and dishes out a great deal himself, even though he doesn't appear to be a very hard hitter.

He is unstable, of course. He has lost matches to Jimmy Slade and was stopped in four rounds by Valdes who fought him the way it appears would be the most successful way to cope with the Hurricane.

One Way to Beat Him.

THAT is Valdes rushed in, bulled Jackson to the ropes and hit him as he came off the ropes. Valdes shoved him, pushed him, whacked him with both hands at every opportunity and didn't give Jackson a chance to go into his fancy dancing tactics.

Baker, as strong, or stronger than Valdes, tried to fight him in orthodox fashion and you just can't do that with Jackson.

Tommy would be a difficult foe for Marciano, or anybody else. Rocky probably would be able to nail him with some of his terrific punches and should stop him but it would be a whale of a brawl while they were both in there.

New Award for Most Valuable Pitchers Voted by the Majors

Minimum Pay Still At $6000

Intentional Pass Automatic in A. L. In Spring Games

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (UP). THE American League decided today to conduct an experiment in spring training this year whereby a player being given an intentional pass will be automatically awarded first base. No pitches need be thrown.

"This is an idea that we're trying in connection with our campaign to speed up ball games," said American League President Will Harridge. "I don't know what the reaction of the fans will be. That's what we want to find out."

The National League will not go along with the idea except that it will co-operate by adopting the plan in games played with American League teams during the spring exhibition season.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (UP)—The major leagues, acting upon a proposal by Commissioner Ford Frick, voted today to establish a new award next season for the most valuable pitcher in each league.

The award, honoring the late Cy Young, who won more games than any other hurler in the history of baseball, 511, will be entirely apart from the most valuable player accolade.

That was the major action taken by the club owners today in a marathon session in which they also voted to turn down once again the demands of the players for a boost in the salary minimums from $6,000 to $7,200.

And on a "command performance" the owners also voted to keep all negotiations for a new World Series and All-Star game radio and TV contract strictly in the hands of the commissioner.

Frick had insisted that this be the procedure, demanding that the players be excluded from such negotiations.

The pitcher award, which has been a pet project of Frick for some time, probably will be made by the baseball writers under the same procedure as for the most valuable player in each league. Under the present set-up, three writers from each league city vote for the most valuable player.

"It hasn't made sense to me that the pitchers be ranked with other players in the voting for most valuable players," Frick said. "There is no fair basis for comparison."

In vetoing the player demands for a boost in the minimum salary the club owners granted one concession. They appointed three-man committees in each league to review the present salary structures and to ascertain if the present minimum and unlimited maximum are equitable.

The committes appointed were John Galbreath of Pittsburgh, Dick Meyer of St. Louis, and Joe Cairnes of Milwaukee for the National League and Tom Yawkey of Boston, Walter (Spike) Briggs of Detroit and Hank Greenberg of Cleveland for the American League.

Frick said he already had talked with a number of people about sponsorship of the World Series and all-star games but that everything was on an informal basis. He said there definitely would not be any beer or wine comapnies permitted to be sponsors and that he also personally opposed cigar or cirgarette sponsorship, even though such deals might be made for more money than any other which could be consummated.

The leagues also voted to arrange an agenda of four joint meetings each year instead of the customary one or two.

Jackson's 33 Keeps Edwardsville Rolling

Edwardsville High School's sensational one-two punch, Mannie Jackson and Govonor Vaughn, accounted for 58 points last night as the Tigers took the wind out of the Taylorville Tornadoes in a non-conference basketball game, 91-75. The win was Southwestern Conference leader Edwardsville's fifteenth in 20 starts.

Jackson pumped in 33 points to bring his season total to 505, just 61 shy of the school record of 566 set by Bog Gregor in 35 games during the 1953-54 season. There's still five more games on the Edwardsville schedule, plus tournament play. Vaughn had 25 markers, and Jim Frisina of Taylorville pumped in 13 baskets for 26 points.

TORONTO, Feb. 4 (UP)—The Chicago Black Hawks earned their first victory in 10 starts tonight, dumping the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-2, to move within a point of fourth place in the National Hockey League.

Tigers Hold Off Oklahoma, Four Sooners Finish Game

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 4 (AP)—Missouri fought off shorthanded Oklahoma for a 77-72 Big Seven basketball decision tonight after the Sooners, who played with only four men the last minute and 39 second, threw a second-half scare into the Tigers.

Sophomore forward Joe King paced the Oklahoma attack and was high scorer with 34 points on 13 field goals and eight out of 10 charity chances.

When he left the game on fouls with 1:39 to go, joining two others on the bench who went out for the same reason, the Sooners were forced to finish with four men.

Oklahoma, depleted by (1) player withdrawals since the season began, (2) the illness today of Forward Ed Abbey and (3) disciplinary benching of Guard Joe Jones, suited up only seven tonight.

Missouri flashed a two-pronged attack at the Sooners with Guards Lionel Smith and Norm Stewart each bucketing 23 points.

The Sooners, down by as much as 13 points in the first half and trailing 40-31 at halftime, fielded an all-sophomore team after the intermission and made a game of it.

Oklahoma pulled up 46-42 five minutes into the second half and trailed by only 54-52 with 10:27 to go as King acted the wheelhorse, scoring a point a minute in 10 minutes after halftime.

With the Sooners behind 70-66, Missouri went into a stall.

Florida Drops 12 Members of Football Team

GAINSVILLE, Fla., Feb., 4 (UP)—The University of Florida dropped 12 football players from school today and its grid prospects for 1956 grew bleak from a combination of classroom and police court troubles.

Some of the stars may be restored to eligibility if they make up their work in summer school.

A routine announcement from the university publicity department disclosed the dismissals from the current term because of scholastic deficiencies. Those dropped include star Halfback Jackie Simpson, a stormy figure throughout his Florida career, and Quarterback Richard Allen.

This news followed the arrest in Miami on assault charges yesterday of Jim Rountree, Simpson's running-mate at halfback. Simpson himself was involved in a couple of similar afterhours scrapes last year but was cleared.

The combined blows could be crucial for Coach Bob Woodruff, who barely rode out an alumni storm after a so-so 1955 season.

Marquette Upset By Drake, 66 to 63

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 4 (UP)—Drake fought off a last minute rush and handed Marquette its second straight upset loss tonight, 66-63.

Drake held the lead throughout the second half, several times by as much as six points, but a basket by sub Guard Clem Massey with slightly more than three minutes to go put Marquette into a 60-59 lead.

Marquette moved into a four point lead as it drew out Drake's defense with a stall and Forward Jay Schauer scored a field goal and a free throw.

Drake countered with a basket and a free throw and Red Murrell, who finished the night with 23 points and high point honors, sank a basket in the final minute of play which put Drake back into the lead. Drake added another bucket for the final margin.

Terry Rand and Don Bugalski led Marquette with 14 points apiece. Drake's season record is now eight wins and eight losses. It was Marquette's sixth defeat against 10 wins. Bradley upset the Warriors last week.

Providence Spoils It For Cleveland Crowd

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4 (AP)—Providence came from behind three times tonight and finally downed the Cleveland Barons, 5-4, in an overtime scramble. There were 9357 fans, the best American Hockey League crowd here in three years.

ASK ME ANOTHER

By Harold Tuthill

"Please settle an argument for us about the number of times Battling Nelson fought Joe Gans, where they fought and the outcome." Eugene A. Graham, Louisiana, Mo.

They fought three times. Gans won the lightweight title on a foul in the forty-second round, Sept. 3, 1906, at Goldfield, Nev. Nelson then won the next two fights on knockouts in 1908—in seventeenth round, July 4, at San Francisco, and twenty-first round, Sept. 9, at Colma, Calif.

"During a recent discussion, the question was raised about how high a good basketball rebounder could jump from the floor, going straight up without a preliminary run. Is it possible for a man to leave the floor to a height of 30 inches?" A. G. Schroeck, 9609 Miriam boulevard.

Yes. Henry Schemmer, veteran University City track coach, said such jumps were measured in the junior high school. The boys there jumped 23 inches, so it would not be too difficult for an older basketball player to go 30 inches.

Final-Second Point Gives McKendree Win Over Illinois College

A foul shot by Jeff Riggs, with just two seconds of playing time left, broke a 73-73 tie and gave the McKendree College Bearcats of Lebanon (Ill.) a 74-73 Prairie College Conference basketball victory over Illinois College of Jacksonville last night in the New Baden High School gymnasium. Earlier in the game, Riggs had missed three free throws in as many attempts.

While extending their season and conference won-lost records to 16-6 and 6-1, respectively, the Bearcats were paced by Lloyd Castillo's 17 points. Ed Harrell had 16 for Illinois College.

Arcaro Pilots Our Betters To Upset Win

ARCADIA, Calif., Feb. 4 (UP)—Irish-bred Our Betters, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, scored an upset victory today in the $57,600 Santa Margarita Handicap for the filly-mare championship of the Santa Anita meeting.

With the 8-to-5 favorite, Manotick, failing to come through with her usual tremendous surge in the stretch and with In Reserve also faltering, Our Betters came through on the inside for her win. Island Queen got up for second and Solid Miss was third in the mile and an eighth stakes.

In the co-featured $24,750 handicap, Rex C. Ellsworth's Terrang gave indications of following in the footsteps of his stable-mate, Swaps, by capturing the seven furlong race for three-year-olds by three-quarters of a length. Fathers Risk was second and Bold Bazooka was third.

The big Saturday crowd of 46,500 racing fans was astounded by the Santa Margarita outcome after having favored Manotick and In Reserve to repeat their big race of a few weeks ago in the Santa Maria Handicap, won by In Reserve by less than a length.

But at the wire it was Our Bettors, bred in Ireland and owned by C. H. Jones and Sons of Long Beach, Calif., in front by three quarters of a length.

Our Bettors raced the mile and an eighth in the excellent time of 1:49 1-5, just a second off Your Host's track record. She returned $13.60, $7.60 and $5.20. Island Queen paid $11.50 and $6.80 and the entry of Solid Miss and Solid Rae paid $8.30 to show.

The four-year-old filly is by My Babu and was imported a little more than a year ago from abroad. Her victory was worth $34,500 as compared with a little more than $11,000 she won since coming to these shores.

St. Bonaventure Routs Memphis State, 79-67

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 4 (AP)—St. Bonaventure left Memphis State for dead behind a 26-point lead tonight and then went on to defeat the nation's sixteenth ranked basketball club 79-67 with surprising ease.

BROOKLYN (AP)—The Duke Sniders will celebrate two birthdays instead of one next Sept. 19. The 29-year-old Dodger outfielder's second son, Kurt Brian, was born on Sept. 19. That's Duke's birthday, too.

Four Open Champions to Defend in 21st Golden Gloves

Silence Made Buck Weaver A Black Sox

By Bob Considine

Star Third Baseman Fell With the Guilty.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (INS).

BUCK WEAVER, damned as a conspirator in the Black Sox scandal, but never in his own heart, died the other day. His passing prompts a great reporter who covered that trial to drop me a related note:

"George (Buck) Weaver didn't die in 1956," writes Jim Kilgallen. "To all extents and purposes, he died that day 35 years ago when he and seven others were banished from organized baseball for the remainder of their days.

"He was the greatest third baseman who ever lived. I saw Jimmy Collins, Pie Traynor and all the others. I still say Buck was the greatest. He could field, throw and hit.

"He was a warm, genial fellow, about 5-10, blue-eyed, brown-haired and strong-chinned, with tremendously wide shoulders and a great throwing arm. Scooping up bunts was his specialty.

"Buck once told me that he and Ty Cobb had a standing bet of a silver dollar that any time Cobb laid down a bunt Weaver would throw him out. It was an even-money proposition. He figured that over the years they played against each other, they were about even. They had a fierce love for their own private competition.

"There was a lot of question about Buck's guilt but apparently little or no question about the other seven. Judge Landis gave Weaver the only special hearing he extended.

One Man's Code.

"THE inside information was that other players approached Weaver to help them throw the series. He is supposed to have spurned the suggestion. But when the plot was exposed, he wouldn't turn the culprits in. His attitude was that this would make him a squealer. He told friends that, after all, he had lived with those fellows, played poker with them, etc. Buck Weaver had a code of his own.

"He was rather bitter toward Catcher Ray Schalk and Eddie Collins—whom he always called 'Cocky.' He envied the praise bestowed on these incorruptibles.

"Weaver had to make a living. While Landis was considering his case, he jerked sodas in a relative's drug store—Scanlan's, at Seventy-ninth and South Halstead streets in Chicago. For a time he played ball with the fallen stars, including the great Joe Jackson and Chick Gandil, at White City Amusement Park and elsewhere. For a time he managed a girls' baseball team that played night ball in Chicago. He also did a little work as a croupier and later sold mutuel tickets at the tracks.

"What a gifted athlete he was! I dropped by Scanlan's one day to see how he was doing and he invited me to play a game of horseshoes out back. He said 'I'll beat you 21 to 3.' He beat me 21 to 3. The next day I challenged him to a round of golf. He beat me easily, using only his putter—a la John Montague.

The Honest Record.

"IN the fixed World Series he played phenomenally, apparently trying to prove he was not a part of the fraud. He fielded sensationally and hit .355 if memory serves.

"'Back of the yards' in Chicago, and elsewhere on Chicago's South side, there are men who still insist that Weaver was innocent. Judge Landis had a different conception of integrity than Buck—and Buck paid the price. His fall from one of the highest pinnacles of baseball to one of low esteem was one of the most tragic stories in all baseball history."

450 Enter Tourney At Kiel

By Neal Russo

Four Open Division champions will defend their titles in the twenty-first annual Golden Gloves tournament starting Tuesday night at Kiel Auditorium.

In addition, Don Eddington, the 118-pound novice titleholder a year ago who surprised by winning the national open crown as a replacement, will be back to try for the open honors in the 118-pound division. Also in the field of some 450 entries is Ben Bankhead, heavyweight champion in 1953.

With the 1956 Olympic tryouts and a trip to Australia as an added lure, a strong field is expected at the weigh-ins today at Kiel Auditorium for local entries and from 10 a.m. to noon tomorrow at the Mark Twain Hotel for the out-of-towners.

The Auditorium will be the site for the entire Globe-Democrat-sponsored tournament this year, with three rings in use Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday nights, and one ring for the finals Thursday, Feb. 16. Starting time each night will be 7 o'clock.

Defending Champions.

The 1955 champions back for another try are Tommy Reynolds, Rock A. C., 112 pounds; Willie White, Vashon Center, 126 pounds; Wardell Bolden, Carr Center, 135 pounds, and Leon Brooks, Vashon, 147 pounds.

Reynolds, whose brother Tommy is a promising professional, also won out in the East-West finals at Chicago. Then Reynolds and Don Eddington, a replacement for ailing Larry Freeman, Open champion here at 118 pounds, went to Europe where each won four out of five bouts.

Local titleholders a year ago who are now in the pro ranks include Jesse Bowdry, Rock A. C., middleweight; Irvin Thatch, St. Paul Social Center of East St. Louis, light heavyweight, and Kenny Silvers, St. Paul Center, heavyweight. Freeman has discontinued fighting.

Among the novice champions, who, of course, must move up to the open class, is Dan Eddington, 118-pound twin of Don Eddington.

Competing Teams.

Teams entered include Boys Town of Missouri, Jacksonville, Tenn., Sikeston, Cape Girardeau, Quincy, Ill., Centralia, Ill., the Lead Belt, and Scott Air Base.

Vashon Center, coached by Sam Westbrooks, will try for its third successive team title against the usual strong city opposition from Tandy, Gamble and other centers. Jefferson Barracks A.C. and the D.A.A.C. of Fenton are among the newer clubs.

Jefferson Barracks Boxing Card Feb. 23.

Winners and runners-up from various clubs will compete in a 12-bout amateur boxing show at the Civic Center building in Jefferson Barracks Feb. 23, starting at 8:30 p.m.

Elmer Howell, coach of the Bangert A.C., is matchmaker for the program. Russ Rodenberg, J.B. team coach, is in charge.

Abram to M.U. On Scholarship

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 4 (UP)—The first Negro ever to receive an athletic scholarship at the University of Missouri, Al Abram Jr., of St. Louis, was enrolled today.

Abram, 17, stands 6-5 and weighs 193 pounds. He was reported out for the freshman basketball team and will be eligible for varsity competition a year from now.

His full scholarship includes room, board, tuition and books, along with an opportunity to earn $15 a month.

Irish Want Kelly, but British Referee Favors Scot—Result: Fight!

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Feb. 4 (AP)—Fight fans rioted tonight after Charlie Hill, a determined Scot, won the British featherweight title from Billy Kelly, an Irishman.

At the end of the close 15-round bout, Referree Tom Little of London, raised Hill's hand. A roar of protest went up from the 15,000 at King's Hall and the ring suddenly was showered with bottles, chairs, tomatoes and old shoes.

While men shouted, "We want Kelly," women in the crowd screamed and fainted. Police charged the rioters with night sticks. A dozen fans were treated for injuries. None was seriously hurt.

Police escorted the two fighters and the referree out of the arena. Hill weighed 125¾ and Kelly 125½.

'Ducks as Far as You Could See'

WILLIAM T. WAUGH of Pleasant Hill., Ill., recalls vividly his experiences in connection with the "fabulous" Armistice day flight of ducks in 1940, described in this column two weeks ago.

"At the time, I had under lease about 1700 acres of pond and marsh about five miles above Dam 24 at Clarksville and about one mile outside the Mississippi river levee on the Illinois side," Waugh writes.

"Early in the morning I went by myself in a Model A Ford roadster, as it was muddy, to a little slough running parallel to a drainage ditch known as 'The Sny.'

"It was warm, and from daylight until 9 a.m. I had seen only two ducks. About 9:30, it started to rain and I decided to drive a mile back to camp. About half way, the road passed behind a blind on a large pond where I had two friends shooting.

"Just as I got behind the blind I heard their guns, stopped the car and looked up. There were ducks as far as you could see.

"The wind had started to blow; sleet and snow were falling, and the temperature was dropping as rapidly as I have ever known it.

"All these thousands of ducks seemed to be absolutely confused and helpless in the high wind. None was flying over 30 yards high and you could have killed them by the wagon load."

Easy to Get the Limit.

Waugh recalls that, in the afternoon, Ed Schweigel of Alton and a friend arrived, seeking a place to shoot ducks. Since the blinds were full, Waugh placed them among stalks in a corn field. In 25 minutes, the two men each had their limit, then 10 ducks a day.

The pond on which Waugh had his blinds was ordinarily only knee deep, but the severe Armistice day storm created waves that broke over the head of a six-foot man, Waugh relates.

"I had a Chesapeake Bay retriever, which was also an American Kennel Club bench champion," he says. "On that day, the dog retrieved 74 ducks from the pond and lost 15 pounds in the process.

"I believe it was the hardest day's work I ever saw a retriever do. I am sure about the weight loss because we were planning to 'bench' him in a couple of weeks and had weighed him only the night before."

The sudden appearance of the waterfowl in huge flights made a "spectacular and never-to-be-forgotten sight," Waugh writes. He recalls there was a similar occurence on Armistice day, 1930, although the number of ducks was not so great in this section of the country.

College Course in Fishing.

A five-day course in instructions on fresh and salt water fishing will be given this summer by the extension division of North Carolina State College.

The course, to be held June 11 through 15 at Nags Head, N.C., has a registration fee of $125, which includes room and board, all fishing trips requiring boats and baits, and instruction.

Texas game officials have been puzzled over what happened to the heavy concentration of migrating ducks that ordinarily appear along the Gulf Coast in November and December. Northern Mexico also has had only a fraction of its usual number of wintering birds.

Conservation authorities have speculated that the Central Flyway flight pattern may have changed, with the ducks skirting Texas and entering Louisiana.

Another possibility is that the Central Flyway birds have decided to winter farther north—a condition quite evident this year in the Mississippi Flyway. Missouri and Illinois, for example, have had many more than the usual number of migrating ducks remaining through the cold months.

Final figures on the nationwide survey being supervised by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service to ascertain the amount of time and money spent by sportsmen on hunting and fishing will be ready by June and are expected to be announced soon thereafter.

The federal agency also has requested the 35,000 waterfowl shooters who have received questionnaires dealing with the past season to complete them as soon as possible. Results of the survey will be correlated with other information in the preparation of this fall's hunting regulations.

Stake for Bird Dogs.

An amateur shooting-dog stake will be held Saturday and next Sunday at the August A. Busch Wildlife Area at Weldon Spring under auspices of the St. Louis Field Trial Association.

George Dodson, association secretary, said spectators will find it well worth their while to "spend a day outdoors at this scenic wildlife area and watch bird dogs in action."

Layne Loses To German

FRANKFURT, Germany, Feb. 4 (AP)—Hans Friedrich of Germany outpointed Rex Layne of Lewiston, Utah, in a crude heavyweight 10 rounder tonight.

The bout was marked by wrestling, shoving and stumbling which drew boos from the crowd of 5000 in the Frankfurt Festhalle.

The 198-pounder German fighter did an excellent job of jabbing constantly with his left and following occasionally with a hard right.

But Layne, who defeated Friedrich in Salt Lake City in 1954, used his 216½ pounds to shove and elbow in the clinches. There were no knock-downs but the heavy Salt Lake City fighter tripped twice during the bout and fell to the floor.

Softball Umpires' Clinic.

The A.S.A. umpires' clinic will begin tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock at Sherman Recreation Center. Softball umpires interested should contact E. C. Grasser, A.S.A. commissioner for Metropolitan St. Louis, at MA 1-5560, station 678, or appear at the clinic.

Royals Plaster Celtics, 83-69; Cousy Injured

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Feb. 4 (AP)—Rochester overcame an early 15-point deficit to rout the Boston Celtics, 83-69, in a wild nationally-televised National Basketball Association game today.

Boston Coach Red Auerbach and Player Ernie Barrett were ejected from the game, Bob Cousy suffered a sprained left ankle in the first period, and there was a fight between Don Meineke of Rochester and Bill Sharman of Boston.

Barrett was tossed out of the game by Referee Sid Borgia a few seconds before the first half ended when he "threw" the ball at Borgia after being charged with a personal foul.

Auerbach got into the argument and continued jawing away at the official as the teams left the floor at the intermission. Borgia then told Auerbach to stay off the bench during the second half.

Meineke and Sharman went for a loose ball late in the game and wound up scrapping vigorously on the floor. The brawl was broken up by the officials and a jump ball was called.

Druze Named Football Coach At Marquette

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 4 (UP) — Marquette University turned to Notre Dame today and picked Johnny Druze, an Irish coaching veteran, as its head football coach.

Druze, assistant coach and chief scout at Notre Dame for 12 years, replaced Frosty Ferzacca, dismissed with one year to go on a $10,000 contract.

The Marquette athletic board, in naming Druze, followed the recommendation of new Athletic Director Larry (Moon) Mullins, an ex-Notre Dame star.

Mullins, who has vowed to boost Marquette into a top college football power, left no doubt that Druze was his choice to boost the sagging Warrior fortunes.

Druze told a news conference he agreed to a three-year contract, unsigned as yet, at $11,000 a year. He said he had chosen an entirely new staff of assistants, all Notre Dame graduates, with exception of Marquette Assistant Orv Dermody.

It was learned Druze's assistants would be George Dickson, former assistant coach at Notre Dame and assistant coach at Dayton under Hugh Devore, new head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, Fred Wallner, a former Notre Dame player now with the Chicago Cardinals, and Blackie Johnson, now an assistant coach at South Carolina.

Druze, a native of Newark, N. J., gained national fame as an end of the Seven Blocks of Granite at Fordham University in 1937. He put in one year of pro football with the now defunct Brooklyn Dodgers.

Three others were double winners, including Gerald Madden and Don Courtney of the North Side "Y" and Kent Miller of Carondelet.

New Basketball Coach at Texas

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 4 (UP)—Marshall Hughes, freshman basketball coach at the University of Texas, was elevated today to the head coach spot, effective at the end of the current season.

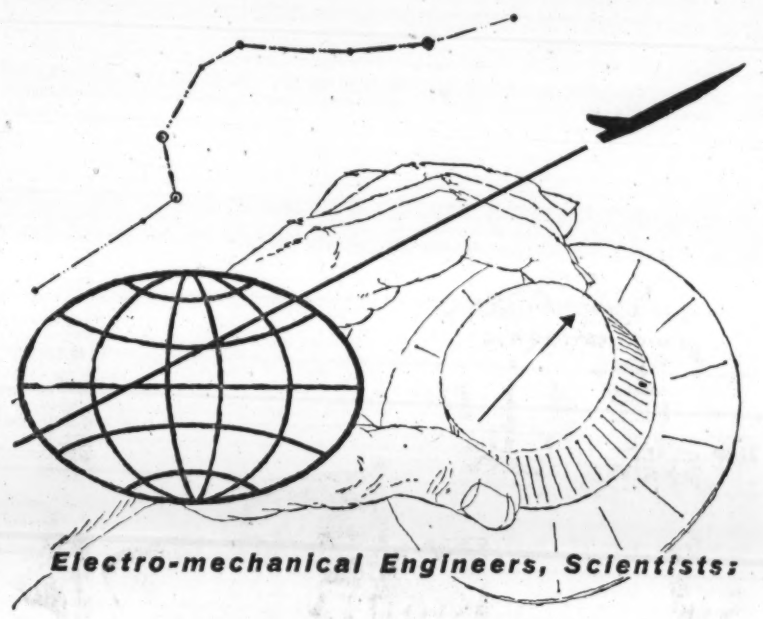

Hughes will succeed Thurman (Slue) Hull, who resigned in mid-January, effective at the close of the present campaign.

Hughes served as a junior high school coach at Port Arthur, Tex., briefly before entering military service, and after his release coached one year each at Rosenberg(Tex., and Arlington, Tex., high schools.

A graduate of North Texas State in 1941, Hughes received a master's degree there in 1946, then went to Tarleton State College for three years as coach. He had been a junior college student there a decade earlier.

He was a four-sport letterman at Stephenville, Tex., High school and lettered in both basketball and tennis at Tarleton and North Texas State.

Hawes Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. William Bryan Lytton Jr., St. Louis.

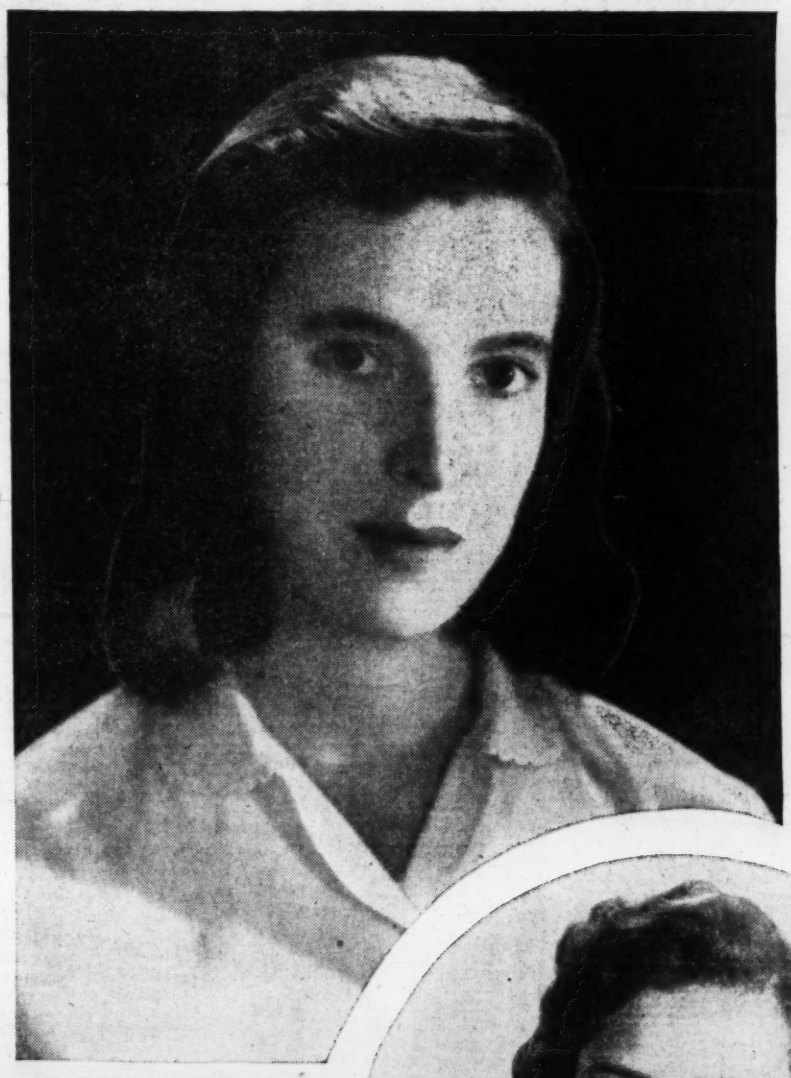

The ceremony was performed in St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church, which was decorated with yellow and white spring flowers, by the Rev. Earl M. Jarrett, a Paulist priest. Mr. Guggenheim gave his daughter in marriage. She was attended by the bridegroom's sister, Miss Jane Langan of Washington, as maid of honor; by Miss Carole Jane Butchart, Miss Susan Ann Olson and Miss Lynn Dee Morris, all of Beverly Hills, bridesmaids, and Miss Martha Lytton Langan, also a sister of the bridegroom, junior bridesmaid.

An empire gown of ivory parchment satin was worn by the bride who carried butterfly orchids and ivory hyacinths. Heirloom rosepoint lace covered the tops of long sleeves and the upper bodice to a narrow band of pale aqua velvet ribbon. An ivory rosepoint lace train and veil which had been worn by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Morton Snellenburg of Philadelphia, were held in place by a rosepoint coronet. Mrs. Snellenburg was present at the wedding.

The young women in the bridal party were dressed alike in aqua taffeta, with flowered aqua hats, and carried spring blossoms—a crescent of yellow iris and tulips for the maid of honor and

NATCHEZ PILGRIMAGE DATES MARCH 2 - 31

Many St. Louisans are now making plans to attend the Natchez Pilgrimage, to be held from March 2 through March 31. During that time 30 antebellum houses will be open to the public, many of them containing museum furnishings which present a vivid picture of the culture that evolved during the lush cotton planter era.

Fire, storm and time have taken a toll of the classic mansions in the Natchez area, and in an effort to preserve the remaining ones the Natchez and Pilgrimage Garden Clubs cooperate each spring in sponsoring the Natchez Pilgrimage.

As a port of call, Natchez was in close contact with many old world centers, and vessels from practically every civilized nation tied up at her wharves with cargoes of rosewood furniture, art objects and ancient vintages, then loaded with cotton.

Two tours are given daily during the Pilgrimage, and three days are required to visit every house listed. Those not choosing to see them all may, of course, take only as many tours as desired. Visitors driving their own cars will find routes plainly marked; transportation is available for those who wish it.

Evening entertainment is offered by the Confederate Pageant presented each Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday during the Pilgrimage.

Modern hotels and motels are equipped to take care of visitors, and a few of the antebellum homes open their doors to overnight guests.

Detailed information on the event may be obtained by writing The Natchez Pilgrimage, Natchez, Miss.

Quick digest of FLORIDA attractions

Bring this handy guide along and see all the Sunshine State!

Matchless beaches—Virtually all of Florida juts down into the warm waters of the south Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico. Here in the peninsula state you have 3,751 miles of exciting, varied and beguiling shoreline to explore. See coral reefs, sugar white sands, sleepy fishing villages, fabulous modern resorts and unforgettable tropical seascapes as you relax in warm sunshine.

Superb swimming—Until you've actually seen Florida waters, it's impossible to conceive how clear and inviting they are. Here the Atlantic is at its most beautiful—emerald green or an intense blue. Both the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic are perfect for swimming, skin-diving, and frolicking in the surf.

30,000 lakes—These, too, provide scores of aquatic thrills. Some lakes are so clear you can peer down 50 feet and view underwater spectacles. Others are secluded and teem with fighting bass. Many are lined by broad beaches and are as sandy-bottomed as the seashore.

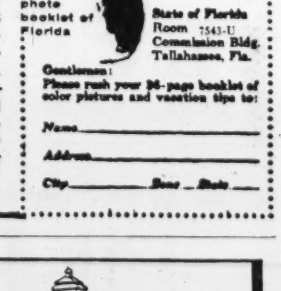

Fishing — Great for light tackle fanciers and you who like your fish giant-size. Catch tarpon, sailfish, bonefish, dolphin and scores of other fighters in waters containing more prize trophies than you can hook into anywhere else in the nation.

Special attractions—They're now off and running at Florida's famed thoroughbred and greyhound race tracks. See Jai Alai (world's fastest game), sailing regattas, concerts under the stars, nationally celebrated entertainers, rodeos, festivals and other attractions such as the National Sports and Stock Car "acceleration and speed runs" now taking place through February 26 at Daytona Beach.

Tropical gardens—Florida's northernmost border is 100 miles south of Mexico's northern boundary on the Pacific Coast. Hence you'll see natural displays of flamboyant and exotic plants that exist nowhere else in the U.S.

Foods—Get your fill of vitamin-packed citrus, of fresh vegetables, of sea delicacies such as oysters, jumbo shrimp, tender pompano and other salty treats. Many areas, too, feature famed Spanish dishes.

Sightseeing—Cruise jungle waterways, see the picturesque Florida Keys, the unforgettable marine panoramas all over the state. Visit fabulous and fabled resorts. Inspect our nation's oldest structures in ancient and quaint St. Augustine or in history-rich Pensacola. Don't miss the spectacular sunrise on the East Coast, the blazing sunset on the West Coast. See pelicans dive-bomb for their meals, ludicrous stilt-legged birds, water skiing exhibitions, other absorbing spectacles.

Weather—Delight to cheerful, dazzling days—ideal for sunning, swimming and all healthful suntime activities. February and March temperatures are normally in the balmy and blissful seventies.

Costs—Florida's great variety of accommodations lets you pick lodging places to suit your budget. Your stay in this premier vacationland need not cost you any more than you'd spend on an ordinary holiday.

Health—You feel better in Florida where the benign sun not only erases tensions but supplies your body with vitamin D. Equally important—the air is fresh and clean. It contains 20% more oxygen than that of landlocked areas. So stock up on sunshine and health now. Make this your winter to enjoy summer fun in Florida.

LITTLE ISLAND OF TOBAGO HAS MUCH TOURIST APPEAL

The little island of Tobago, famous for the setting of Robinson Crusoe legend and more recently for the visit by Princess Margaret, is linked by government and tourist interest with Trinidad, southernmost of the British West Indies.

Lying 20 miles northeast of Trinidad, Tobago is the traveler's ideal of an unspoiled tropical Eden. It is only 116 square miles in area, about 26 miles long by seven miles wide. Girdled by sunbaked beaches and coconut groves, the coastline is deeply indented.

Tobago's scenery is indescribably beautiful from the coral shores of the southwestern lowland to the loveliness of volcanic hills and valleys in the north and east. The climate is just about perfect. Year-round temperatures average 84 degrees in the daytime and 74 degrees at night.

A unique feature of Tobago is Bird of Paradise Island, a 450-acre bird sanctuary which lies little more than a mile off Tobago's northeastern shore. It is the only place in the world outside of New Guinea where birds of paradise live in the wild state.

Florida's 'Welcome Stations'

This Welcome Station is located near Campbellton, Florida, on Highway 231, which serves as a main artery for flow of traffic from Alabama and north into Florida. Hostesses at these stations supply information for visitors to the Sunshine State.

TAMPA'S GASPARILLA FROLIC THIS WEEK

Precisely at high noon tomorrow the Jose Gasparilla, replica of a West Indiaman captured by buccaneers in 1800, will thunder into Tampa harbor. With decks and rigging swarming with jack-booted buccaneers armed to the teeth, the world's only fully rigged pirate ship will lead an invasion armada of Navy and Coast Guard ships and literally hundreds of smaller pleasure craft.

As Tampa's defenses crumble, the city will surrender and the pirates leap ashore to stage immediately their Parade of Triumph. The invasion and parade begins a full week of piratical events.

Tuesday, Feb. 7, thousands of elementary school children from the Tampa area will stage the Children's Gasparilla parade. Complete with more than 50 miniature floats and 30 marching units, the youngsters mimic the adult parade in every respect. Floats and costumes for the 1956 parade will portray famous stories and fairy tales.

A coronation ball for the pirate king of the Gasparilla Krewe on Feb. 7, one of Florida's outstanding social events, will be repeated Feb. 8 for the public, followed by a gay carnival ball.

As the night of Feb. 9 approaches, the scene will move to Ybor City—Tampa's Latin Quarter. Under the night-time splendor of blazing torchlight, another huge pirate parade will take place to climax Pirate Fiesta Night.

And throughout the week, the Florida State Fair will be going full blast in Tampa.

Finally, Saturday night, Feb. 11, the lusty pirates will again board their corsair to depart until another year. Amid glorious shower of fireworks, the Jose Gasparilla will sail off into Tampa Bay, witnessed by festive thousands who will line the shores to bid "bon voyage" to the Krewe until 1957.

CHERRY BLOSSOM FESTIVAL TO BE HELD IN HONOLULU

HONOLULU — Hawaii folk haven't much aloha for artificial flowers, since bona fide orchids, plumeria and hibiscus are at hand the year round on six resort islands. But pink paper cherry blossoms will festoon the streets and shops of downtown Honolulu and Waikiki beach for the annual spring cherry blossom festival.

On a bank of Waikiki's Ala Wai canal, where visitors rent motor boats and chug along by mullet-fishermen perched on wooden platforms, a Japanese cultural show is to run March 26-29. Elaborately costumed folk dances, classic wedding rites and exhibits of Flower arrangements and historic dolls are scheduled.

A black-robed Buddhist priest will perform the Japanese tea ritual daily. Art treasures and both ancient and modern ceramics and handicrafts will be displayed.

In between swimming, catamaran-sailing and canoeing at sunny Waikiki beach, visiting Cherry Blossom revelers can shop at oriental and Hawaiian bazaars. They can shed shoes and don kimonos for a Japanese teahouse banquet or feast outdoors Hawaiian style in a torchlit Polynesian garden by the sea.

The Japanese lantern parade March 23 is one of the top spring visitor attractions, as well as the coronation ball March 24.

Islanders themselves seem to consider the appearance of the famed Takarazuka troupe from Japan (imported at a cost of $50,000) the plum of festival events. Performances will take place nightly March 30 through April 8.

With seven new resort hotels now open at Waikiki, spring vacationers should no longer have trouble booking rooms for festival time. Many luxury accommodations are tabbed as little as $6 to $12 per person. A number of these have private lanais overlooking mountains, volcanoes or Pacific ocean.

Brazilian Temperature.

While Brazil is actually on the Equator the average temperature in the northern half of the country is only 78.8 degrees, and is but 73.4 degrees in the southern half.

During the coldest months of the year, it snows in some parts of southern Brazil.

Clip and bring with you
Spring in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
Where to go and what to see in this warm world of sunshine and palms

Inland valleys. While it's still winter elsewhere, our sunny valleys are fairly bursting with bloom. Example: San Gabriel Valley, nestling beneath tall, purple peaks just east of Los Angeles. Here snowy orange blossoms cover the green groves for miles and drench the air with perfume. You see flowers everywhere—camellias, azaleas, early-blooming roses. Geraniums grow like grass in many yards: a solid sweep of scarlet from sidewalk to front porch!

Note: In Descanso Gardens, near Los Angeles, you can see camellias by the acre. This is the world's largest camellia garden with 48,000 plants, 800 varieties. And in nearby Sierra Madre the world's largest wisteria vine covers an entire acre with its misty lavender bloom.

The warm desert. Approaching our Colorado Desert, 90 miles east of Los Angeles, you suddenly go from spring into summer. The sun beams down with mellow warmth, and skies are intensely blue. Lots to see in this colorful country, including: Joshua Tree National Monument, where the desert lilies grow 30 feet tall... Salton Sea, an "orphaned ocean" 50 miles long and 244 feet below the Pacific... date groves like those of Arabia, a cool, man-made oasis along U.S. 99... shifting sand dunes, tall as a 3-story building, where Hollywood films "Sahara" movies... painted canyons, the Chocolate Mountains, strange cacti and mesquite.

TV corner. Good bet for viewing interesting show people—Hollywood's Sunset & Vine intersection. It's the heart of Hollywood, near most of the major TV and radio studios, so stars and starlets are always going by or stopping for a sandwich at a nearby cafe. Better spend some time in this area—you may see some familiar faces!

Spring wildflowers. In a day's drive from Los Angeles you can see the biggest flower show of all—not acres but miles of wildflowers. Foothill slopes are alive with color in springtime—scarlet larkspur, purple owl's-clover, Indian paintbrush... And the Mojave Desert, two hours north of Los Angeles, seems to be one great garden in some areas—its sandy floor carpeted with golden poppies or blue lupine as far as your eye can see!

Pacific view. We have the earth's biggest ocean at our back door here. And a big first view of it is waiting for you at Santa Monica, an hour west of Los Angeles via Wilshire Blvd. From 300-foot sea cliffs here, your eye takes in the full 25-mile arc of the bay. Green headlands, surf-lapped mountains, curving white sand beaches... movie star homes at Malibu, the big yacht harbor with its forest of masts... and, on the horizon, ships steaming in from the Orient!

Beach fun. Our seacoast is almost one huge beach 200 miles long. Its shore life is fascinating—sea lions basking on sand bars, porpoises leaping out of the swells, pelicans dive-bombing for fish, big white gulls skimming the waves... Most visitors quickly become ardent beachcombers—picking up scallop shells and sand dollars to take home, collecting pink or purple starfish from rocks and breakwaters at low tide... It's fun, too, lounging on powder-soft sands under a genial sun, watching the breakers march in, and ohing at a Pacific sunset!

Around Los Angeles. There's plenty to interest you in this subtropic city. You'll shop amid the palms, visit our colorful Spanish and Oriental sectors, drive ultramodern freeways, inspect our clifftop homes and pastel office buildings. And look what else there is in or just outside the city...

Spanish missions. Two magnificent missions about the same age as the U.S. Thick adobe walls, dusky colonnades. Visiting them, you feel as if you've just stepped into the 18th century!

Mile-high view. From Mt. Wilson, a 5,710-foot "observation tower" looking right down on Los Angeles. Drive to summit, see the famous 100-inch telescope, nine TV transmitters and panoramic views of Southern California.

West's big port. Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor. Ships of every kind from all over the world; interesting waterfront activity along the piers.

Horse racing. Fast Thoroughbreds, bright flowers, cheering crowds at a famous track. (Season continues until midsummer.)

These highlights can only suggest the fun you'll have in this warm, subtropic vacationland. And spring's a perfect time to come. Days are warm and sunshiny, sports are in full swing. Better plan your Southern California vacation right away!

Miss Falk Married At Church Ceremony

pliqued with matching lace which extended into the tops of terrace-length skirts set on in- fine pleats. The young women wore mauve velvet bandeaux, finished with brief veils, and held cascade bouquets of dubonnet carnations. The flower girls wore short white organdy frocks trimmed with fluted collars and tiny cuffs of swiss embroidery and lace. They wore wreaths of miniature pink and white roses in their hair and carried nosegays of sweetheart roses.

Lemon foliage and woodwardia screened the large window in the East room of the club as a background for the receiving line. Mrs. Falk greeted guests in a navy silk taffeta gown overlaid with matching lace, a satin hat of the same shade and a white orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother, who arrived here a day or two ago, was in brown lace over rosewood taffeta complemented with a matching hat and a corsage of brown cymbidium orchids.

The bridal table was decorated with a profusion of white spring blossoms and white candles in silver candelabra, while an epergne filled with white flowers and clusters of frosted grapes ornamented the buffet table. Smaller tables for the guests were centered with hurricane lamps circled with white flowers and greenery.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Healey, Niles, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Donohue, Great Neck, L.I.; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ewers, Winfield; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. John McKnab, Wichita, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Warner, Kansas City.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Gardner will live in Wichita.

The bride, called Lindsay, is a descendant of several pioneer St. Louis families including the Mullanphys, Lindsays and Delanys. She is a grandaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Madison Franciscus and of the late Dr. and Mrs. John C. Falk.

The family has long been identified with Veiled Prophet festivities. The bride was a maid of honor at the 1951 ball and made her debut three months later at a ball of her own at the St. Louis Country Club. Her sister was a special maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball in 1948 and their mother, the former Miss Marian Franciscus, was Queen in her debut season.

The former Miss Falk, a graduate of Villa Duchesne, attended Duchesne Residence School, New York. She is a member of the Junior League.

Before entering the University of Kansas, from which he graduated in 1951, Mr. Gardner served as a lieutenant in the Army Air Force in World War II, part of the time in Europe.

COUNCIL TO MARK BOY SCOUT WEEK

Citizenship Day, Re-Dedication to Oath and Religious Rites Planned.

All members of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council will join in a nation-wide observance of National Boy Scout week beginning tomorrow and continuing through next Sunday. The week marks the forty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the national organization.

Three major council-wide activities have been planned. Scout Citizenship day will be Tuesday. Nearly 200 Eagle Scouts will take over major city offices and serve as honorary officials and executives of the St. Louis area businesses and industries.

A traditional ceremony of rededication to the Scout Oath or Promise will be conducted by all units at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Climax of the week-long celebration will be next Saturday and Sunday when units will participate in religious observances. Most of the 958 Cub, Scout and Explorer units have scheduled other special events for the week.

Members of troops were asked to wear uniforms to school this week, except where school regulations prohibit them.

Appointment of C. Kenneth Swink of Denver, as field director of Arrowhead, Grant, South and Ozarks Trails Districts of the council was announced yesterday. The appointment is effective Feb. 15.

This year's Lake of the Ozarks Sea Explorer Regatta will be held from Aug. 26 through Sept. 2 at Camp Pa-He-Tsi on the Grand Glaize branch of the lake near Osage Beach, Mo.

L'Ouverture School will sponsor a new unit, Cub Pack 203, which will meet under Cubmaster John Mosley Jr. Time of meetings is to be announced.

Members of the Scout Speakers Bureau of the council are available to adult organizations interested in hearing talks on Scouting. A speaker may be obtained by telephoning R. R. Eddleman at the council office, CHestnut 1-7856.

Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, will be awarded to eight members of the council in ceremonies to be held this week.

The Silver Award, highest honor in Explorer Scouting, will be presented to the two Halbert boys, L'Hommedieu and Eagle Scout Wayne Steele.

Eagle Badges were awarded to the following boys last week: Jerry Pass, Ed Schaumburg and John Groth.

One Man's Opinion

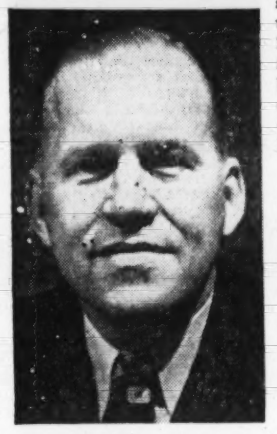

Good and Bad in Current Television

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP).

THE other morning as I was going to work—a bit late—my eye was caught by my daughter.

She was lying flat on the floor working over her post-breakfast bottle. She was staring at our television screen showing a grown-up-but-kiddie-looking fellow who himself was sucking at an imitation milk bottle whose theoretical contents were visibly lowered as he said something like this:

HAL BOYLE . . . CANNED LAUGHTER IS OUT.

"All right, kiddies, it's milk time. Let's go now. Not too fast, but—"

Well, I simply stood there fascinated. I was swept by awe and fear of art of advertising. I wondered how soon my daughter, having been sold on the virtues of milk, would start worrying about deodorants.

Somehow, clover sweet as she is at 2½ years old, I hugged the idea that Tracy Ann, my daughter, would learn femininity from her mother, my wife. I don't want my child to learn delicacy from an ad man's fear pitch.

What is the impact of television on the average family? What is right and what is wrong with television up till now?

● HERE ARE a few off-the-cuff observations—some personal, some not—of the new one-eyed monster in our living room:

My daughter likes to identify Pinky Lee, Lassie, Rin-Tin-Tin, The Lone Ranger and other staple childhood fodder (she likes Ollie the Dragon but is suspicious of Howdy Doody), then usually walks away. Having survived the shock of recognition, she returns to her old friends, her toys.

Ancient cartoons with dubbed-in voices bore her within 30 seconds, and she walks away. (She also will do this to canned meat if it is put on her plate.) She has an unerring appetite for freshness, and likes "Captain Kangaroo" because it is alive.

● BOTH HER FATHER AND MOTHER also will refuse to follow canned family situation comedies because they are unreal and tiresome, and because canned laughter doesn't make them feel very jolly. Most of their friends who can read without moving their lips feel the same way.

Tracy Ann and her parents enjoy—sometimes more than the show they carry—bright, tuneful illustrated commercials. We hum 'em in our house.

A live show stirs us more than a filmed show, and we'll rove the dial to get one that is alive. There are exceptions—but they only prove the rule.

One of the things that destroys realism most is to have an artist perform a role, then step out of character and immediately make a sales pitch.

● THIS FORM of commercialism reduces the magic and illusion and force of art. Edward Murrow and John Daly are among those who have had the courage and common sense to realize this. They have done their sponsors a favor by abstaining from it.

The duty of the artist in television today is to gain an audience. To ask him to go on from there is to demean both himself and the product he is required to plug. Both are needlessly cheapened.

Commercialism is necessary in television, but not in that manner. It will die out as more artists make more money, can afford to be more independent, and the realization grows that there are better ways to put a message across.

Mind Changing

By Christopher Billopp

A MEMBER of a family having announced a certain plan of action may for good reasons decide to do something else and go ahead and do it without further announcement, consultation or warning.

This is upsetting to other members of the family. The change of mind may concern an insignificant detail. But it is the principle that is important.

How can a family be expected to operate efficiently unless it knows at all times what each of its members is doing? How can meals be planned, the use of the car scheduled and the proper answers to telephone calls be given?

How is the family to be spared the embarrassment of telling friends and acquaintances that one of its members is at such and such a place or doing such and such a thing, when it turns out that the member has gone somewhere else or is doing something quite foreign to what previously has been announced?

Such a change disregards the right of other members of the family to suggest alternatives. If independent changes of mind are quietly accepted, all family discipline will be destroyed. All members of the family then will claim the privilege of acting independently.

A member of the family should never entertain a change of mind without first making an announcement as public as that attending the original plan. Only by so doing is it possible to escape the reproach, "But you never told me."

Hillbilly Music Center

Springfield (Mo.) Seems to Be Taking Play Away From Other Cities as Fountain From Which Flows Never-Ending Stream of Popular Country-Style Songs

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 4.

BACK in the late 1920s, a couple of young men who owned a tire shop in St. Joseph, Mo., got interested in this thing called radio. They converted a corner of the shop into a studio and started broadcasting hillbilly music.

One day, just to see if anyone was really listening, they offered fresh ash trays to the first hundred people to show up at the combination tire shop and studio.

The resulting traffic snarl, which required the services of most of the town's police force to unravel, convinced the two young men, Ralph Foster and Art Johnson, that radio was here to stay and might even have a brighter future than the tire business. So shortly thereafter they moved to Springfield, which had no radio station, established station KGBX, and started broadcasting, among other things, hillbilly music.

They couldn't have found a better source of supply. Springfield, then a town of some 45,000, long referred to by the Chamber of Commerce as the Queen City of the Ozarks, was noted for several commodities. In order of their importance, they probably would be butter, eggs and hillbilly music.

The hills in these parts were alive with people of all ages who fiddled and strummed and knew a great variety of hillbilly songs. Not only that, but the depression was beginning to set in about then and both hillbilly music and musicians came cheap. As a result radio listeners got it around the clock. Hillbilly music became a drug on the market, which just goes to show how times can change.

Since then the nation has discovered hillbilly music,—or country music, as they like to call it now—and it's worth its weight in gold. Anyone who can strum a guitar, sing with the right throb on his throat, and maybe write songs with an emotional appeal can almost write his own ticket. Today, country music has become big business and Springfield has become the recognized center of the country music world. In fact, it's generally agreed in televising, recording and radio circles, that Springfield, now a city of 90,000, has shaken Nashville, Tenn., home of the Grand Ole Opry and long-time mecca of hillbilly musicians, to its very foundations.

THE production of country music, as carried on in Springfield, is estimated as a $2,000,000-a-year business, and the Ozark Jubilee, a Saturday night television show is now being seen on some 90 stations over the country, including KTVI (Channel 36) in St. Louis. The show is drawing all the top talent in the country music field. In fact, they say now that all a man has to do is appear on Ozark Jubilee, and he's made, so far as record sales are concerned.

At last Saturday night's performance, the guest star was Sonny James, a young, up-and-coming singer and guitar player. Hovering anxiously in the wings was a representative of the company for whom Sonny makes records. "If he goes over big tonight," the man said, "his record sales will skyrocket by the middle of next week."

More than 100 people who are big names in country music now make their homes in Springfield, fan mail is delivered to the studio in bushel baskets, and Springfieldians are getting accustomed to seeing guitar players in high-heeled boots driving Cadillacs. The center of the whole show, of course, is Clyde Julian "Red" Foley, a 45-year-old entertainer and singer with a sort of cracked-wheat baritone which "gets people" right here.

Foley is a good singer, a good entertainer and a very likeable character, and he is to country music what Louis Armstrong is to jazz.

Springfield's fame as a country music center reached its present proportions, as a matter of fact, largely because of Foley's presence. When he was lured away from Nashville and the Grand Ole Opry, he made Springfield what it is today.

The town had been building up a pretty solid reputation for country music for a good many years, however, starting back in the days when Foster and Johnson acquired a second radio station, KWTO. The call letters, they said, stood for "keep watching the Ozarks," and it was the plan of the station management to "reach every deer lick, rabbit warren and hog waller" in the Ozarks and surrounding countryside with hillbilly music.

ON order from the FCC, Foster and Johnson had to give up one of the stations. They chose to keep KWTO, and make it a power in country music circles. They had a staff of a couple of dozen entertainers and a lot of farm service features, and they were the leading station in this part of the country with the mountain music set.

Foster first began to see the possibilities of country music as a big thing shortly after World War II. The Assembly of God Church has its headquarters in Springfield, and they sponsored a half-hour program of homey and spiritual music called "Sermons in Song," which was such a hit the station talked the church into letting it transcribe the program for broadcast on other stations. Soon the songs were being used by more than 200 stations.

Foster and E. E. "Junior" Siman organized RadiOzark Enterprises to make more such transcribed programs. They brought in Tennessee Ernie Ford and made a series of 260 transcribed "Tennessee Ernie Shows" which today are being heard on hundreds of radio stations around the country. They did the same with Smiley Burnette and Bill Ring and a number of other widely known country music entertainers.

In the fall of 1954, Siman went to Nashville with the avowed purpose of snaring Foley away from the Grand Ole Opry. Just how he did it neither of them cares to reveal, but he brought Foley back to Springfield and started building a radio show around him.

SUCH was the Foley reputation that a dozen other singers well known in country ord circles came along with him. And beginners aspiring to a place in the hillbilly sun, started coming to Springfield instead of going to Nashville.

When singers of country music aren't in front of the microphone, or making new records, they maintain themselves and their reputations by public appearances. There is a great demand for them, and booking is no problem, if they have any reputation at all.

So the next step was the formation of Top Talent, Inc., which has performers, singly and in pairs, booked all over the country, making from 35 to 50 personal appearances a week. It operates on a sort of rotating basis, and when one group comes in to appear at the home stand, another group goes out. During a typical week they may appear in one room school houses or metropolitan theaters.

Many hillbilly singers nowadays are also composers. They have a slight advantage over most song writers in that they can plug their own songs, and it seems that most of the numbers they turn out become hits of a sort. Naturally, with so many of them writing songs, there was need for an outlet, so the next and logical step was a music publishing firm which handles the compositions of many of the hillbilly stars, not a few of which have been best sellers.

FOR instance, a girl named Jean Shepherd wrote a song called "A Satisfied Mind," which was recorded by Porter Wagoner, known as "the butcher boy from West Plains." Porter grew up at West Plains, which is near Springfield, worked in a butcher shop, learned to play the guitar and came to Springfield to appear on the radio. He made a recording of "A Satisfied Mind" which was among the top 10 hits for 32 weeks and sold more than a quarter of a million records.

Two young girls from Warsaw, Mo., named Celia and Sandra Ferguson, wrote a tune called "Eat, Drink and Be Merry," which they brought to Springfield. It was published by the Earl Barton Publishing Co., and Porter Wagoner made a record of it which is now in the top 10.

Jim Edward Brown, a tall, handsome youngster, and his two pretty sisters, Maxine and Bonnie, came to Springfield from Pine Bluff, Ark., where they got their first taste of the business, like many others, when they won an amateur contest. They sing and play and make records, and they too write songs. One of their compositions, called "Here Today and Gone Tomorrow" is high on the Hit Parade.

Even Pete Stamper, the comedian and Ozark Jubilee's version of Herb Shriner, writes songs. He wrote "Hey Ma!" and "How I Tried," which were recorded by Porter Wagoner, and "How About Me," which was recorded by Red Foley. Through the years he has been in the business, Foley's record sales now exceed 25,000,000.

With so much talent kicking around, the station started putting together a Saturday night radio show, built around Foley, and called it "Ozark Jubilee." It was an instantaneous hit on the air and within two weeks the American Broadcasting Co. had picked up the show and put it on a national hookup.

Then came television. The ABC decided to try it out on television, but Springfield was not on the national network at the time, which was January of 1955. The nearest connection was at Columbia, Mo. Arrangements were made with KOMU-TV at Columbia to use their facilities. Every Saturday morning a crew of 60 people, including performers and technicians, got on a chartered bus at 5 a.m., and took off for Columbia. They arrived around noon, rehearsed all afternoon, put on a show at night, and then drove back to Springfield, arriving some time before dawn. They did that for 14 weeks, and they were very happy when Springfield got a micro-wave hook-up with the network.

FOSTER took over the Jewell Theater, installed TV cameras, control room, studio lighting and so forth, and started telecasting the show from there. It cost him nearly $100,000 to fix up the old theater, which had been dark for years, and some people thought he was crazy. But he has made the Jewell Theater and Springfield famous all over the country.

Every Saturday, as show time approaches, you can see cars with licenses from many states. Inside the theater people from distant places proudly hold up banners in front of the cameras with the names of their home town on them.

The show goes on at 6:30 p.m., lasts until 8 o'clock, and is presented in a free and easy sort of style which is doubtless one of the secrets of its charm. "It's just a two-camera, no-ulcer show" one of the crew explained, which pretty well sums it up. No one gets excited, no one even gets nervous.

Backstage with Don Richardson, who handles, among other duties, the show's publicity, I asked who writes the show, and when. "I guess I do," he said. "I sort of put it together during the week."

At noon on Saturday everyone assembles at the theater and they have a run-through, while Richardson figures out the time. The show, of course, is built around Foley, with a generous mixture of music and comedy. Sometimes the comedy will be supplied by Floyd "Goo-Goo" Rutledge and Slim Wilson, a couple of genuine hillbilly comedians from right here in Greene county—they used to be with the Weaver Brothers vaudeville show—or it may be supplied by Uncle Cyp Brasfield, a veteran who started in tent shows.

A feature of every show is the square dancing, and the performance usually winds up on a spiritual note with Foley singing a religious song and maybe doing a recitation.

The spiritual note is stressed in most Jubilee performances, and there is never anything off color. Foley and the group pride themselves also on the fact that the music they offer is not the floor-stomping, bottle-blowing, washboard type of corn which used to be offered as hillbilly music.

As Foster explains it, "It's real country music. A sweeter type, stressing spirituals and ballads. The kind of music that has the appeal of prayer. And it has a wide appeal for the simple reason that there are more country people in this country than any other kind."

There must be, judging from the response. The telegrams start arriving backstage before the show is half over, the letters have reached as many as 25,000 after one performance, and the fan mail last year totaled more than 300,000 letters. Every state in the union and four provinces of Canada have been represented in the audiences.

Family Budget

Painless (?) Way To Figure Finances

(Editor's Note: Most people at some time or other face things squarely and sit down to draw up a budget. What happens then is largely a matter of intestinal fortitude. Here's a consensus of expert opinion on how to arrange your finances in the most painless way possible.)

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP).

IN a year when the apple sellers outnumbered the apples, a man named Malcolm McCaw wrote a book optimistically—and ironically—entitled "Fifty Ways to Save Money."

"To many persons," he wrote in 1933's understatement of the year, "the word 'budget' is synonymous with 'bore.'"

Basically, of course, McCaw was wrong. Budgets aren't bores, they are terrifying. It's not so hard to run a car if you pay for the gas today, the new fuel pump tomorrow, the insurance the first week in March and the snow tires in November. The joy of motoring can be easily ruined, however, if you assemble a year's automotive dribs and drabs, divide by 12—and look the appalling figures squarely in the face. That holds true in almost every household department in the old battle between income and outgo.

For day-in, day-out solvency, nothing has been invented to beat a loose-leaf notebook, a goal and a sustained determination to conserve red ink. This, alas, is what budgets are made of and most of us don't like any part of them.

● THERE ARE a number of basic rules—necessarily sliding and flexible—to act as guideposts, useful alike to financial novices and to spendthrifts who want to reform. Here's a formula for solvency, distilled from many eminent authoritative sources:

Let's assume you own a house. Or you think you want to own a house. How much can you pay? Only you in your own special circumstances can figure that one out, but the rule of thumb on price is "positively no more than three times your annual take-home pay; probably not less than 18 months take-home pay."

House buying will come later and you have decided to rent. How much can you afford to pay? Approximately 20 per cent of your take-home pay. If you find you must pay more, you will have to skimp in other departments.

Installment buying broke all-time records last year, causing jubilation in some quarters, ulcers in others. To what extent can you safely get on the hook? The experts say: Don't charge more than two weeks salary; don't installment buy more than eight weeks' income. (This rule obviously excludes mortgages and financed automobiles from the list of installment purchases. It also obviously discourages thrift students who need home appliances.)

● "MONEY MANAGEMENT" specialists frequently break life into many components for budget purposes.

The authorities are pretty unanimous on the approximate amounts one should allow for each category. For example, the shelter item—rent or payment on house, insurance, taxes, light, heat, laundry equipment, telephone, water, even baby sitter—should run close to 30 per cent of your take-home pay regardless of your income bracket. Clothing—including dry cleaning—should take bite of between 10 and 12 per cent. Transportation—be honest now and include car insurance, car depreciation, commutation ticket or bus fare, parking fees—should run around 8 per cent. These are the most stable of the figures.

Food, on the other hand, takes a bigger share from low-income families than from those making more. A fellow making $3000 a year before taxes and supporting a family of three, can figure his food at 30 per cent of his take-home pay. If he earns $5000 a year, it will be 20 per cent, and when it's $10,000 a year or over, the figure drops down to 17 per cent and lower. This doesn't mean your appetite decreases as cash increases—it's just that your stomach remains the same size.

Although the popular percentage for savings is considered to be 10 per cent of income, it is actually a sliding figure pegged to income and left-over outgo. Most of the experts set 5 per cent as a good figure for the low-income families. A $5000-a-year family should set 10 per cent as its goal and a $10,000-a-year unit should try for 12 or better. Insurance comes under this heading too; best talk this over with experts.

● "OTHER EXPENSES" are important—they include health, education, recreation, charitable contributions, reading material, allowances and such. This item runs upward from about 16 per cent in low-income families to 20 per cent or more in the upper brackets, where such things as country club dues become a factor.

Once you've reduced your finances to paper and percentages, the next step is moving from theory to practice. This may be the point at which you stick the "Financial Journal" at the back of the second desk drawer to be recovered three years hence, along with a five-year diary you kept for the first five days of January 1948.

Hardier or more distressed, souls however, have some more rules of thumb for guidance. How to handle hard money? Well, it's wise to keep about a month's take-home pay in the checking account. And about six months' pay in the savings account, quickly available in case of emergencies.

Then comes the glorious time when your savings account is adequately filled and it's time to think in terms of higher finance: Government bonds, stocks, diamond stomachers, mink and swimming pools.

Really, it's as easy as that—in the books, brochures and pamphlets.

How to Build a Home Library

Three Reasons for Owning Books, Says Writer: Study, Reading and Enjoyment

First of a series. The author is editor of a well-known book publishing house, Garden City Books, a division of Doubleday.

By Ferris C. Mack

THE very word "library" is awesome. It brings a vision of a high book-lined room with leather chairs, a room that occupies the same place in the modern home as the butler: you can hardly find them any more.

Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary has four definitions of the word "library." The second definition is the one that interests us: "A collection of books, etc., kept for study or reading."

That's what we want, a collection of books for study or reading—plus enjoyment.

If you're of an average family, you undoubtedly have a few books around that you've accumulated over the years. But unless you're an exception, the books were acquired with no particular purpose in mind. Consequently, the book you need is always missing when you want to check a fact or find out more about a subject, or even to spend an evening reading for entertainment.

I propose to show how you can build first a small, basic reference library of a half dozen indispensable books, then a broader, more extensive reference library. Then, with time and still with limited funds, I will show you how you can have a fine, comprehensive collection that friends will admire and that will reflect your own reading tastes and interests.

We'll talk about children's books, too, and consider how we can get the best values, books your children will love and find useful, books that will be used and re-used, read and re-read and eventually saved for another generation.

Finally, when we've achieved our goal and have our shelves lined with good books, we'll discuss how to keep our little library alive and growing. This is the time to enjoy our books, to keep informed on what is being published and to add to our collection whatever pleases us.

I do not intend to recommend any of the many fine multi-volumed encyclopedias. The purpose right now is to spend as little as possible and at the same time get good books of permanent value. So at the start we're budgeting. High-priced sets are out.

LET'S get on with our basic books.

I'll settle for half a dozen. The Bible, of course, takes first place. Second, a good dictionary. (It's important to keep this in a most accessible spot so you'll use it constantly; have it at your elbow when reading.) Third, an atlas.

A "fact book" belongs in this half dozen—a book crammed with names and dates, facts and figures, charts and tables and general information. Fifth, a medical handbook for emergencies. And sixth, you should have a good general cookbook, even if you're satisfied with steaks, chops and hamburgers.

There's room for argument here, of course. No two people would pick the same six basic books.

If you think a history should have been included, or a quotation book, or a thesaurus, we'll come to these when we start expanding our collection.

In the list with this article I've given several choices in most instances. A lot depends on your personal taste, so if a bookseller is handy, by all means ask to see the books mentioned here. If that isn't possible, you can't go wrong on any of those listed. If there is no bookseller within a reasonable distance, you can do all your business with the publishers by mail. Where there are multiple choices I have tried to include books of different prices.

The First Aid Textbook is in the basic six because I feel it's essential in every home.

When we come to Bibles, the field is too great to narrow down to one or two volumes. Instead, I've named some, but by no means all, of the companies that publish Bibles at various prices (World has the least expensive—$1.50) and in all kinds of bindings. Personal preference is important here. Publishers will gladly send catalogues.

One comment on Bibles: In 1952 Thomas Nelson & Sons published The Revised Standard Version, a new translation by 15 scholars who utilized many important manuscripts and fragments newly discovered. Eagerly awaited, the Revised Standard Version was an instant best-seller. (There is a $6 edition.) Almost all versions of the Bible have many stanch adherents, however.

These six books you're going to acquire will cost $25 to $30. But—you needn't buy them all at once. Buy one at a time, whenever you can spare a few dollars. Consult freely with your bookseller. Some books he may have to order for you, but he'll be glad to do it.

More and more good reference books and other nonfiction volumes are being published in paperbound pocket editions. You'll find dictionaries, cookbooks, medical books and many others on racks at newsstand and in many regular bookstores. They're not permanent editions but they'll take reasonable abuse and serve you well until you can buy your hard-bound volumes.

Look more closely the next time you see a rack of these small books. Among the historical novels, westerns and who-dun-its you'll find some books you'll want to own. An extra dictionary is never one too many. And what's the matter with a good detective story or mystery for relaxation? We can't allow ourselves to get too grim in this effort to accumulate the "right" books.

After selecting the six basic books, we can begin adding to our shelves books that are meant to be read, not just consulted on occasion. I am thinking at this moment of poetry.

"Poetry," says Louis Untermeyer, "is the highest level of communication . . . and the poet is compelled by his very nature to share the glory of the world with all—a man speaking to men."

An anthology of poetry is a book that will never grow old, the kind of book you will pull down from the shelf and sample at odd times. There are hundreds of such anthologies, of all sizes, at all prices, and for all tastes—egghead or lowbrow.

Let's start with either the "Treasury," a superior and justly famous compilation by one of our finest modern poets, or the lower priced, more popular "Best Loved Poems." Interwoven with the poems in the Untermeyer volume are delightful stories of the lives and times of the poets and comments on their works.

Another standard, probably, the best known of all and still a gem, is Palgrave's "Golden Treasury," originally published in 1861. At least six publishers have editions of Palgrave, most of them revised and enlarged.

As a reference book, or even for browsing, a book of quotations is a joy to own. However, the prices are high if we are to get any degree of completeness. The Bartlett, of course, is the best known. (The thirteenth edition has just been issued.) The very low-priced "5000 Quotations" is hardly a substitute, but is adequate within its limited scope.

WHAT is a "thesaurus," anyway? It's a synonym book, roughly speaking, but it's much more than that. When you look up a word, you will find not only words that mean the same, but also others that have similar or related meanings, plus phrases, expressions and ideas somehow associated with the key word.

Peter Mark Roget put together the first thesaurus in 1852. It has been revised and enlarged and republished many times. The T. Y. Crowell edition is the largest and most modern. The Garden City edition is a good buy and has been popular. If you're interested in words, if you do any writing, or if you do crossword or other word puzzles, a thesaurus will be a treasure.

Etiquette may seem like a strange "necessity" for our reference shelf, if we think of it in the old-fashioned sense of manners—the "Stand up when a lady enters the room" type of motherly advice. But it's much more than that now. It covers all phases of living, not only weddings, christenings, entertaining and the like, but also household management and family finances, correspondence and public functions.

Amy Vanderbilt's book, first published in 1952 and revised in 1955, has a fresh, lively quality and makes good sense in today's changed world. Emily Post, of course, has been a household word for more years than we can remember, and her "Etiquette" has also been newly revised.

I've put off as long as possible mentioning Shakespeare, who to my prejudiced mind should be on your shelves even if you have to sell off the rest of your books to pay for the TV set. Shakespeare comes in all sizes and at all prices, with many different "texts" and many different sets of notes.

LET the scholars argue with each other; my recommendation, the over-sized volume which contains the famous Cambridge text with Temple notes and 40 striking illustrations by Rockwell Kent, is truly magnificent. Christopher Morley's preface—a letter to a middle-aged reader who hasn't read Shakespeare since he was in high school—is something you should not miss.

If you prefer a small, easier-to-handle Shakespeare, ask your bookseller to show you one of the many other excellent one-volume editions. You can pay as little or as much as you like.

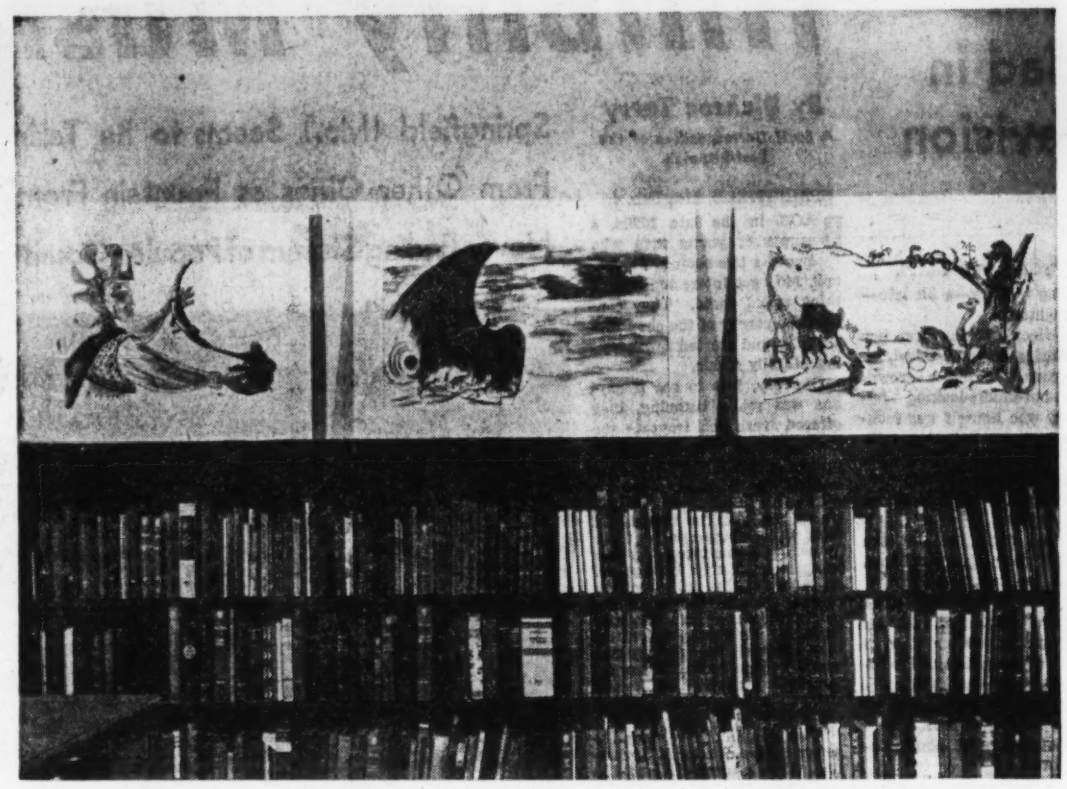

The late Charles A. Beard and his wife Mary collaborated on many books. Their writing has a lively, pleasing style, and their "Basic History" is considered by many the best one-volume history of the United States ever written. Don't let the modest price of the illustrated edition deceive you. It is scholarly and authentic while it is entertaining. A good American history deserves an early reservation on your shelves. This one you will want to read right through.

If there's a bookseller within calling distance, by all means strike up an acquaintance with him. As a real estate salesman derives satisfaction from bringing together the right family and the right house, so a bookseller's heart gladdens when he can prescribe the right book for the right customer.

A bookstore is not a supermarket, where you pick up an article and check out with the cashier. The bookstore owner knows books and wants to be asked about them. He can save you money at the same time he's "fitting" you with the right book. My advice is to find him, wherever he is.

Marriage

Religious Problem In Home

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

CONFLICT over religious differences breaks up or weakens so many marriages that young people should make sure that they have dealt successfully with all such differences before they take their wedding vows. Two people should think very much alike on this subject. Any wide difference may make trouble. Statistics suggest that the most unfavorable combination is that of Roman Catholic and Protestant. But the combination of Christian and Orthodox Jew might be even more unfavorable if there were many of them. Even among Protestants there may be great conflicts over such a matter as child baptism.

Mrs. O. is one of those who did not foresee the difficulties. "I guess we figured the problems would take care of themselves somehow," she tells. "We seem to be squabbling more all the time, but we certainly don't want to separate. How can people solve this problem when they've already been married three years?"

1. Be sure you're not using religion merely as a weapon to club the other partner, Mrs. O. It frequently serves that purpose, just as does the budget or the mother-in-law.

2. SIT DOWN and write out on each side the things you think are essential. Would the list be the same if you were distant from all friends and relatives?

3. Learn all you can about the other's faith. Leave the few points of difference aside for the moment and concentrate on the enormous number of points you have in common.

4. When you get this far, it's time to push religious conflict into the background for a while and concentrate on what constitutes a good marriage. Talk about and work for that. If you make this your main objective in life, I think you will find that some of the other matters on which you formerly hammerd at each other will assume less importance.

Keep this strictly between husband and wife. Don't let any outsiders interfere. Concentrate on being a good husband and a good wife and see what happens.

Answers to Questions.

Q. HOW CAN A FELLOW judge whether he and a girl he might marry are really compatible?

A. Mainly by sufficiently long acquaintance and making sure that you have basic ideals and standards in common, with a considerable stock of common habits. Make sure you are not over-influenced by mere physical attraction. Write me (with stamped, self-addressed envelope) for free test, "Are You SURE It's Love?"

Q. Do you think it is wise for a girl to marry a man who works at irregular hours?

A. Millions wouldn't marry at all otherwise! You'll have to be prepared to make frequent and drastic adjustments. If you are the kind who always wants everything run your own way, you won't find any man who satisfies you — even if you should marry a man who was always home because he didn't work at all!

Q. What would you do to a son who forgets his own mother, with only a 5-cent card at Christmas?

A. The only thing you can do is to keep on loving him. You can't demand or force a return of affection, and many parents make a mistake by trying to do so. Your boy is pretty sure to show normal feelings for you after a while, if you deserve them. Criticizing and complaining are likely to make him behave worse, not better.

Q. Is it safe for a girl to marry a man whose income, though sometimes high, is irregular?

A. Most of the world is in that fix except that it can't say "sometimes high." You should study finance and budgeting and save for a rainy day, from the beginning. You can succeed if you are intelligent, business-like, and determined.

Sincerity Is Essential in Education

By Angelo Patri

SINCERITY is the essential element in any human action, and education is no exception. There are a few new ways of teaching being introduced that lack that essential quality and should be quietly dropped. This because they are likely to give the children a wrong impression of their ability and therefore of their place in the adult world.

Why, for example, have a second-year grade in elementary school to read a story and then write a "Book Report," a critique as it were? The children assume an attitude of wisdom and authority when they are given a task with their high-sounding name. It is known as "the buildup," "strengthening of the personality, of dignity." It is sham and unworthy of sound educational principles.

AN IMPORTANT civic group sitting in deliberation of juvenile delinquency invites two high-school students, 15 years of age, to sit in with them and give their ideas on the subject. That is a sort of nonsense that we should not approve. What those children say will not modify what those responsible adults think and do to the extent of a single comma. Why the show and the sham? What effect will it have on the children?

Children, and please understand that boys and girls in their early teens are children, should not be allowed to believe that they have ability, comprehension or skill in fields that are beyond their experiences. They should not be made to feel a load of responsibility that they have no way to carry out. That sort of thing does not strengthen, does not add power nor dignity to the children.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE need guidance, fine leadership, and a job to do. To share in a civic project, to do a good piece of work in school routine, this guidance and leadership must be evident and it must be authoritative. If children did not need these, the schools, the teachers and the leaders of youth would be unnecessary. The children would be on their own.

Secrets of Charm

Don't Lose Your Smile

SHE'S always a charmer, the mature woman with a radiant smile. The smile that always brings beauty to any face now bespeaks good humor and warmth that come from the shining inner attitudes of a seasoned nature. But as the years go by, too many women smile less readily, and show less expression when they do.

You may be losing your habitually pleasant expression not so much due to lack of good feeling behind it as to changes that take place in your face as the years go by. Even a slight slackening of flesh contributes to downward rather than upward lines. The corners of your mouth may not turn up as naturally as they once did, which may make you look less happy than you are.

You've probably never thought of it that way, but the faithfully followed, correct beauty routine that helps to keep facial muscles firm and the skin taut has a definite effect on expression. Which makes it more important than ever for another reason. If you're just heading into mature years, there's double cause to check methods to see if it's time for a change.

Think about your smile more often—perhaps smiling's a habit you're losing, too. Do you look unresponsive when you are not? Are you keeping smiles to yourself when there's so much charm in sharing them? Charm comes from within, but it must shine through, and a ready smile is certainly one of the best of all ways to show it. A smile reaches out with friendliness, approval, interest, encouragement, says flattering things to others and about you.

Your most attractive voice—you can achieve an appealing voice — a vibrant attribute to charm and success—by reading 'Your Most Attractive Voice,' which gives complete instructions on how to overcome wearisome speaking qualities as tonelessness and dullness. Write to Secrets of Charm in care of the Post-Dispatch, enclosing 10 cents in coin, plus stamped self-addressed envelope.

Decorating With Rattan

By Elizabeth Hillyer

TODAY'S room in rattan is far more sophisticated than such a room used to be. The jungle leaves and big exotic flowers that once set the tone of the decorating give way to more subtle influences. Color may still be sunny; but contrasts aren't as smashing; and softer, more closely related schemes are often seen.

Textured fabrics in plain colors are new favorites for rangy sofa groupings and plain colors are seen on most walls, sometimes in grasscloth or wallpaper with grasscloth effect. The favored long oriental scroll has an especially belonging look for wall decoration. And the furniture itself in increasingly handsome and varied design has knowing ways of decorating the room, sometimes with the rattan in grayed or brown tones as well as in the natural color. Designer John Wisner's new rattan furniture, sketched, makes a variety of decorating points with a rattan based door cabinet of wood, a table top in colored lacquer with a drawer and another in a handsome translucent plastic in which natural grasses are embedded. Doors and the drawer have brass pulls. (Furniture by Ficks Reed.)

Learn how to reclaim and restyle old furniture with beautiful finishes—and what to do about furniture finish repair. A cleverly designed sports shirt is called the "banniere." The batteau style was inspired by ship's flags, and is cut with two side points, like ship's flags upside down. Made of cotton in two striking tones such as coral and mustard, it goes over a pair of striped knee length pants.

Big Man Who's Done a Big Job

Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, in 25 Years at Third Baptist Church, Has Built It Into Missouri's Largest Protestant Congregation

—By Jack January, a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

DR. C. OSCAR JOHNSON AND HIS CHURCH, THIRD BAPTIST, AT GRAND AND WASHINGTON BOULEVARDS.

By John Keasler

TODAY marks the beginning of the second quarter-century of preaching in St. Louis for a large gentleman with a colorful personality, a Baptist preacher by the name of the Rev. C. Oscar Johnson, a Tennessee farm lad who sold his horse to go to college and subsequently rose to the top international office of his denomination.

St. Louisans will be congratulating him on his 25 years of service here after his sermon this morning. With characteristic enthusiasm he has titled his sermon for tonight "Fill 'Er Up—Hill Ahead!" and nobody knowing Dr. Johnson will have the slightest doubt but what any hill in his path will be surmounted, all right.

Sometimes, in fact, his life has looked like an obstacle course; he's been broke, jobless, and, in those younger days, in many a precarious position, materially speaking. Once he was offered a church with a membership of 12; it cost him $2 to get there and the collection plate brought $1.53. He doubled the membership to 24, and those members loved him but even the most enthusiastic could hardly have predicted his amazing career to come.

In addition to a list of services performed and honors received which stretches from here to here, nationally and internationally, Dr. Johnson occupies a place in St. Louis life which is unique.

He came here in 1931 as pastor of the Third Baptist Church, Washington and Grand, a decidedly non-pastoral locale in the heart of the theater district.

He has built the membership of that church to some 5400, making it the largest Protestant church, of any denomination, in St. Louis and in the entire state of Missouri—there has been addition after addition to the building until the physical property reached a present worth of some two and a half million and, more importantly to the pastor, he's baptized about 4000 folks there while bringing in more than 11,000 members over the years.

HIS St. Louis church looks a lot different from the little Tennessee frame church where he preached his first sermon, but one gets the impression that Dr. Johnson hasn't changed a great deal basically from the country boy who prayed for salvation as hard as he could, then climbed aboard a mule to announce joyfully to the neighbors that salvation had come.

"I'm a saved sinner, a Baptist by conviction and a Baptist preacher by the call of God," he told us the other day, in his office. We asked him what had brought him the most joy, of his achievements, and he said, "My greatest glory is to be the pastor of a local Baptist church."

There has been one change, if not basic at least a modification of a basic, and Dr. Johnson explained it with the deadpan humor of a good story-telling man; he said, "When I was a boy I knew nobody was going to get to heaven except the Baptists, and that the Southern Baptists had the inside track. I've managed to modify that outlook."

He's moved away from what he calls the "sob and scare stuff" and said in his preaching he stresses the love of God.

Also in his preaching, from time time, he's utilized tactics from the business world, manufacturing field, the advertising industry, sports; any field from which he can borrow to make a sermon effective he does so.

Members of his congregation have been known to feel that perhaps his approach occasionally was a trifle too unorthodox. Back when the Cardinals were pennant winners—ah, dear dead days near beyond recall—he based a series of sermons on baseball as a tie-in. (Typical title: "Don't Die on Third.")

One member wrote in to say she was staying away from church until such unorthodox goings-on were over; Dr. Johnson, with the highest good humor, read her letter to the congregation; used it to help make his point, received her back with open arms and understanding of her views even though he didn't agree.

DR. JOHNSON began packing his church to overflowing, soon after he came here from Tacoma, Wash., in 1931—a standing joke among theater men was that they were muchly pro-Johnson because, after the church filled up on Sunday, they got his overflow crowds. Not only did it make a good joke; it just happened to be the truth.

A dinner at the church in honor of Dr. Johnson will be held Wednesday in celebration of his twenty-fifth anniversary; many civic and religious leaders will attend, and members of his church will gather. The way members of his congregation have always felt about him seems summed up best in a letter from a Tacoma church member written to St. Louis when Dr. Johnson was preparing to leave Tacoma.

"This is a great shock to every citizen in Tacoma," the writer said, then, apparently feeling his point was inadequately made, carried on: "He is not only loved by every member of his church, and by every citizen of Tacoma, but by everyone in the Pacific Northwest and in fact on the entire Pacific Coast."

That's the way his members here feel, although factually they might exclude from Dr. Johnson's admirers the hopeful backers of a burlesque show once scheduled to open not far from his church. The pastor protested mightily to city officials, to no avail. Then he called up the city jail.

"Got a nice comfortable cell down there?" he inquired. "This is Dr. Johnson at the Third Baptist Church."

"Uh, I guess so, Doctor," said the startled jailer. "Why?"

"I might have to do a little Carrie Nationing," he replied genially. "If they open this burlesque here I'm personally going to take a hatchet to the box office, and I just wanted to make sure you had a vacancy for me."

No burlesque. Also, no liquor store—once when one opened near the church, Dr. Johnson leveled his verbal artillery at it and it folded. When he was a member of the St. Louis Board of Education—for six years, part of that time as president—the beer served at board meetings went by the boards, at his protest.

A phrasemaker of the old Southern school, Dr. Johnson decried proposed racing legalization as the "Hare-Hess-Horse-Hound" hill. No racing.

Dr. Johnson, six-foot-two, weighs in at 240 pounds, having lost upward of 30 pounds at physician's orders after a heart attack a year or so ago. He said he felt the first pain in his chest in front of the Pilgrim Congregational Church but, shuddering at the thought of the headline "Baptist Minister Dies in Front of Congregational Church," kept going.

AFTER resting up, Dr. Johnson is back on a busy schedule. He delivers hundreds of talks and sermons a year all over the country and just returned from Kansas City and Philadelphia when we talked to him. (He speaks of distant cities as "I've got to go over here to Washington," waving his hand casually as if he was saying he had to wander down to the south forty for a few minutes.)

He is 69 years old, has never lost the country-boy air, has, in fact, purposefully stuck to it. Nobody who has ever lived in a small southern town could help but be reminded of home when Dr. Johnson ties into sin. But for a country boy he's sure known in a lot of countries, and in his own country his southern background has produced effective results.

Dr. Johnson, here in St. Louis, is actually the personification of a crossroads meeting place of the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions—has, in fact, been not only vice president of the Southern Baptist Convention but also president of the Northern Baptist Convention.

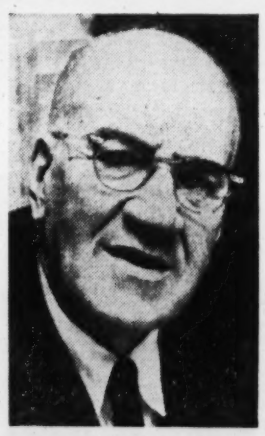

So, the Third Baptist Church belongs to both. (And Dr. Johnson speaks all dialects.)

In 1947 he was elected president of the Baptist World Alliance, for three years.

Charles Oscar Johnson was born in Anderson county, Tenn., near what is now Norris dam, the son of John Calvin and Margaret Johnson. His father was a dirt farmer and sometime blacksmith. There had been no ministers in the family. Young Johnson wanted to be a civil engineer, choosing that life's work because he liked looking through that tripod telescope that time the surveyor came around.

THE ISLAND HOME BAPTIST CHURCH, DR. C. OSCAR JOHNSON'S CHURCH IN TENNESSEE AS A BOY; HE WAS BAPTIZED IN THE CLINCH RIVER NEAR THERE; PREACHED HIS FIRST SERMON THERE, AND GOES BACK OCCASIONALLY AS GUEST PREACHER.

"I'M A SAVED SINNER, A BAPTIST BY CONVICTION AND A BAPTIST PREACHER BY THE CALL OF GOD."

At one point, he also had ambitions for the stage. But it was his strong, fundamentalist religious background that took. He gave his first testimony for Christ in the little Island Home Baptist Church, and was baptized in the Clinch River. He studied at Carson-Newman College in East Tennessee.

Part of his expenses came from the heart-breaking sale of Fox, his chestnut sorrel saddle horse, for which he got $150—he taught school (for $35 a month) in the summertime and managed to meet expenses. He got his A.B. degree in 1910, married Rose Lee Long of Morristown, Tenn., that year and his first pastorate was in Newport Beach, Calif. (The 12-member one.)

"Looked like my Dad's smokehouse," he recalled.

Then he was called to the pastorate of the South Park Church in Los Angeles; built the membership from 89 to about 600; then went back east to enter the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., from which he was graduated in 1920. (He had to drop out for a period when funds ran low.)

HE WENT to Tacoma after graduation. The Johnsons, who live at the Gatesworth Hotel, have three children, the Rev. Dr. R. M. Johnson, General Director of the Council of Missionary co-operation for the American Baptist Convention; Dr. Frank Johnson, physician with a hospital at Doniphan, Mo., and Miss Ruth Elaine Johnson, who is employed by the St. Louis School Board in the health department.

Those are the bare facts, the simple chronology, and as such explain very little about why this particular preacher rose to head the World Baptists, was chosen to head the nation-wide fund-raising drive for rehabilitation in Europe by Baptists after World War II (raising more than $16,000,000) and built the largest Missouri Protestant church.

An immense drive is part of the answer, and he's still driving; he will leave next May for a three-month speaking tour of Australia.

HE'S been all over the world, doing Baptist work. All of which is considerably different from the days when, as a young and penniless preacher, his immediate goal was the burning ambition to get a certain job—cleaning the streets of Los Angeles. He got to the application window and it was slammed in his face. All jobs filled.

Some preachers we have known seem to rank humor as an error comparable roughly to the use of heroin or the boiling of missionaries. Happily, Dr. Johnson uses humor as a mainstay and a weapon—an effective lever, and, furthermore, his humor is funny. Sorry, we refuse to try to write any of it down.

There is no way to write down an anecdote by a southern story-teller — the delivery does not take to print. His humor ranges from the broad to the subtle, his sermons draw to this extent: He was in Tacoma ten years, arrived at a church with 350 members and left it with 2350 members. (Plus building a $350,000 church.)

Dr. Johnson, son of an old-fashioned Baptist deacon, and who grew up in the atmosphere of the mourner's bench, in a little frame church, has a whopping big operation in the Third Baptist Church.

The huge building houses 123 rooms, including nurseries, class rooms, library, music room, prayer sanctuaries, a chapel, lounge, dining room—even a gymnasium. Television is used, on closed circuit: When Dr. Johnson preaches, upstairs, there is a television receiver with a large screen downstairs where there is seating space for several hundred additional church-goers.

It's all very modern.

THE inscription on the church edifice is from a hymn, an inscription well in keeping with the corner at Grand and Washington, any way you look at it:

"Where cross the crowded ways of life, Where sound the cries of race and clan, Above the noise of selfish strife, We hear Thy voice, O Son of Man."

Dr. Johnson makes his headquarters in a spacious office, with many pictures of his children and grandchildren therein. The picture of his home country church is tacked on the wall. There is a framed Norman Rockwell print, flags and a wall motto taken from the works of the late Grantland Rice, the one that ends on the thought it matters not if you won or lost but how you played the game.

"That was written by a newspaper man," we said.

"It's pretty good, anyhow," he said.

Dr. Johnson says he doesn't particularly like to be labeled, although one that has stuck is "The Sage of Grand Avenue."

Looking back over the years, he spoke of the modification he had made in his outlook. Once, he said, he simply accepted race prejudice and never questioned; now he is pro-integration. He's cut down on the hellfire and preaches positive love. He has looked at fundamentalism and liberalism, he said, and doesn't like either extremism as much as the middle of the road.

"That's where I am," he said. "The middle of the road."

In Show Business Since Debut at Two

Elinor Donahue of 'Father Knows Best' Was Vaudevillian as Child

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 4.

PERT and pretty Elinor Donahue, who plays the teen-age daughter of Robert Young and Jane Wyatt in the "Father Knows Best" series (KSD-TV, 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays), probably went through the usual "awkward age" of adolescence, but she was too busy to notice it.

If Elinor had been a star of the magnitude of Margaret O'Brien, Shirley Temple, Gloria Jean or Jane Withers, her "awkward age" would have brought out dozens of publicity releases and temporary retirement. But Elinor wasn't a star and, as she puts it, "When I was 13, I simply played awkward parts. I was five feet, five inches tall and weighed 91 pounds. I was the tallest, skinniest girl you ever saw. All I was was bones."

ELINOR, who will be 19 on April 19, was born in Tacoma, Wash., the third and last child in the family. She has a sister who is 21 years older than she and a brother 18 years older. With the advantage of having a full-grown brother and sister, her education was rushed. She began talking at six months, was singing at 16 months, and soon after her second birthday made her professional debut on radio, getting $5 for singing "Oh, Johnny, Oh."

"My mother opened a bank account for me. Then she bought me a jelly apple. I think it was then that I decided that show business was for me."

By the time she was five, Elinor was a veteran vaudevillian, playing the Bert Levy circuit in the Pacific Northwest. A few years later, when ill health forced Mrs. Donahue to pack up her family and move south to Los Angeles, Elinor got her first movie break.

ELINOR DONAHUE . . . TOO BUSY TO PAY ATTENTION TO AWKWARD AGE.

THIS came about with little effort on the part of Elinor. A chance visit to the Bob Burns radio show, the renewal of an old acquaintance with the show's emcee, Dick Lane, and the display by a proud mother of her daughter's snapshot did the trick. Lane, making a picture a few days later at Universal, happened to show the snapshot to a producer and Elinor was signed for "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

"And," says Elinor, turning big, solemn eyes upon you, "none of it came about by trying. I just liked to sing and dance and happened to be around people who did something about it."

Elinor's movie career soon went into high gear and the bright, pretty child was cast in one picture after another. The stage, vaudeville and radio also claimed much of her time during this busy period. Neither she nor her mother made any attempt to pick and choose the type of roles to play. She went blithely into anything which they thought would give her experience. It should be noted that Mrs. Donahue, besides managing her talented daughter, was also a much-in-demand theatrical designer.

ELINOR found time during her busy life for athletics such as ice skating, horseback riding, swimming, bicycling and tennis. This added versatility which has stood her in good stead. When she was 14, except for a girlish face, she could pass for 18. She got dancing parts on TV's "All Star Theater" and "Comedy Hour."

"By smearing on a lot of makeup," she says, "people thought I was older than I really was. Why not be older, I figured—as long as it was only on paper."

In the past five years she has been busy in television. Besides many dancing roles, Elinor made dramatic appearances in "Playhouse of Stars," "My Favorite Husband," and the Ray Bolger Show.

Then came "Father Knows Best" in 1954. "That was easy," Elinor says. "All I did was wipe off my makeup and act my age—I was 17 then."

Special TV Awards

Stimulus for Work On Civil Liberties

By Alvin H. Goldstein
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.

TO stimulate production of television programs dealing with civil liberties, the Funds for the Republic has established the Robert E. Sherwood Awards providing $55,000 in prizes for achievements in that field by commercial networks and independent stations.

The Fund for the Republic, endowed by the Ford Foundation to encourage television portrayal of subjects involving constitutional rights and freedom, will award $20,000 each for the commercial network drama and the commercial network documentary show which has treated the topic with the "greatest distinction, taste and effectiveness" from Oct. 1 to May 1.

Lesser independent stations with limited resources also are made eligible for the competition by establishment of a $15,000 award for like accomplishment, either dramatic or documentary. Nominations in any case are expected chiefly from within the industry but they are open to the public.

IN ALL INSTANCES, the prize money will be divided among producer, director and author of the respective productions. That division as well as the selection of the winners will be in the hands of a jury of nine distinguished Americans selected from fields in which constitutional rights have been a matter of concern.

They are: Robert A Taft Jr., son of the late Ohio senator; Philip H. Willkie, son of the late Republican presidential nominee; Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt; Kermit Bloomgarden, Broadway theatrical producer, and Gardner Cowles, president of the Des Moines Register Co. and the Cowles Magazines.

Also on the jury are Robert M. Purcell, managing director of Station KEYD-TV, Minneapolis; Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of the College of the City of New York; Gilbert Seldes, author and critic, and Harrison Tweed, New York attorney.

In announcing the project, Robert M. Hutchins, president of the Fund for the Republic, declared that they were dedicated "in honor and memory of Robert E. Sherwood" because he "represented the finest in the entertainment arts . . . was a valiant fighter in the cause of American liberties."

SHERWOOD received the Pulitzer Prize four times on three occasions in the field of drama and in 1949 for his biography entitled: "Roosevelt and Hopkins." His Pulitzer prize-winning plays were "Idiots Delight," 1936; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," 1939, and "There Shall Be No Night," 1941.

"The Fund would seek to have its awards attain some of the prestige of the Pulitzer and Nobel prizes," directors of the Fund set forth when creating the Sherwood Awards. "The competition would aim at encouraging the development of finished productions of highest professional distinction in the fields of interest and to draw national attention to the best of them.

"This competition would be more comprehensive in coverage and of greater significance than any present award program in TV. Professionals in the field —critics, producers, directors— with whom the project has been discussed feel that a competition of this type, not motivated by commercial considerations, and with imposing prizes, is badly needed and can do much to draw attention to situations that the Fund believes should be widely discussed.

"BECAUSE OF economic and technical limitations on small independent stations, it is expected that for the most part the programs that get serious consideration will be network productions.

"It is proposed, therefore, that the Fund set up a special award to encourage the independent stations. Toward this end a special classification and prize for the best independent station program is included."

Members of the jury will be assisted in their selective tasks by the Sherwood Awards staff which will receive the nominations at the offices of the Fund for the Republic, 60 East Forty-second street, New York. Because most will come from the industry, judges will be alerted before the telecasts.

OGDEN NASH . . . POET GUEST ON MUSICAL SHOWCASE ON KSD-TV TONIGHT.

Television Letter Box

I WOULD like to express my appreciation to KSD-TV for the most marvelous program that I have ever seen on television. It is really a pleasure to witness such a production as "Festival of Music." Seldom does one see or hear even one star such as the individuals that appeared on the program, let alone such a gathering as was witnessed Monday night. Again let me thank you for such a happy hour and a half watching "Festival of Music." Programs like this one are a joy.

DORRIS M. PADBERG.

Who said "Saturday night is the loneliest night of the week?" That person has not been watching chanhel 5 on TV. From 7 until 9:30 we have, in succession, Perry Como, Art Linkletter, Jimmy Durante and George Gobel—what an array of talent and delightful personalities coming right into your living room—a variety of good, clean, pleasant entertainment for the entire family.

E. A. BAUMANN, Sr.

Why doesn't Max Liebman put on a spectacular of the Grand Ole Opry stars? I guarantee he would have more viewers than for those other things he puts on. It might surprise him to know that a lot of people don't like the kind of opera he puts on. I bet there are more people watching channel 36 on Saturday night at 6:30 than any other channel. Red Foley is on then.

Here's for more programs like "Dr. Hudson's Secret Journal." And for our money you could shove "Dragnet" to 11:15 p.m. and bring "It's a Great Life" in at 7:30. "It's a Great Life" is certainly a lot better for the youngsters. Thanks loads for Matinee Theater.

MRS. J.K.P.

Please convey my gratitude to the sponsors for the wonderful opportunity of listening to the great artists on "Festival of Music" Monday night. It is indeed a great privilege to have such greatness brought into our homes, as most of us do not have the opportunity of hearing and seeing them.

MARGRET JUNIOR.

However, when nominations are received of shows which jurors have missed for any reason, they will be supplied with kinescope film and scripts to review them. Judgment will be made on both content of the productions and the quality of presentation, especially as to its effectiveness in point or problem involved.

Beside the cash prizes, the Sherwood Award will include plaques honoring the network or station which initiated the production and to the sponsor making it economically possible. Thus, the Fund strives, in its self-declared intentions, to "generate a greater interest in civil liberties in the television industry."

Memory And Two Old Men

By E. E. Edgar

MEMORY: On his ninetieth birthday, Chauncey Depew, the famed lawyer and wit, was chatting with an equally aged friend.

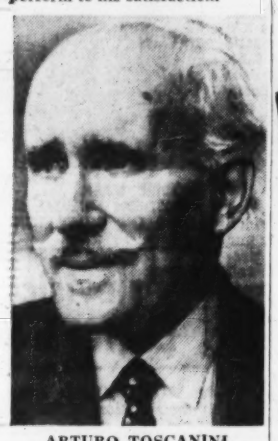

"It's wonderful to have lived as long as this," commented Depew. "My only regret is that my memory is beginning to fail me."

"My memory is as keen as it ever was," boasted the other. "I can still remember the first girl I ever kissed."

"I envy you," sighed Depew. "I can't even remember the last."

OVERSIGHT: Conductor Arturo Toscanini, known for his quick temper, would fly into a rage when the orchestra did not perform to his satisfaction.

ARTURO TOSCANINI

Once, during rehearsal, a piccolo player repeatedly made the same mistake. When he had done so for the fifth time, Toscanini blew up. Breaking his baton on the stand, he cried:

"God tells me how this passage should be played. Why can't He tell you, too?"

Misconception: Playwright Marc Connelly and a friend were at the theater one night watching a dull drama. During the intermission that followed the first act, Connelly turned to his companion and gave vent to his distaste in no uncertain terms.

"Shhh!" the lady in front of him expressed herself irritably. "The curtain is going up. Will you be quiet and watch the play?"

"My dear lady," said Connelly, "the mere fact that the curtain is up doesn't mean that a play is going on."

REQUEST: During his first weeks in Paris, American composer Ethelbert Nevin occupied an apartment above that of a famous sculptress.

Nevin was eager to have her do a bust of him. As he was already a well-known composer, he was confident that she would ask him to pose as soon as she learned of his presence.

Several weeks passed, but the request was not forthcoming. Then, one afternoon, there was a knock on the composer's door. When Nevin opened it, he was delighted to see the sculptress standing there.

"I am the tenant in the flat below," she began, introducing herself. "Are you Mr. Nevin?"

He nodded.

"Mr. Ethelbert Nevin, the composer?"

Another nod.

"Would you do me a favor, Mr. Nevin?" she said.

The moment had come at last.

"Of course," he said, waiting expectantly for her next words, which he was sure would be a request for him to pose.

"Will you please," she pleaded, "stop playing that infernal piano?"

Change: Comedian W. C. Fields, who enjoyed a glass, or a bottle, of whisky, announced to one of his drinking companions that he was going to Palm Springs for a vacation.

"What's in Palm Springs?" demanded the other. "The liquor is just as good here."

"I know," replied Fields. "I just thought it would be fun to get drunk in new surroundings."

Error: Writer Gertrude Stein, whose books were more than a little difficult to comprehend, confounded her editors and her readers with equal ease.

At one time, early in her career, she submitted a story to a literary magazine. The editor couldn't make head nor tail of it, but he decided to accept it anyway.

When the story appeared in print, it aroused no comment from the staff nor from the magazine's readers. No comment save one.

A few days after the magazine came out, Miss Stein angrily barged into the editor's office.

"Is something wrong?" he asked, observing the fury in her eyes.

"Is something wrong?" she screamed. "How dare you reverse the order of my second and third pages?"

The editor checked. Sure enough, the printer had reversed the order of the pages by mistake. And nobody had noticed the difference.

Answers to Housewives' Questions

By Dorothy Brainerd

"I AM wondering whether you know of any way to remove scorch from a yellow woolen blanket without removing the color also," writes Mrs. C. H. S. hopefully.

"The blanket was kicked off the bed early one night and lay over an electric heater about 12 hours so the scorched portion is restricted but severe. I know I should be happy that it didn't cause a fire, but I would so like to make it presentable as it is a favorite of mine."

We tried our best to find a way to salvage this favorite of yours, Mrs. S., and checked with Madonna Fitzgerald, home management specialist for the extension service of the University of Missouri.

She advises that she is sorry, but nothing can be done to remove the scorch from the blanket. The wool fibers have been destroyed with long heat so that they would not stand the slightest abrasion, and bleaches are not good for wool.

Wish we could have brought you a more encouraging message; it is unpleasant to be the bearer of sad tidings.

"I HAVE A RECIPE for cream of tartar and soda biscuits which calls for two cups flour, two teaspoons cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking soda, one-third cup shortening and three-fourths cup milk. I hesitate to use this recipe because the proportions of cream of tartar and baking soda don't sound just right," explains Mrs. A. R. L.

"Also, my biscuits seem a bit soggy or doughy in the center, although they rise nice and high. Can you tell me the reason for that?" she continues.

I assume that you make these biscuits by a recipe other than the one quoted above. It would be almost impossible to tell you why they become soggy without checking the recipe by which they are made.

For instance, it may be that you are using too much liquid for the amount of flour. Or you may be baking them at too high a temperature so that they brown before they have baked thoroughly. The recommended baking temperature is 425 to 450 degrees; baking time, 10 to 15 minutes. Also, you should be sure that the biscuits are placed in a preheated oven.

I agree that the proportions do not seem right on the cream of tartar and soda biscuits. The basic proportions for biscuits are one cup flour, one-third to one-half cup liquid, two to four tablespoons fat, one-half teaspoon salt, one and one-fourth to two teaspoons baking powder.

The substitutions recommended in the "Handbook of Food Preparation" published by the American Home Economics Association are one-fourth teaspoon baking soda plus one teaspoon cream of tartar for one teaspoon baking powder.

NEW CLEANING PRODUCTS appear on the market almost as regularly as new cake mixes, but one just being introduced in St. Louis really is homemaking news.

It is a heavy-duty liquid laundry detergent which, according to claims of the manufacturer and demonstrations we have seen, also may be the answer to many another homemaking problem. Developed primarily for use in washers, the fragrant blue liquid goes right to work on delicate man-made fabrics, elastic foundation garments and heavily soiled work clothes with equal safety and efficiency. It even removes such stains as lipstick and paint.

But in addition to working washday magic, it does an amazing job on discolored kitchen cabinets, rust-stained screen doors and wax accumulations on resilient floors. One of the most dramatic demonstrations showed its ability to restore yellowed nylons to wearability.

MISS V. F. E. writes that her iron frying pan has a very heavy crust on the outside, and wants to know if there is any easy way to remove it.

Not that we know about, Miss E. It would be possible, but very difficult, to remove it. Heat the pan, dry, but don't get it too hot. Then scrape off as much of the encrustation as possible with some blunt instrument such as a putty knife. It may take months to remove it completely. Constant use of a soap-filled wool pad should keep it off once it has been removed.

Frankly, I wouldn't attempt its removal. I would leave it on, although I know it is unsightly. It is not unsanitary as long as the inside of the pan is kept thoroughly clean, as I am sure it is. This coating contains oil which will keep the pan from rusting.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Coats of New Fabric

Coats made of the new fabric, "lilion," are to appear for summer. Some of these are Paris inspired and others are created by New York designers. This fabric which is nonwoven and appeared first for full-circle skirts has been popular for travel clothes because of its noncrushing qualities. Most of the fashions made of the material are printed in gay colors.

Vogue of Plaids

The vogue of plaids continues. Glen plaids are seen in lightweight woolens that are used for dresses with matching boleros. Sheer woolens in the bright Scotch plaids are liked for brief jackets and for sashes. The navy dress with plaid jacket is typical of a trend.

Music And Music Makers

The Effect Of Acoustics

By Thomas B. Sherman

CARNEGIE HALL in New York has been a center of musical life for more than half a century. It was dedicated in 1891 at a concert conducted by none other than Peter Ilyitch Tschaikowsy and during the intervening years every notable figure in music has performed there in one capacity or another. So it is not merely a New York landmark; it is also a national, if not an international institution.

Property values in New York are such, however, that the hall cannot be supported economically by the revenue derived from concerts. For that reason its present owners have served notice that they intend to sell it to a purchaser who will replace it with an office building.

A group of musicians and music lovers, headed by Lawrence Tibbett have started a "Save Carnegie Hall" movement in the hope of buying the property and continuing to operate it as a temple of music. They must raise $3,000,000; moreover they must also work out a plan for its future operation that will somehow make it possible to avoid a continuing annual deficit.

This will not be possible unless the City of New York exempts the property from taxation; and that being so the city could move into the situation even more effectively itself by taking over the ownership and operation of Carnegie.

Reasons of sentiment and convenience are good enough reasons for saving Carnegie Hall. But another one should be mentioned which is just as important if not the most important of all. The acoustic properties of Carnegie Hall make it one of the best in the world.

THE EFFECT of acoustic conditions on the musical life of any given community has never been given the attention it deserves. The National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C., for instance, has always played under a disturbing handicap for its home audience because its concerts are given in Constitution Hall. By contrast, Symphony Hall in Boston, provides optimum resonance for every type of instrument, including the human voice and in consequence invites delicacy and precision and penalizes omissions of such attributes. I was forcibly reminded of the difference in sound quality caused by acoustic conditions on the few occasions that I heard the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra play on the road. A comparison between performances in Carnegie Hall and at Lehigh University for instance might have led one to assume that different orchestras were playing. The Lehigh acoustic deadened all sound and smothered all detail. And I may as well say, at this point, that the orchestra sounded much livelier and more resonant in a high school at Birmingham, Ala., than it ever has at Kiel Auditorium.

The growth of audiences for symphony concerts and recitals in this country has been accompanied by a deterioration in auditory conditions. Aside from the use of new materials in the resonating surfaces the halls are larger than they were 100 years ago. A concert given in a large hall—which is defined here as any hall that seats more than 2500 (Carnegie being an exception)—is handicapped in two ways. First, the feeling of contact between the performer and the audience is minimized or lost; secondly the performers do not observe an artistically ideal range of dynamic values for fear that soft passages will be inaudible. What happens here is not that every level is made louder all along the line but that the range of dynamics is cut down. Pianissimo passages are played piano and piano passages are played mezzo-forte; but forte and fortissimo remain much the same.

I CAN RECALL many occasions when an artist played or sang through a whole program without going below a mezzo-forte. Naturally this works against artistic finesse; and promotes exaggerations and distortions all along the line.

Promoters of concerts may have believed that larger halls were necessary to accommodate the larger public, but such has not proved to be the case. In St. Louis a hall seating 2400 would be quite large enough to seat the present audience for the weekly pairs of symphony concerts; with a little capacity left over for normal growth. Then if the audience became larger the weekly concert could be repeated twice instead of once.

There are many other reasons why a new hall for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra is desirable, and would promote greater interest in music. But the acoustic reason is still the most important of all.

When the city of Vienna rebuilt its opera house that had been bombed out during the war it held the auditorium to its former dimensions although making extensive improvements backstage. It now seats a few more than 2000 people, the same as before. Sentiment played a great part in this decision, but it was a wise one from an artistic point of view. To make the auditorium larger would have destroyed the line of contact between stage and audience and would have made the music harder to hear.

Nancy Kelly at the American Feb. 13 in 'The Bad Seed'

THE CURTAIN will go up again at the American Theater after one week of darkness when the Playwrights' Company will present Maxwell Anderson's melodramatic thriller, "The Bad Seed," Feb. 13.

Based on William March's 1954 best seller, the play which ran for 334 performances on Broadway stars Nancy Kelly, who received the Antoinette Perry Award for her portrayal of an ordinary suburban housewife and unsuspecting mother who finds herself entangled in a web of mayhem.

Included in supporting feature roles are Ann Shoemaker, Roy Poole and Kimetha Laurie, who plays Miss Kelly's eight-year-old homicidal daughter. Others in the cast include Lloyd Gough, Elizabeth Council, James Field, Virginia Maddocks, Donald Keyes and Gordon Clarke.

"Bad Seed," Anderson's biggest hit of his 32-play career, was directed Reginald Denham, who also staged "Ladies in Retirement" and "Dial M for Murder," among others.

The play will run for one week.

Art and Artists

The Education Of the Eye

By H. S. Derrickson

BUYING ART, a business magazine recently suggested, is a good investment because art is "the world's hardest coin," often proving as lasting as the best of gilt-edged securities. In comment on this view of collecting, John I. H. Baur observes: "Some people will put grenadine in a martini."

Baur, curator of New York's Whitney Museum of American Art, made this remark in his witty and wise "ABC for Collectors of American Contemporary Art." This 24-page pamphlet, with delightful drawings by Saul Steinberg, has timely value now, in view of the fact that, as City Art Museum staff members put it, "the question-asking season is upon us."

This is the season of the annual Missouri show. Chosen last week, this comprehensive survey will open eight days from today, with prize-winners to be announced next Friday. The show will close March 12.

Baur's booklet, "a frankly partisan argument for collecting work of our own time and land," is distributed by the American Federation of Arts through Princeton Press, Inc., 270 Lafayette street, New York 12, N.Y. It is on sale at 25 cents a copy at City Art Museum. In abridged form it is reprinted in the February issue of House Beautiful.

EVERY LINE is readable. Almost every line tempts a reviewer to quote it. Baur places stress on possibilities that art ownership affords for the education of the eye. This training is carried forward effortlessly and best by just looking at art one lives with, art one's friends live with and art in galleries and museums.

Reading can help, Baur continues; so can the freshening effect of rotating one's possessions and, ultimately, giving the best pieces to museums. Almost inevitably, he says, the true collector becomes a "missionary whose reward lies in awakening, wherever he can, a new awareness of art's power to move the human spirit."

IN THE ACHIEVEMENT of this crowning development of a collector's growth, Baur, a museum man himself, stresses the need for professional advice. In this sense the professional category excludes most interior decorators, but it includes reliable art dealers and "museum directors and curators, who are more anxious to help than the public realizes."

Baur makes no bones about professionals' motives: "Their willingness is not entirely quixotic, because the healthy growth of a museum depends very largely on an informed group of local collectors who can support their museum both morally and with loans and gifts."

To speed the growth of an informed body of collectors, Baur outlines, with specific figures, the range of prices that may be reasonably asked by established American artists today and by their juniors. He sketches recommended reading for collectors in books, magazines and newspapers and tersely discusses today's various themes, mediums and styles—always the subject of repeated inquiry at City Art Museum during the Missouri show.

IT IS FAMILIAR subject matter, recognizably presented, that naturally intrigues the beginning collector, Baur acknowledges, but he makes a burning defense of abstraction, which "permits varying interpretations and rewards the spectator with changing meanings and an elusive beauty which can never be adequately expressed in words."

Between these extremes he discusses productions of the expressionists, surrealists, automatists, primitives and sophisticated amateurs, "of whom there are thousands today." This multiplicity of styles, he points out, is part of America's way of life and is less surprising than would be "a uniform, easily understood, state-approved art."

The important question of quality, he emphasizes, supersedes any consideration of style.

An artist's professional standing and sales are largely based on his representation in museums, one of the surest criteria of quality, Baur says. Further guidance to the growing public that collects art is provided in museum exhibitions, with their cash awards and other fanfare, he says. The coming Missouri show offers prizes totaling $2085, a post-World War II high.

Museums can rarely give a collector the kind of service a dealer provides, Baur notes. He cites other advantages—an overall level of quality that is often higher and a wider choice made possible by "more varied work assembled in a single place, thus giving the collector a better chance to make comparative judgments," and thus further to educate the eye.

Principia Concert

The American Chamber Orchestra will present its first St. Louis concert at 8:15 p.m. Friday in Howard Hall, The Principia, 5539 Page boulevard, as the next attraction on The Principia Concert and Lecture course.

The ensemble of 16 string and wind players was founded in 1950 in the Music School of the Henry Street Settlement of New York City. Formerly known as the Mozart Orchestra, the group is directed by Robert Scholz, who was awarded the Bruckner medal in 1950 for outstanding performances of Anton Bruckner's orchestral and choral works.

Baritone Leonard Warren Symphony Concert Guest

BARITONE LEONARD WARREN, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will make his first appearance with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in two concerts at Kiel Auditorium Opera House, the first at 8:40 p.m. Saturday, followed by one at 3 p.m. next Sunday.

Warren will sing four arias—"Ombra mai fu," from Handel's "Xerxes"; the Credo, from Verdi's "Othello"; "Avant de quitter ces lieux," from Gounod's "Faust," and "Nemico della Patria," from Giordano's "Andrea Chenier"—and a song by Donaudy, "O Del Mio Amato Ben."

The orchestra, under the direction of Vladimir Golschmann, will open the concerts with Von Weber's Overture to "Oberon," and will also play Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, Copland's "Quiet City," Ravel's "La Valse."

Bronx-born Warren recently

made operatic history when he became the first non-Italian singer to perform the title role in "Rigoletto" at La Scala, Milan's famed opera house. Rigoleto is one of more than 25 major parts Warren has played at the Metropolitan since 1939.

This afternoon's All-Family "Pop" concert by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will feature a return appearance of St. Louisan Grace Bumbry and a musical re-creation of a World's Series baseball game between the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers.

An entire family group will be admitted for a total price of $1.50 to today's concert at 3 p.m. in Kiel Auditorium. Single admissions are also available for 75 cents.

'Music for Tonight' Program Tomorrow

SECOND of the season's "Music for Tonight" chamber music series, conducted by Albert Tipton, principal flutist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will be held at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at Sheldon auditorium, 3646 Washington boulevard. Soloists will be Pianist Mary Norris (Mrs. Tipton), Trumpeter Robert Weatherly, who are also symphony members, and Tipton. There will also be a 15-piece string orchestra.

First half of the program will be baroque music: an allegro assai movement by Scarlatti, a rondo by Giardini, introduction, aria and presto for strings by Marcello, and the Brandenberg Concerto No. 4 of Bach. The latter will feature Weatherly, Flutists Tipton and John Kiburz and Violinist Melvin Ritter.

Completing the program will be three pieces based on old English dances and composed for flute and strings by Ronald Arnatt, St. Louis organist, and the Shostakovich Piano Concerto for piano, trumpet and strings. Proceeds over expenses will be given to the scholarship fund of the summer music festival at Aspen, Colo.

Webster College Student Musical

Webster College students will present their annual musical in the college gymnasium, 590 East Lockwood, Webster Groves, at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and next Sunday, with a 2:30 p.m. matinee Saturday.

Mary Alene McQuie and Doris Coughlin are co-directors of this year's production, "Take Time."

Church Concert

The 70-voice a cappella choir of Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill., will present a concert at Salem Lutheran Church, 8343 Gravois, Affton, at 3:15 p.m. next Sunday. Victor Hildner is conductor of the group.

Gallery Notes

THE FIRST City Art Museum show by members of the Twentieth Century Art Club, a St. Louis organization founded in 1900, will open Wednesday in the museum's lower-floor galleries. Included will be oils, water colors and pastels. The display will close March 5.

Three other museum exhibits will open tomorrow and run through the month. They consist of masterpieces of printmaking owned by the museum and two architectural shows.

These include work submitted in a competition for design of Parkway School, St. Louis county, under auspices of the St. Louis chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and photographs of buildings whose designers won awards at the institute's national convention in Minneapolis last June.

Entries in the third annual Christmas card design contest sponsored by First National Bank in St. Louis and the Artists' Guild will be received at the guild, 812 Union boulevard, tomorrow and Tuesday from 1 to 4 p.m. and Wednesday from 1 to 7 p.m. Prizes totaling $425 will be awarded. The show will open Feb. 10 and close Feb. 21.

Civic Music League Concert Feb. 14

Pianist Robert McDowell will be featured in the fourth concert of the 1955-56 Civic Music League series at 8:30 p.m. Feb. 14 in Kiel Auditorium Opera House.

McDowell, now in his twenties, has played more than 125 recitals in three nation-wide tours. He began his musical career as a boy soprano in the Episcopal choir of his native Owensboro, Ky., then turned to the reed organ at the church and later piano when his voice changed at the age of 14.

Tickets for the concert may be purchased at the Aeolian Company.

Western Roles

HOLLYWOOD, Kirk Douglas will co-star with Burt Lancaster in "Gun Fight at O. K. Corral." Douglas and Lancaster last appeared together in "I'll Walk Alone."

Mary Todd, Restless in Washington, Takes Children on Long Visit to Kentucky

By Irving Stone

Abraham Lincoln has been elected to Congress; Mary is now the mother of two sons. On a visit to Mary's family in Kentucky Abraham has once more been deeply disturbed by the problem of slavery.

CHAPTER EIGHT

THEY arrived in Washington late at night with the children asleep in their arms and drove over the rough cobblestones of Pennsylvania avenue to Brown's Hotel. There, chilled and exhausted by the week's journey, they put the children in the center of the big bed and fell asleep on either side of them, only half undressed.

In the morning they went out to see the sights. On Pennsylvania avenue they saw a group of chained slaves coming up the street, chanting a hymn. Just before they reached the Lincolns they were driven into a barnlike structure called the Georgia Pen, a heavy wooden door closing behind them. Abraham said in a voice she barely could hear: "What a dreadful thing to happen in the capital of a free country."

Monday, from the visitors' gallery of the House of Representatives, Mary watched the new members draw ballots for seats. At the stroke of twelve the Speaker ordered the new members to rise, and she smiled happily as Abraham took his oath of office.

She settled down to the routine of the boardinghouse, knowing that she must remain here until she became acquainted with Washington and found a proper house in a proper neighborhood.

She had counted on old friends to launch her socially, but nothing seemed to happen. Stephen Douglas, now a Senator, came to supper at Mrs. Sprigg's but never reciprocated. When Henry Clay arrived to plead a case before the United States Supreme Court she dropped a note to his hotel. He promptly sent a message inviting them to supper that night, talked to them of his own affairs, then told them how glad he had been to see them. That was the last word she had from Mr. Clay.

Mary continued her search for a more suitable place to live. At last, on a residential street settled by permanent Government employes, she found a red brick house built in Baltimore style, with white stone steps and narrow white stone framing the windows of the two stories in front. The rent was high, $300 through the end of the Congressional term; but the furnishings were pleasant, and she could very quickly turn it into a distinguished background for supper parties, teas and dances.

She waited until after Sunday dinner, then led Abraham to the little brick house, saying casually, "I want you to see a charming place." When she had finished taking him on tour, she took a deep breath, then let out her plea in one gasp.

"We've been over two months at the boardinghouse. It's time enough to get our bearings. We're going to be here another 15 months. I think we ought to live as a family in our own home. . . ."

SHE extended her hands, pleading. "Don't you see, my dear, I want to create a milieu for you; I want to invite the best families of Washington and the most important Government officials, not only members of the House and Senate but Cabinet officers, foreign diplomats. . . ."

"Whoa, whoa, Mary, the hosses have broken loose and left the cart behind. No one has bothered with us socially in the months we've been here, and I suspect you made several stalwart efforts. Then why should they bother with us just because we rent a house? No, Mary, I don't want to be pushy, to be embarrassed by inviting people who want no part of us. I've heard that Washington is run by high southern society, that they're a snobbish and imperial group of women; they'll never let us in."

"I'm as high society as any woman in this town!"

"Granted, Molly, but the Lincolns ain't."

He was laughing at her now, and she veered to the political side. "There is a presidential election coming up in November, and Polk has not been a popular President. If we win next time, it would be to your advantage to be known among the permanent Senators and Congressmen here in Washington. You want to be high in party councils."

"I can't see that I am going to get there by inviting folks to our home to eat dinner. If we do our job quietly and simply, and then we go home after the one session, there will be nothing to regret, no embarrassment or defeat to look back on. Don't think I'm ungrateful for what you are willing to undertake on our behalf. I admire you for it and I am grateful: but, Molly, my dear, I don't want it . . . not now. Must I have it?"

Rendered helpless by his implication that if he must have it he would perhaps argue no further, she lifted his big bony-knuckled hand, laid her cheek on it, wiped away the tears she had been holding back.

"No, my dear, you don't have to have it."

TOWARD the end of March Mary received a letter from her stepmother urging her to bring the children to Lexington.

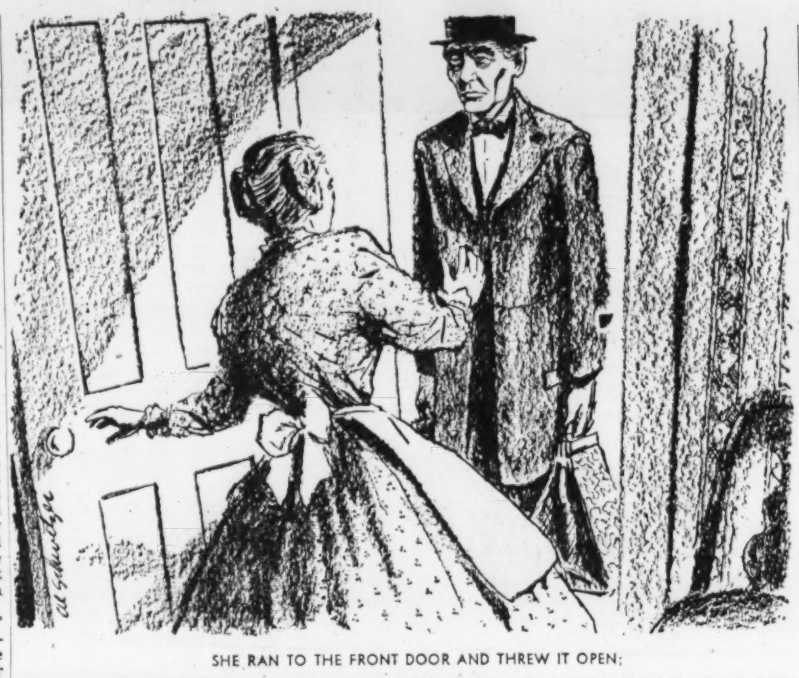

Abraham asked, "Would you like to visit your family, Molly?"

"Would you like me to go?"

"I always prefer to have you with me, but you seem so unhappy here . . . those headaches. . ."

"I can't find any function for myself, Abraham. I'm not even of any help to you in your writing. . ."

"You have so much energy, so much driving force . . . and I've deprived you of the one field in which you could have applied yourself — that brick house."

SHE RAN TO THE FRONT DOOR AND THREW IT OPEN;

It was generous of him to assume the blame. She reached up and framed his face with her hands.

"I'm sure it's for the best. The children will love the brook and the horses. As long as we've made our decision, I will go as soon as possible."

The next morning he took her to the railroad station. As he brought her baggage to the platform she thought, we have failed. I don't know where or how.

She was sick at heart, and sensed that Abraham was feeling exactly the same. He held the two boys, one in each arm.

"You don't have to stay any longer than you want to, Molly. Rest for a few weeks and then come back. Perhaps you can hire someone to take care of the children, and return by yourself. . . . Then you'd have more freedom here. . ."

". . . Freedom to do what, Abraham?"

"To be with me . . . to help me. . ."

It was heroic effort, but she knew that it had been motivated more by sympathy than by need. There was a moment of silence; then the engineer rang the bell on the locomotive. Abraham was startled by the sound. A pained look crossed his face. His eyes sought Mary's.

"Take good care of the children, won't you? Don't let them forget Father."

She said, "I will take care of them," but she was crying inside herself because he had been able to let her go.

In Lexington her vitality returned. It was a relief to be out of the boardinghouse, out of the room which had become a cell to her, out of the city where she had been unknown and unwanted.

She went horseback riding with her half brother, David, who was teaching little Robert how to handle a horse. She was invited frequently into the countryside for the day or the weekend. Many evenings she spent with her father in his library. Robert Todd was overjoyed to have her there. Abraham wrote:

"Father expected to see you all sooner, but let it pass; stay as long as you please, and come when you please. Kiss and love the dear rascals."

Congress adjourned in July, and Abraham accompanied General Taylor on a speaking tour in the New England states, where the latter's fortunes were not going so well. Finally, at the beginning of October, Mary left Lexington with the boys to join Abraham in Chicago, where he spoke at a meeting so well attended that it had to be moved from the courthouse to the public square. She thought it the clearest address she had ever heard him make; his campaigning through New England had seasoned and mellowed him; he used his humor more sparingly and cogently, and when he came to his major thesis, that the defeat of General Taylor would mean that the American people approved the extension and perpetuation of slavery in newly acquired territory, he made his point without inciting hatred against the southern states.

It was good to be back in their Springfield home again. Abraham looked well, his cheeks filled out, his eyes cheerful. Mary too was looking uncommonly well, with the summer's sun on her face. After their separation she found their love totally renewed.

Abraham had said: Love is eternal. So was marriage; for marriage was the earthly and adult form of love. In her mind the two always had been synonymous; that was why during those 20 months of purgatory, when her love was gone from her, she had turned deaf ears to all pleas to forget Mr. Lincoln and marry someone else. In her own mind she already was married to Abraham; she had been from the moment she knew she loved him.

She had feared for Abraham's influence in Illinois because of his unpopular stand on the war, but wherever he spoke he attracted enormous crowds. As the lone Whig Congressman from Illinois he represented the administration which would come into being if the General were elected. For the first time in several campaigns he genuinely believed that the Whigs could carry Illinois.

GEN. TAYLOR carried the election . . . but not Illinois. The change of some 1700 votes out of 110,000 cast would have brought Abraham his great victory. Where he had campaigned, Taylor had won.

There were a little over two weeks between the election and the day of Abraham's departure for Washington to attend the second and shorter session of Congress. The question of whether she could accompany him had not yet come up. Should she risk it?

There was the fear of rejection: a return to Mrs. Sprigg's . . . political uncertainty . . . the tension of close quarters . . . these would be too costly, surely, for the help she could give during the three months of which they were certain.

"Abraham, I'm not going to Washington with you."

She watched him closely to see if he were pleased or relieved. He gave no sign. He put down the paper he had been reading and held out his arms to her.

". . . If you're doing it for my sake, Molly . . ."

She kissed him determinedly. "This will be best for all of us. After the inauguration, when we know what's going to happen . . . then we will be together again." After a moment she asked? "What do you think will happen to us? Is it possible you might get . . . a Cabinet post?"

"Not a chance!" he blurted; then his embarrassed laugh admitted that the random thought had entered his mind. "I could get the Land Office, since that always is given to Illinois, but Ninian's Uncle Cyrus has made me promise to get it for him. I'm going to propose Edward Baker for a Cabinet post."

"And what do you intend or hope to get for yourself?"

HE shook his head from side to side before replying. 'You've got me there, Molly. I do want to be in government; I think it's the greatest of all sciences, helping people to govern themselves. But just what I can ask for myself . . . where I could best fit in with my limited background and talents. . ."

She threw up her arms in a gesture of mock despair.

"I don't mind your being modest in front of me, but please don't ever let me hear you utter such words in public!"

He left for Washington on the four o'clock stage from the Globe on Sunday morning. He did not wake the boys, kissing them in their sleep; and when it came time for husband and wife to say goodby they did so casually. There was every reason for them to be hopeful.

As to what lay in their own future, Abraham sent no word. He would remain for Gen. Taylor's inauguration, then appear before the United States Supreme Court in a case involving an Illinois client. If the President had a Washington appointment for him, Mary could sell their house and come on with the children. But he was pessimistic.

Gen. Zachary Taylor was inaugurated on March 5, 1849. Abraham was a witness to the ceremony. Then he pleaded his case before the Supreme Court, and arrived home on the last day of March. He was thoroughly perplexed.

"Not one man recommended by me has yet been appointed to any office, little or big. The loss of Illinois for the Whigs has made us little more than poor relations. If I can get the Land Office for myself, perhaps I should take it. After these 17 months I have no practice left; Billy has barely eked out a living."

"What does the Land Office pay?"

"Three thousand a year. It's a job I'd like to have, setting policy for the distribution of public lands."

Two incidents brought encouragement: his recommendation for postmaster of Springfield, Abner Ellis, was acted upon; and Dr. William Wallace was appointed pension agent in Springfield. Then a message from Washington informed him that Justin Butterfield was making a serious bid for the Land Office job.

Lincoln was indignant. The previous winter and spring Butterfield had done everything in his power to secure Clay's nomination. Yet here he was on hand for the best office the state laid claim to. "I'll write immediately to every Whig Congressman I know, and everyone else that has any chance of getting to President Taylor's ear."

"Good. And I'll write to my father. He can persuade some of the Kentucky Whigs."

AT the end of May the Land Office had narrowed down to Butterfield and Lincoln; the Cabinet had postponed the appointment three weeks for Abraham's benefit.

"You just have to go to Washington, Abraham, and be on the ground to plead your case."

"You're right," he said emphatically, "but first we must get out another batch of notes urging people to write me letters of support so that I can have them in Washington."

A few days later he left on the week-long journey. She waited anxiously on the date the appointment was scheduled to be made; if Abraham won, he would telegraph. No message came.

When another week had passed and there still was no word, she grew uneasy. Then she saw him trudging up the street, carrying a bag in either hand, dripping melancholy. She ran to the front door and threw it open; his cheeks were sunk, his eyes opaque.

She led him into the sitting room, brought him a cup of strong black coffee, waited until he had swallowed several gulps. Then she could restrain herself no longer.

"Why did they turn you away?"

He reached out a long arm to place the cup and saucer on the table, looked up at her and said in an empty tone, "Many reasons; for one thing, I stayed with the Cyrus Edwards nomination too long. . . . When I went up to the Land Office on the twenty-first and learned that the Butterfield appointment had been made, I stumbled back to my room, threw myself down on the bed and stayed there for an hour. I tell you, Molly, I have never been so thwarted . . . or had such a monumental headache."

She spent the next weeks trying to bring him out of his private hell. He sat for endless hours staring into the empty fireplace. She managed to get him to eat and sleep a little.

Toward the end of September fresh news came from Washington. Abraham had been appointed governor of the Oregon Territory.

Oregon! thought Mary. The farthest and wildest reaches of America! Two thousand miles away, across vast plains and mountain ranges. Abraham put his arm lightly about her shoulder; together they sat side by side on the little sofa and held hands. After a long time he began to speak, but in the middle of a sentence as though his thinking had at last reached some point that might be expressed. ". . . Ninian's father, first governor of the Illinois Territory . . . he got to be governor of the state . . . Illinois was a wilderness then, the same as Oregon is now."

"But not two thousand miles away, not cut off from the rest of the country by months of dangerous travel."

"Then you don't like the idea, Molly?"

"I think it's an effort to placate their consciences."

"The offer has to be considered on its own merits. It's $3000 a year, Mary, the same salary as the Land Office. It's a chance to escape from our predicament . . . from the fact that I have to build up a practice. . . . If those letters from California about the discovery of gold are telling the truth, the migration to the Pacific Coast will multiply a thousandfold. . . ."

"Abraham, is this job something you genuinely want?"

"No. I never wanted it, but at a time like this. . ."

"You underestimate your future."

He was silent for a moment, his toe tracing the pattern in the rug. "I don't know, Molly, I can't read the future."

She rose and stood facing him, her hands clenched at her sides. "No, but we can read the past; the past tells us that we can't run away. This is our home place; this is where we have to make our stand."

He looked up at her. There was a tiny smile playing about the corners of his mouth.

Superb Acting In Chekhov's 'Uncle Vanya'

By Brooks Atkinson

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.

EACH of the Chekhov productions at the Fourth Street Theater has been better than its predecessor. "Uncle Vanya," which opened there last evening, continues that pleasant tradition.

Of the four major Chekhov plays, "Uncle Vanya" is the least familiar. Perhaps it is inferior in design and scope. But it would take a conference of professors to settle the truth of that statement. As acted by a perfect cast, as directed and produced by David Ross, as translated by Stark Young, it is a blend of all of Chekhov's most beguiling qualities. It is the essence of life, done with so much grace and understanding that it does not seem like something written or acted.

THERE IS NO DOUBT of one thing about it. It is richly comic. "The normal state of man is to be odd," the doctor says. Looking through his microscope at the specimens of humanity that he has isolated for "Uncle Vanya," Chekhov was never more warily humorous in his conclusions. They are gentle folk, thrown unwillingly together in a country house. But they are egotists, possessed of illusions about themselves. They are maudlin. Sometimes they are witty.

And the scene in which Uncle Vanya twice tries to shoot a fatuous professor is hilarious. If Chekhov were writing "Uncle Vanya" today we would have to commend him for his skill in psychiatric understanding of character and personality. He dissects his aimless people with the cold detachment of a scientist, but also with the humorous warmth of a sensitive artist. That is a combination unique in the literature of the stage.

THANKS to the settings and the evocative lighting of Zvi Geyra and the lovely costumes of Richard Mason, this is a beautiful production. As a matter of fact, the Fourth Street Theater is an awkward, impossible house. Bit by bit, Ross and his associates have learned how to transfigure it into a haven of art. The physical production has warmth, taste, depth and magic.

Opening night the first of the four acts seemed to be at loose ends. But once that was out of the way the performance acquired the innocently acerbic spirit of Chekhov. The acting is superb. Franchot Tone's portrait of the country doctor is the finest thing he has done in years—perhaps in all his years on the stage. It is mature, responsive; it is wistfully alive just under the surface of a heavy-moving man of medicine.

George Voskovec's Uncle Vanya is thuthful and amusing at the same time—restless, impulsive and wildly futile in his big scene with the revolver. As the insufferable professor, Clarence Derwent is at the top of his form—dripping with condescension in a series of florid, but empty gestures. Gerald Hiken's piously ineffectual Telegin is also comic. And in the brief part of a peasant, Sanford Seeger gives an agreeable performance.

The women are excellent also. Signe Hasso's supercilious, timid, crushed Rose Elena is a merciless character portrait, despite the gentleness of its manner. As the lonely daughter, yearning to be loved, Peggy McCay gives a performance that glows with the true spirit of Chekhov. Mary Perry's patient and selfless old nurse gives the performance a solid point of reference. Olive Templeton is good in the shadowy part of the mother.

Ross has now completed three of the four major Chekhov plays, giving all of us the benefit of what he has learned. "Uncle Vanya" is sweet and touching, but always funny. Unpretentious in style, modest in accent, it is the work of a master who seems to know everything about the vagrant souls of human beings. The truth turns out to be fundamentally comic. Chekhov had no interest in reforming the world.

Wife Anti-Social, Husband Complains

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I HAVE been married seven years. I am in business for myself and my wife holds a good-paying job. I have never found it difficult to get along with anyone until I married. Believe it or not, I have to beg my wife to go dancing and 10 minutes after we arrive, she wants to go home. I know it's weird, but she actually dislikes to see me have a good time. Being in business makes it necessary for me to have social contacts but in order to keep peace I have very few. I have had to miss any number of conferences and conventions out of town because of the domestic trouble they cause. She can be as gracious as the next person, but refuses to invite anyone to visit us. She does not have a single good friend. She has been asked to join social clubs but has refused. It seems everyone is avoiding us because of her attitude. I can find no reason for her behavior. It is imperative that I maintain friends if I am to succeed in business but I'm working under a great handicap. What is your suggestion? R.J.K.

Didn't she act like this at all before you married? Surely, she couldn't have changed so much that you didn't have some kind of warning. Enjoyment of mutual friends and, generally, much the same kind of social activity is an important facet of marriage that many people overlook until it's too late. She may very well be jealous of the attention you receive and the many friends you have. That's bad enough in itself, but it's even more unfair for a wife to jeopardize her husband's career because of it. It's wise to discriminate between business conferences that need your attention and parties or conventions you can just as well pass up, but don't let her scare you out of attending those meetings that are vital to your—and her—financial future. If she realizes that her jealousy is hitting your pocketbook, she may change her ways. But while you're wishing that she would change, think over what you might be doing that causes her to be jealous or anti-social. Do you insist she go to a dance where she doesn't know anyone and could not be expected to have a particularly good time? Do you let her sit on the sidelines while you visit with your friends? Do you occasionally take her out alone for dinner where you can give her all your attention and make her realize that you do care for her? If you're honestly doing all you can, then I think it's wrong to let her rule with such an iron hand that you're constantly trying to pacify her.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 13 and have a younger brother. A friend of our family stays overnight at our home occasionally and when she does, she tries to boss my brother and me. She is spoiled and doesn't have a thing to do around her house. I help my mother but when this girl is over she just sits around and expects me to wait on her hand and foot. What can I do? W.

You don't say how old your guest is or whether she stays with you in your parents' absence and is supposed to have some authority in the house while she is there. If that's the case, your parents would expect you to do as she asks. But regardless of that, she is your guest, and as such should be entitled to courteous treatment. However, that doesn't mean you have to be a slave to her or stop your work around the house just because she is doing nothing. Maybe you can talk her into helping out.

Dear Martha:

● MY BROTHER is 17 years old, and a high school student. He likes one girl and goes to her house every night. My parents disapprove of it but he doesn't think anything is wrong with his going over there. Would you please send some advice for him. A READER.

If you are planning to dish out my advice, let me warn you that it probably won't do any good. A boy isn't inclined to listen to his sister about his social life. However, I must say that I agree with your parents and I should think the girl's parents would resent having a boy—even someone they liked very much—taking over every evening so that she has no time for her studies, her family or her other friends. If your parents don't approve, they, not you, are the ones to insist that your brother spend a little more time at home. And it would be a good idea if they did.

Dear Martha:

● LAST NIGHT we were invited to a home and all we saw and heard was television. Don't you think this was rude? Don't people have manners any more?

MRS. S.

If you were invited to a home to enjoy a special television program, that's one thing. Otherwise, the hosts certainly should ask their guests if they would prefer to watch television, play cards, or just sit and talk. It's no fun trying to carry on a sensible conversation with the television vying for attention.

Dear Martha:

● MY TEEN-AGE DAUGHTER AND I did a grave injustice to a very sweet person, my sister-in-law. She was so good to all our four children but in my heart I was jealous because she could dress better than I and gave nicer gifts, so my daughter and I gave her the silent treatment and also drew my brother-in-law into the episode. She has never visited anyone since our Christmas dinner. I understand she took our treatment so seriously she was ill over it. What can we do, Martha, to make it up? Someone told me she cried for days. I feel like a heel. My daughter says just forget it and she will come around. What do you think? I'm not much for saying sorry to anyone. L.V.

Shouldn't it be as easy to apologize as to hurt someone? That apparently was simple enough for you and your daughter, just to turn your backs on her and actually cause her to be ill because of jealousy. To say, "I'm sorry" won't erase all you have done—either in her mind or yours—but it's a starter anyway. My suggestion is to go to her and tell her the whole story. Explain why you resented her. Then ask her to forgive you and from here on out treat her like a member of the family should be treated, with affection and loyalty and consideration. Incidentally, I think your daughter should go right along and add her apology if she really is at all to blame. Too many things are "just forgotten" in the hopes that time will blur a harsh memory and dull our consciences.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your problems. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer questions of a medical or legal nature.

Silk Symbolizes Smartness of Spring Modes

Dresses, Suits, Coats, and Even Footwear and Accessories, Are Being Made of This Material

THIS ALL SILK COSTUME BY LORD'S HAS SLIM DRESS OF PRINTED SILK SURAH AND COAT OF BLACK LINEN-WEAVE SILK LINED WITH THE DRESS PRINT. COSTUME TYPIFIES SPRING FASHIONS.

THE SILK SUIT COSTUME FOR SPRING IS SEEN IN THIS MODEL OF IMPORTED HERRINGBONE SILK BY HARRY FRECHTEL. THE JACKET IS CASUALLY FITTED OVER A SLEEVELESS BLOUSE.

NAVY SILK SATIN SCATTERED WITH COIN DOTS IS DESIGNED BY MOLLIE PARNIS WITH SLENDER BODICE AND BELL-SHAPED SKIRT THAT HAS FULLNESS CONCENTRATED AT THE BACK.

WHITE DOGWOOD BLOSSOMS OF FLOCKED VELVET AGAINST A SILK BACKGROUND COMBINING TAUPE, BROWN, AND BLACK ARE EFFECTIVE IN THE DESIGN OF A GRENELLE DRESS.

IMPORTED NAVY TISSUE TAFFETA EMBROIDERED WITH RAFFIA AND BRILLIANTS IS THE SILK FABRIC CHOSEN BY BEN REIG FOR A LATE-DAY DRESS WITH SKIRT SHORTER AT THE FRONT.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE words "pure silk" are magic ones in spring fashion circles because they symbolize the smartness of current modes. Not only dresses, but many suits and coats are also being made of silk materials while millinery, footwear, and accessories join in this style parade. There's a revival, too, of silk lingerie which is offering keen fashion competition to the synthetics that have dominated "under-cover" themes in recent years.

Popularity of apparel made of silk has continued through the ages, but new developments of design and manufacture recently have brought a greater variety of handsome textures and patterns. Sheer weights are featured extensively while the silks that look like woolens are achieving distinction for tailored ensembles and many other uses. There's a trend, too, toward hand-screened and hand-painted motifs to contribute to the artistry of these materials.

New York designers whose collections have been reviewed in these columns have given silk the place of honor among all textiles. Illustrative of their indorsement was the number of silk ensembles shown by Ben Reig who brought his New York collection to the Westroads store of Stix, Baer & Fuller last week. Silk linen, warp-printed taffetas, tweeds in subtle beige and gray coloring, and chiffons used for evening dresses with flowing lines and uneven hems, were examples of the trend.

Hollywood designers, likewise, have indorsed silks as the appropriate fabrics for the costume of motion picture stars. Noteworthy in this category are the silk ensembles from "The Swan," starring Grace Kelly. Designed by Helen Rose, these dresses represent the period of the early 1900s that is especially significant among spring's fashion highlights. Several dresses are made in the soft, pale silks of that era, and are cut in the narrow princess line with bell-flared skirts and decorated bodices.

A group of spring fashions assembled by the International Silk Association to show the diversity of silks stresses texture, appearance, and other significant points that attract the woman seeking her new wardrobe. Chosen to appeal to the five primary senses that guide a woman in her selections, the "sense of touch" is especially noteworthy. New silks with interesting textures fall into four categories: nubbed weaves, thick-and-thin slubbed weaves, ribbed and corded silks, and silk used or interwoven with another fiber. The vogue of combining silk with another material is seen in the alliance of chiffon with cashmere, satin jacquard blended with cotton, and the sheer blends of silks and worsteds.

Silks that are impressive because of their eye appeal include not only the brilliant shades used for sports and leisure fashions, but also a number of flower and leaf prints for daytime and evening ensembles. Gold also is fashionable, especially for separates, and in combination with clear white. Oriental shades are seen in the printed dresses using red and yellow blossoms in their designs, and also in the Chinese red costumes.

The impressive sound of silk contributes, also, to its charm so the thin paper taffetas, silk surah that has a crisp finish, and peau de soie that is an elegant choice for late day and evening clothes are important in the collections. Taffeta petticoats, likewise, add to the rustle of spring costumes. For those who like dainty colors and very feminine themes, candy tones provide an important group. Bonbon pink and bonbon yellow are pretty for patio dresses. A chocolate brown suit of nubby silk is another using the "candy" colors.

Floral printed silks that look like the flowers they imitate both as to size and exact coloring include cabbage rose and carnation designs. Poppy silk crepe, shantungs printed with mixed garden bouquets, zinnias in gay array, and enormous bunches of violets are typical of the trend.

The head-to-toe silk emphasis is seen in the hats made of silk organza or printed crepe, and the pumps made of satin or grosgrain.

Electrical Kitchens . . . colorful and convenient

By Dorothy Brainerd

It is a good thing now and then to set aside a certain time for the old-fashioned virtue of counting our blessings. So accustomed have we become to the modern miracles which are an accepted part of our daily lives that we sometimes forget what wonders we do have at our fingertips.

With this thought in mind, the electrical industry has designated the week of February 5 through February 11 as National Electrical Week. During this period attention will be focused on the contributions of electricity to our American way of life, and upon new features in the major electrical appliances which constitute the "domestic help" in the majority of households.

The American homemaker of today is virtually assured of getting just what she wants in the way of household equipment, since manufacturers are constantly striving to anticipate her every whim. In fact, one sometimes wonders if she realizes what a vast empire of technological and engineering skill she commands by means of the preferences she expresses so articulately through surveys and consumer demand.

She has, for instance, made it quite clear that in addition to dependable performance (which she takes for granted) she demands two things in her major electrical appliances—convenience and color. A check of the new lines proves that manufacturers have done a superb job of supplying them.

Color is everywhere—a trend which psychologists assure us is a healthful one. It is, happily, subtle rather than glaring. In addition to solid colored exteriors, in several lines color is introduced by means of decorator panels that snap into position at will; in others, with fluorescent bulbs which bathe a white appliance in any pastel shade that suits a woman's fancy. Accessories, floor and wall coverings have been co-ordinated with appliance colors; even electric fans may now be chosen to match the decor of a room.

There is an increasing acceptance of built-ins which utilize space efficiently. Compact units with appliances built under one continuous counter top minimize installation costs and give "custom" appearance at lower cost.

New this season are sectional appliances of built-in design which are mounted on base cabinets. They need not be built into walls or custom surfaces, thus providing flexibility of arrangement and making it possible to move the equipment from one home to another when desired.

Space, a real problem in many homes, has been conserved in ingenious ways. One combination washer-dryer is available in a 27-inch cabinet. Another line offers separate appliances—a completely automatic washer and a twin dryer, each 25 inches—so designed that they may be installed with the dryer above the washer.

There is news, too, in the home laundry field. Washers have special features for the proper handling of synthetic fabrics; dryers automatically adjust drying time and temperature to the type of fabric, size of load and water content. Water heaters have been improved to meet the heavy demands placed upon them by automatic washers. An increased interest in ironers indicates that women realize they are an essential part of the picture if the family laundry is to be handled automatically.

In line with the trend toward space saving is a five-cubic-foot food freezer which takes no more room than a base cabinet and can be installed under the counter if desired.

A dishwasher that may be rolled to the table for loading, to the sink for washing and to the cabinets for unloading provides one answer to homemakers' insistence upon convenience.

News in the dishwashing field is a device featured in one line which is said to insure spotless drying through the use of a special solution that "makes water wetter" by breaking the surface tension of water, thus allowing the rinse water to sheet off the dishes without forming drops.

There is a wide margin for personal preference in refrigerator design with a choice of two doors, single full-length doors, and cabinets with food freezers at top or bottom.

Versatile indeed is one built-in two-door refrigerator-freezer combination that can be installed horizontally as a cabinet type of installation, or vertically with the refrigeration compartment at top and the freezer beneath it.

Noteworthy are the especially designed trays in one refrigerator which cause cubes to drop automatically into a storage bin.

It is reassuring to note that two major manufacturers have given sober thought to the 18 children who suffocated during 1955 when accidentally trapped in refrigerators. One line has no mechanical latch, so that a child who has crawled inside may free himself simply by pushing the door from the inside. The other has a luminous door release which glows in the dark, so that the youngster need only touch the gleaming button to get out.

Air conditioners follow the trend toward accenting color and saving space. They are less obtrusive, some projecting only a few inches on one side, flush on the other. One new unit may be placed in the upper as well as the lower frames of double-hung windows, in casement windows, or installed in the wall as a built-in. A portable air conditioner is now available.

Two dramatic new entries in the range field are the "elevator oven" and the electronic oven.

The elevator oven may be elevated electrically to the exact height the cook finds most convenient for putting in or removing food, then at the touch of a button lowered so that the top may be used as a work surface while the food is cooking.

Electronic ovens are in limited production and priced out of range of the average homemaker. However, Mrs. America probably will have her choice of several before the end of 1956. Operated by radio waves, they cook at fantastic speeds—20 minutes for a four-pound roast, for example.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that with electronic cooking only the food gets hot—not the container in which it is cooked—so that pans may be removed from the oven with the bare hands.

Convenience and color—surely they are both present in full measure in the new electrical appliances which help make American women such excellent homemakers, and American kitchens as fashionable as they are functional.

NEW WAY TO GET ICE CUBES OUT OF TRAYS EASILY

One new line of refrigerators features a built-in ice ejector and three ice ejector trays, which produce three pounds of cubes at a single freezing.

Getting cubes out of the tray is amazingly simple. Turn the tray upside down and slide it into the built-in device, and all cubes are ejected at once. Cubes drop into a transparent serving bin where they remain cold, sparkling and ready for serving. Cubes will not melt or stick together, thanks to the zero-zone temperature of the freezer.

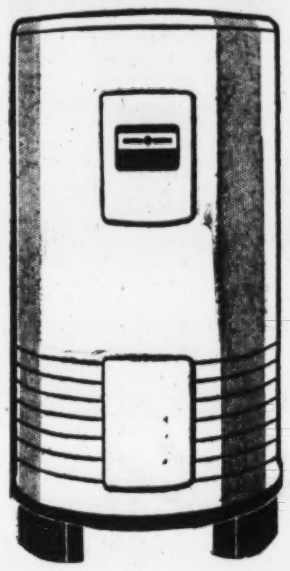

The homemaker can keep up to eight pounds of cubes on hand at all-times.

National Electrical Week Observed for First Time

Outgrowth of Edison Week, Which Originated in St. Louis in 1951 and Has Been Celebrated Annually Here.

Officially designated as National Electrical Week is the week of Feb. 5 through Feb. 11, 1956.

St. Louis can be proud of this national celebration inasmuch as it is an outgrowth of our own Edison Week, which has been an annual St. Louis activity since 1951.

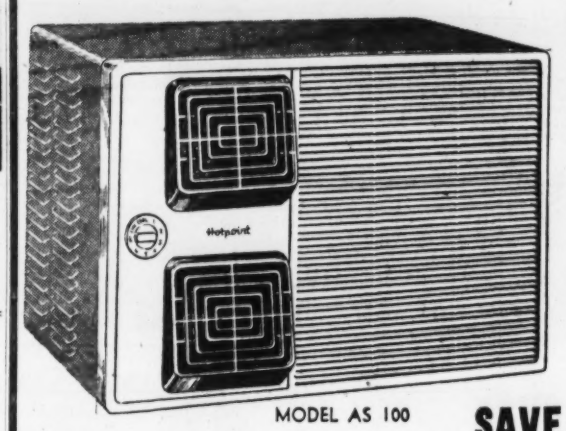

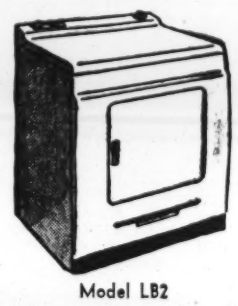

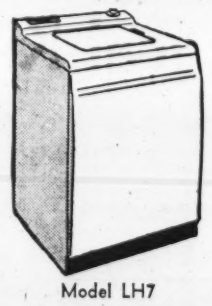

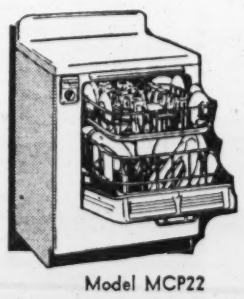

M. E. Skinner

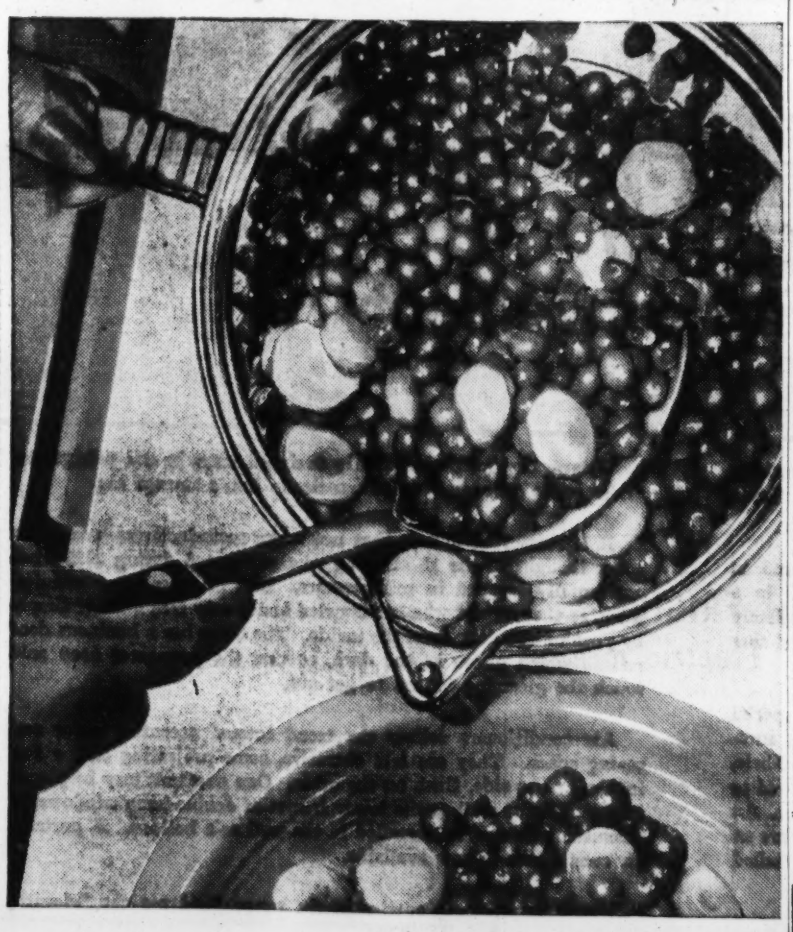

M. E. Skinner, vice president, Union Electric Co., is chairman of the National Electrical Week Committee, and Col. S. R. Todd, president of the International Association of Electrical Inspectors, is vice chairman.

National Electrical Week is being jointly sponsored by the Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Association, Edison Electric Institute, International Association of Electrical Inspectors, International Association of Electrical Leagues, National Appliance and Radio-TV Dealers Association, National Association of Electrical Distributors, National Electrical Contractors Association, and National Electrical Manufacturers Association.

This first observance offers the electrical industry an opportunity for extensive promotion of the benefits of electricity in all fields. Examples of such promotions are: open house programs in plants, factories, stores and offices; dedication of new facilities; industry speakers at Electrical Week luncheons; special sections in local newspapers, and educational programs in the schools.

In St. Louis, a highlight will be the Electrical Week luncheon jointly sponsored by the St. Louis Electrical Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis. Fischer Black, publisher and Editor of Electrical World magazine, will speak on "Our Electrical Way of Life."

NEW REFRIGERATORS GAY, FUNCTIONAL

By GRACE BAKER
Director of Home Service, Mayflower Sales.

The homemaker who chooses a 1956 refrigerator will find that special emphasis has been placed on color this season. In fact, such a wide range of color combinations are possible that they offer a challenge to her ingenuity and artistic taste in planning her individual kitchen color scheme.

In addition to luscious pastel exteriors, the homemaker may now have the same two-tone color scheme which has been so popular in automobiles. "Custom caps" may be installed easily in a few moments on either white or pastel units, providing 18 possible color combinations.

Of course the functional features have kept pace with the decorative ones. A convenience item worthy of special note is a separate ice cube locker in one line which holds dozens of ice cubes as well as frozen juice concentrates, and may be opened independently of refrigerator or freezer. It is placed between the refrigerator and freezer units, making it easily accessible to children—a real time-saver for Mother during warm weather when the youngsters plead so often for "something cool to drink."

Careful thought has been given to shelf arrangements in order to provide maximum flexibility. Shelves may be easily removed or rearranged as necessary to store bulky packages. Another convenience feature is a vegetable crisper, placed waist-high, which has a window in it so that one may see at a glance whether the vegetable supply needs replenishing. A special shelf keeps tomatoes, oranges and apples separate from other vegetables for protection against crushing and bruising. Set right into the door itself, the spacious crisper holds big heads of lettuce and tall stalks of celery, and tilts down for easy access.

Spacious freezing chest, large individual ice cube compartment, a refrigerator designed to meet every need—all of this and color, too. Surely the homemaker will find that all of her desires have been anticipated in the 1956 refrigerators.

WHEN YOU BUY APPLIANCE YOU ARE CHOOSING SERVANT

If you were employing a maid or butler, you would check on personality traits to be sure that the person could take his place smoothly in the routine of your household.

The same principle applies to the appliances you bring into your home. You set the tone of your house. The machines are there to do the work, just as the maid or the butler might do the work. But your preference rules on the "personality" of the machine just as it rules on the type of servant you might seek.

This means that electrical appliances are available in various sizes and styles. You are the one to decide which best suits your particular needs.

You want a machine that will do your work. Get one that fits your home.

She Knows Her Food Is Safe

GRACE BAKER knows that she need not worry over food stored in her electrical refrigerator; correct temperatures will hold it at the peak of freshness. Many convenience features have been added to the new lines, which also place emphasis on color.

ELECTRONIC OVEN COOKS FOODS AT AMAZING SPEEDS

The much-discussed electronic oven has now become a reality, and homemakers may find themselves thinking in entirely different terms of cooking time.

Examples of the cooking wonders accomplished by the revolutionary range include:

Eggs can be poached in 10 seconds.

Boiling water for tea or coffee in 45 seconds.

Cakes baked in from three to six minutes.

The browning of meats and casseroles has been the problem in electronic cooking. One manufacturer accomplishes this by a super-speed coil element in the top of the oven. Adjustable racks and a timer control the browning unit.

Other manufacturers solve the browning problem with a separate lower oven with heating units; after quick-cooking foods in the electronic compartment, the homemaker slides food into the radiant heat oven for a few minutes to get the sizzling brown crust.

Short Order

Heating a baby bottle of milk in a cool oven in a single minute is just one of the wonders of microwave cooking. Bacon may be broiled directly on a paper napkin and paper plate, since walls and utensils remain cool even when food is cooking by this new method. Frozen foods can be put directly into electronic ovens with no defrosting.

FREEZER CAN SAVE TIME AND MONEY

With a home freezer you save time and money—and preserve your family's health.

You save time because your shopping trips are fewer and the preparation of the frozen food is quicker. Whole meals can be prepared in advance—already cooked or ready for cooking—and kept in the freezer until needed. Cakes and pies can be made on an assembly line basis and preserved for months.

And money . . . it's so easy to save money with a freezer. Fresh or commercially frozen food, bought in quantity when plentiful and priced low, can be stored with quality unimpaired. Leftovers can be popped into the freezer, kept for weeks, and served when the family is eager for the same dish again. Food spoilage is eliminated.

Watch Variety.

Not to overlook variety. You'll be serving your family the tastiest and most nutritious meals it ever had. All the flavor and health-giving minerals and vitamins of fresh foods will be yours with a freezer.

The homemaker who likes to put up her own fruits and vegetables will be delighted with freezing—quicker, cleaner and cooler than canning.

If you're a home gardener, you'll have your own strawberries in December—with a freezer. There are two types of freezers: chest and upright. But there are many models and sizes.

Two Types.

The horizontal-chest type has a lid at the top. These freezers range from 3 cubic feet to more than 20. The upright type has a front opening door, and resembles outwardly the regular household refrigerator.

Freezers work on the same principle as electric refrigerators. A motor operates a freezing unit which constantly maintains an extremely low temperature in a thickly insulated cabinet.

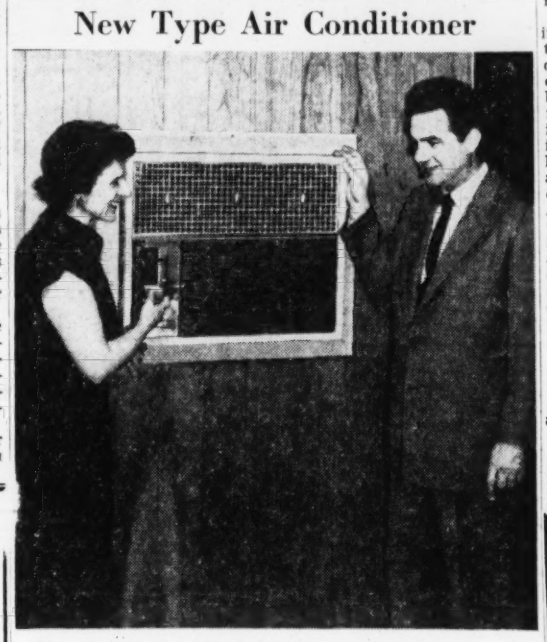

Taking an inventory of your frozen foods regularly helps you plan more efficiently.

Ironing No Longer a Chore

CATHERINE TOGNONI demonstrates how easy it is to do the ironing for the family with a modern automatic ironer. More homemakers are realizing that an ironer is the logical companion for an automatic washer and dryer.

New Type Air Conditioner

The advantages of the through-the-wall installation of the new thin-line air conditioning unit are discussed by LOUISE MEEK and CHARLES BODEN.

AIR CONDITIONERS CURE WEATHER ILLS

Healthful Climate Every Day of Year With Modern 'Comfort Conditioning.'

By LOUISE MEEK
Home Economist, General Electric Appliances Co.
(A department of The General Electric Co.)

Imagine an air conditioner for your home so beautiful that it looks like furniture, so engineered that it blends in with the outside architectural design of any home. It is a possibility with 1956 air conditioners.

One new concept in design has been introduced to the market this year. There is little, if any, projection either outside or inside. It is like having your air conditioner only "wall thick." After many years of research this unit is possible because of a new engineering development known as the radial-axial fan.

Before 1956 many families were unable to enjoy comfortable living the year 'round as they did not want long projection of the unit outside or inside the house. With this new design the problem of installation is a thing of the past. The new 16½-inch thin-line unit can be installed in any type of window without the objectionable overhang either inside or outside of the house. The complete flexibility of this unit easily adapts itself for any type installation.

It can be installed in either the upper or lower frame of a double hung window, making it possible to raise or lower the window, a feature most appealing to the housewife since it makes for ease of cleaning and year 'round installation. This new thin-line unit can be installed in a casement-type window without altering the window in any way. You can even open and close the casement window at any time.

With the new trend of modern built-in equipment the thin-line unit enables you to have a through-the-wall installation which can be flush with the inside or outside wall, or both in some cases.

The new styling blends with any modern room setting . . . and no unsightly air louvers are exposed. The lower front section of the unit housing the air intake grill and the concealed control panel is made of perforated aluminum which simulates the appearance of a rich brown gold-flecked fabric. This pattern provides perfect camouflage of the intake grill while permitting adequate air flow for maximum efficiency.

New in-line type control has now been introduced to provide easy and simple operation, also many manufacturers are still using push-button controls. Automatic controls are available on many models, which provide you with controlled comfort.

All-Year Service.

Some air conditioners can be used year 'round due to the development of an "all weather barrier" which keeps out the weather element in the winter. In the winter months room air can be recirculated, or you can exhaust stale and smoky air, and with some models you can heat your room in the winter and cool in the summer due to "heat-pump" operation.

Another feature that will appeal to the homemaker is the air freshener. The air freshener discharges a metered amount of pleasant odor-removing freshener into the circulating air-stream. . . . designed not only to mask odors but to remove the bacteria from the air that cause odors.

Another feature is the automatic timer control which certainly is a current saving device. You'll be able to return home from work or vacation to complete air conditioned comfort. You can set the timer to turn the unit "on" and "off" at any desired time each day, or to skip as many as 6 days and then turn the unit back "on" at a selected hour. Truly automatic comfort-conditioning.

When purchasing a new room cooler a very important feature to look for is H.P.F. (HIGH POWER FACTOR). Many 1956 models give you a H.P.F. rating of over 90%. This means considerably lower operating cost.

To Each His Own.

Yes, weather is no longer the prime topic of conversation during hot and humid days. Now everyone can enjoy cool comfort to his liking. For years we have escaped the bitter sting of winter in the comfort of our heated homes. Now the unbearable days of the summer months are spent in controlled temperature and humidity. Lost sleep, sluggish appetites, irritable dispositions, the parasites of these months that rob energy and slow down the general tempo of living, are in the past. Air conditioning, once considered a luxury, now is a "must" for our health and well-being, for air conditioning not only cools, but acts as a dehumidifier to remove excess moisture from the air, recirculates and filters the room air. Warm close air is changed to clean, cool, fresh air. Each member of the family can enjoy his own room cooler. . . . from grandmother down to the youngest member of the household. . . . with just a turn of the control regulate the temperature of the room to his own personal comfort.

MODERNIZED WIRING SEAL PACKAGE DEAL FOR HOMES

There's news for home owners whose television pictures keep shrinking, whose lights dim every time the refrigerator goes on, and whose decoration scheme features tangled extension cords.

A new wiring modernization program has been launched in the Union Electric area to attack these evils at their source—inadequte outdated wiring. Most new homes being built these days have adequate wiring. It's the older ones that are way behind the times in their electrical departments.

A joint effort of local electrical contractors, electrical supply houses, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and Union Electric, the program is one of promotion and support of a "modernized wiring package" to be installed in existing homes so more families can enjoy modern electrical living.

The package consists of a new "Electrical Servants' Entrance" containing a 100-ampere, 3-wire service entrance panel large enough to supply two major appliances requiring 240-volt service, plus 10 120-volt circuits.

In addition the contractor will connect existing circuits in the house to the panel, giving the householder a compact electrical system in one package. After completing the job, the contractor notifies Union Electric and the house receives its Modernized Wiring Seal.

IRONER IMPORTANT IN HOME LAUNDRY

By EVELYN EITZMAN
Home Service Director, Central States Distributors, Inc.

With the ever increasing experience of the ease and labor-saving factors in the use of present day automatic washers and dryers, it is recognized that the automatic ironer has become almost a "must" in every home where the labor and drudgery of hand ironing still exists.

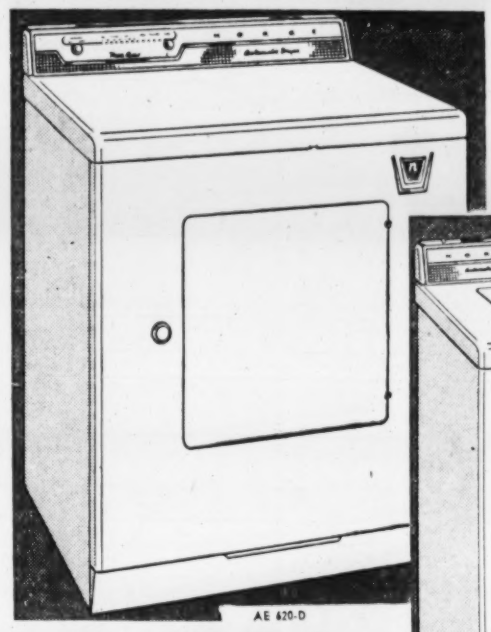

Homemakers have found that washing and drying clothes has become extremely simple and have become accustomed to its automatic benefits. Ironing, which has always been the more laborsome part of doing the laundry, has become even more of a problem since the ease with which clothes and linens may be washed and dried leads to more frequent changes and consequently more laundry, which in turn calls for more ironing.

The modern automatic ironer of today lends itself to eliminating this drudgery and reducing the weekly ironing to just a few hours, conserving the energy of homemakers so that time can be put to more beneficial activities with the family.

The present day automatic ironer will iron everything beautifully because of the advantage of the two usable, unobstructed, open ironing ends permitting both sides of all garments to be ironed on both sides of the ironer. The stationary forming board, which is elbow height, permits ease of placing all garments in position for clear vision and ease of ironing. A master heat control gives you the exact degree of heat for ironing silks and nylons as well as the finest broadcloth shirts, dresses and table linens. Simple dual knee controls permit the complete operation of the ironer allowing the hands to be free in placing the garments.

Local experiences have proven that 99 per cent of homemakers who are enjoying the automatic ironer along with their washer and dryer are ironing everything twice as easily, twice as fast, and have found it to be one of the greatest "helping hands" of modern appliances in the home today.

MORE HOT WATER NOW USED IN HOMES

As American homes become more modern, there is an increasing need for hot water. Automatic washing machines have made home laundry so simple that clothing and linens are washed much more frequently; and it takes plenty of hot water to do the job.

Dishwashers which use water at a temperature hotter than was possible when dishes were washed by hand have put another load upon the water heater.

Our standards of personal cleanliness have steadily increased, and many of the newer homes have two or more baths.

Experts say that, in addition to bathing, dishes and laundry, there are 136 uses for hot water in a home.

Electric water heaters have kept pace with the demand. Efficient and attractive models are available both in round and table-top types. They are so well designed that they need no longer be consigned to the basement; they are quite at ease in kitchen, bath or utility room. Some may be completely built in, with cabinets on either side and above.

Styling also has taken into account the trend toward color, so apparent in all appliances. One manufacturer is featuring a three-dimensional color panel on the front of the white jacket.

KEEP RANGE LEVEL

Even brownness requires a perfectly level range. The homemaker can check the level of her range by placing a glass baking dish partially filled with water on the oven rack.

Most electric ranges are equipped with leveling screws to correct this situation. If the range does not have these, the handyman can use a thin piece of wood or linoleum under the range.

Hot Water All Day Long

Modern home laundry methods create a heavy demand for hot water all day long, and the new heaters have no difficulty in meeting the requirements. Here a 40-gallon cabinet design unit is placed next to the laundry appliances to give extra counter space for household chores. Heaters in a variety of sizes and shapes may be placed in kitchen, laundry, untility room or bath.

All Ready for Guests

Entertaining is fun for KATHLEEN BURKE when she puts her small appliances to work to cut down on preparations. Table cookery also assures that food will be served piping hot.

Entertaining Made Easy With Small Appliances

By Kathleen Burke
Director, Home Economics Dept.
Knapp Monarch Co.

It is the aim of the small appliance industry to bring such ease into food service that entertaining will be fun instead of a chore. Today's hostess can find the answer to preparing almost every party dish in one of the many time-saving small appliances.

Incidentally, the small appliances now on the market are so colorful and pretty that they put one in a party mood. Copper has come into its glory in the toaster; coffee-makers, too, gleam in copper. Hand mixers, toaster bases and table top stoves are available in dainty pastels.

Now let's see how these little appliances that play such a big role in our lives can help when entertaining a small group or a crowd.

First, there is the all-purpose cooker that functions as a deep-fat fryer, a chafing dish, steam cooker or corn popper. Buffet dishes may be attractively cooked and served in this all-purpose cooker. A baking rack or steaming rack is an added accessory for baking potatoes or custards. The thermostatic control assures perfect cooking for deep-fat fried shrimp, homemade doughnuts, plump french fries, casserole dishes or chop suey. For patio parties, or candlelight buffets, here is a real aid for the hostess.

Party fare calls for oven-hot breads of rolls, and the table oven with accurate thermostatic control makes it possible to bake and serve right at the table. Here is the answer for serving hot hors d'oeuvres or garlic breads piping hot at the buffet table or on the patio next summer.

In that connection, an insert pan made specially for this oven makes it the ideal summer oven for baking potatoes, meat loaf, hot breads and rolls.

Of course, a liquidizer is invaluable to the hostess to make short work of shaving ice cubes for beverages, making sherbet at the table, preparing zesty cheese spreads, sauces and dips for shrimp and canapes.

Popcorn is always a party favorite, and an automatic corn popper assures plenty for the largest crowd.

An instant coffee and food server is a guarantee of delicious coffee. The secret of good coffee brewing is the right temperature of the water, and the instant coffee brewer makes it just right to stir the instant coffee into the water in the ready-hot pot. A "keep warm" setting holds the beverage at the idleal drinking temperature all through the meal.

Something new, soon to be available on the retail level, is a short-order grill with space for grilling hamburgers for a crowd. It has a control which makes it possible to cook at exactly the right temperatures such party foods as steaks, pancakes, chicken, fish, chops, etc. Imagine how easy it would be to entertain an after-the-game crowd or a group on the patio with this big party grill.

DON'T PEEK IN OVEN

Uneven brownness can be caused by unnecessary opening of the oven door. After the product to be baked is placed in the oven, do not open the oven door until the baking time has elapsed.

The placement of pans in the oven is important. Leave space between the pans for the heated air to circulate. When pans touch each other the sides or back of the oven "hot spots" or uneven brownness develops.

Clear Vision.

An oven with double glass window, which has been added to an electric built-in range line, is placed at the right height for convenient inspection of the entire cooking processes without opening the door. Double panes of glass, with an air-insulated compartment between, make an oblong window that will not discolor or fog, and heat loss is reduced to a minimum.

MECHANICAL BLENDER CAN IMPROVE SOFT DIET FOOD

Nearly every homemaker will at one time or another have someone in the home who will need special food such as a soft diet. That individual may be an older person, someone on a special non-roughage diet, a convalescent or a baby too young for solid food. Usually soft diets aren't much fun over long periods of time, as anyone who has been on one can testify.

But researchers at the Universtiy of Missouri have found ways to make soft diets more interesting and appetizing by using a mechanical blender. Miss Flora Carl, Missouri University extension nutritionist, advises that in bulletin 626, "Foods the Blender Way," the authors give directions for making many dishes which can be made by the use of an electric blender.

With a blender one can liquefy, puree, blend or mix foods speedily. Such dishes have a fresh flavor that the dieter will enjoy and the entire family will enjoy also. Recipes are given for milk drinks, sherbets, and other desserts, fruit and vegetable dishes, and meat dishes—all made with the blender and suited for family use as well as for those individuals who need a special diet.

No Washday Problems Here

Push button controls assure MARY MARGARET CHRISTIANSON that all of the fabrics in her week's laundry will be washed with the right water temperature and washing action.

HAVE CLEAN CLOTHES AT PUSH OF BUTTON

By Mary Margaret Christianson, Director, Linda Marshall Home Service Dept. The Maytag Co.

Early wash days consisted of rubbing heavy durable fabrics over stones at the banks of the river. The first washing machines eliminated this back breaking procedure. They were an excellent means of removing dirt from work clothes; however, there came a time when women desired to look feminine and fabric was designed with this in mind.

To keep up with the developments of modern day fabrics, new lauundry methods have been developed.

One of the newest features on a 1956 model provides simple push button controls on a attractively designed control panel to give the homemaker the right water temperature and washing action for not just one fabric, but all fabrics. There are six possible combinations, all fully automatict, for hot, warm or cold water and for regular or modern fabric washing action. Thus, at the push of a button, it is now possible to wash every type of fabric.

Modern fabrics when placed in hot or warm water become thermoplastic. This tends to soften them and they lose their pleating with high speed agitation, thus causing deep-set wrinkles that are hard to remove.

Fibers do not soften in cold water, light soil washes out easily, wrinkles are not set deeply and there is less finishing. This means that the modern fabrics remain fresh and crisp with little or no ironing necessary. Non-porous fibers in modern day fabrics such as dacron, arnel, orlon and nylon have surface dirt which is easily removable and requires less agitation than regular wash.

Nylon hosiery can be washed by placing the stockings in a mesh lingerie bag. By adjusting the water level control dial, one can wash small loads with just the right amount of water. There is no longer any need for a full tub of water when washing a few pieces of clothing such as hosiery or filmy lingerie. To save more water, this automatic washer can be purchased with a suds saver.

The two-speed motor is a big feature of this new model. Reduced agitation and spin speeds are the result of reducing the normal speed of the motor by one third. The slow speed is so gentle for modern fabrics. This reduced speed and cold water eliminates hand washing and greatly reduces the finishing required.

Wash time can run from one to 15 minutes—time depends on the type of fabric and amount of soil. The controls are fully flexible and automatic for all wash time.

Remember you can have clean clothes at the push of a button. Just push the regular or modern fabric button and the hot, warm or cold water button. The flexibility of these controls will let you wash anything from heavily soiled blue jeans to soft luxurious cashmere sweaters. It is so quick and easy, and yet you are assured of clean clothes and protection for even the most delicate garments.

Slip Cover Note.

Remove slip covers from an automatic clothes dryer while still slightly damp. Pleats and flounces should be ironed, and covers put back on furniture where they will finish drying smooth and tight to fit.

BATHROOM A GOOD SPOT TO INSTALL WASHER, DRYER

The center of the soiled clothes area, the bathroom is a logical place to do the wash.

Since the family bathes, dresses and undresses there, soiled clothes and linens usually collect in the bathroom. Bedrooms and linen storage are generally close by. Between washdays, laundry units may be used as hampers and wash sorted according to fabric and degree of soil as it accumulates. Laundry out of the bathroom area consists of small easy-to-carry pieces such as dish towels and table linens.

For new construction especially, bathroom and laundry are a good combination. Short pipe runs for plumbing keeps installation costs low. An eight-by 10-foot bathroom accommodates a standard size washer and electric dryer. For smaller bathrooms in existing houses, space-saving 1956 units together occupy only a fraction of an inch over four feet of wall space.

Fully automatic home laundry appliances require no attention after controls are set and do not tie up the room while laundering is underway.

Why Bother With Clothesline?

An electric dryer with time and temperature controls puts an end to MARCIA MEAD's worries about hanging her laundry out to dry. Dried automatically, clothes are not subjected to the sun-fading and wind-fraying of out-of-door drying.

GOOD HINTS ON USE OF ELECTRIC DRYER

Basic Procedure to Assure Best Results; Some Special Uses.

By MARCIA MEAD
Home Service Director,
Whirlpool-Seeger Corp.

Years ago, one of the attributes of a good housekeeper was her ability to manage and direct servants. Servants are a little hard to find today but we still have domestic help. Our electric household appliances are available and competent replacements. They help us every day—to clean and cook and wash dishes and clothes.

The first electric washer was a great improvement over the scrub-board. Today's fully-automatic model is an even greater improvement over the original hand-powered "washing machine." After the washer, an automatic ironer came along to eliminate the drudgery of hand-ironing. And finallly we were blessed with electric clothes dryers that automatized the most tedious and tiring chore of all—the lugging, lifting, stretching and stooping of "hanging out to dry."

The electric dryer with which I am most familiar has an amazing amount of time- and work-saving features. Time and temperature are selective. To eliminate guesswork, three drying temperatures are accompanied by a fabric guide. A special delicate fabrics control provides automatically the proper drying temperature for synthetics, baby clothes and other fragile items. To enable a housewife to tell at a glance how drying is progressing, a moving guide light follows the timer dial on its journey. When operation is completed, a tone signal sounds and the machine shuts off.

This dryer has a special safety of particular interest to housewives with small, and curious children. When the dryer door is opened an interior light turns on and operation stops automatically. If the dial is in operating position, drying resumes when door is closed.

Tips for Best Results.

A completely automatic dryer does require one thing from the user—judgment. For a new user, this may not be as simple as it sounds. Here are a few basic tips to help you get best results from your dryer:

1. Sort materials of similar texture and drying time for your dryer while sorting for your washer.

2. Put quick-drying rayons and lightweight cottons in first load to get an early start on ironing.

3. Put clothes in dryer (usually 18 to 20 pounds wet weight per load), select temperature (hot for rugs and woolens, medium for whites and cottons, warm for silks and nylons), select drying time.

4. Bath towels, rugs and other heavy articles take longer to dry, they should make up last load.

5. To save time, put handkerchiefs, gloves and other small articles into a mesh bag (make one from two dishcloths). One arm motion picks up all the small pieces at one time.

6. To avoid sprinkling, remove clothes from dryer ironing-dry.

7. Remove towels and linens such as sheets while slightly damp. Smooth, fold and stack—their own weight will press them.

8. A dryer load should consist of only starched garments to avoid transfer of starch to articles not requiring the finish. Do not overdry—remove clothes when ironer-dry for a fast and easy ironing stint.

Special Uses.

A clothes dryer has many more "special" uses than most women realize. For example, a few minutes in the dryer can accomplish wonders in the following ways:

1. Between launderings, quilts, mattress pads and quilted robes can be vitalized by setting a low temperature and tumbling articles to fluff the padding.

2. In autumn, when woolen garments and blankets come from storage with an annoying moth crystal odor, tumbling in the dryer, under the influence of the ultra-violet lamp, will dispense with it.

3. Pillows may be fluffed and aired by tumbling in the dryer. The ultra-violet lamp provides a fresh, sunny odor.

4. Remove slip covers from an automatic clothes dryer while still slightly damp. Pleats and flounces should be ironed and covers put back on furniture where they will finish drying smooth and tight to fit.

Watch That Door.

One home economist estimates that the average American family opens its refrigerator door 70 times a day in hot weather and 50 times a day the rest of the year.

ADEQUATE WIRING NOW A 'MUST' IN MODERN HOME

New electrical appliances are finding great favor with the modern homemaker. She knows the time and work-saving benefits that come along with the addition of each new one.

But for the most part, she is unaware that there is a limit to the number of appliances that can be "plugged in" to existing outlets or hooked up to the wiring system in the home.

When the load becomes too great on the house wiring, lights frequently flicker or fuses blow, causing considerable annoyance and inconvenience.

Often, when too many appliances are being used at the same time, it may take longer for them to heat, which means that meals can be delayed. It is even possible that laundry may not be as clean as desired or take longer to do if the appliances are not receiving the required amount of electric current.

Appliances Not at Fault.

Too often the blame is placed on the appliance, while the real trouble is inadequate house wiring. Poor wiring usually dates back to the time the house was built, when fewer electrical servants were available. This is especially true in homes where wiring was installed over 10 years ago.

Not only do appliances fail to operate at their greatest efficiency when house wiring is not up to date, but obsolete wiring is noticeable in other ways throughout the house.

For instance, you may not have enough outlets in the proper locations to permit the use of lamps, clocks and appliances without having tangles of extension cords along baseboards or unsightly "octopus" plugs in the outlets.

Light Switches Important.

Then, too, many homes have insufficient or improperly placed wall switches—a situation that can be easily corrected to banish groping in the dark. If there are two entrances to a room, a switch should be near each door.

Safety is increased when a switch can be found both above and below a flight of stairs, for dimly lit stairways are an accident hazard.

Take a count of the number of electric appliances in your home, and see how many have been added since any wiring changes were made.

GOOD WIRING CAN BOOST THE VALUE OF YOUR HOME

Industrial leaders are backing a Federal Housing Administration move to insist on good wiring when FHA mortgages are drawn. They point out that some homes are still being built with wiring systems which could not take care of a full quoto of appliances.

The FHA has a strong influence on most builders, although it cannot control the operations of the few who build without seeking government guaranteed mortgages.

Bankers and utility men point out that new homes without adequate wiring might well have a considerably reduced value in the future. Even the fact that the wiring could be improved after the house was built might turn buyers away.

Steak Broiled to Perfection

EXPERT GIVES TIPS ON BROILER COOKING

By MARY KITCHENS
Frigidaire Home Economist.

There is little doubt that broiled foods rate high in family meals, so it is a smart homemaker who takes the time and trouble to make sure that she uses the broiler of her electric range to best advantage.

News this season is the fact that for the first time in history, objectionable fumes caused by broiling and other types of oven cooking are completely eliminated—thanks to a new filter in top-model electric ranges. The key to the system is a special compact catalytic device concealed in the oven vent, which operates automatically when the oven is turned on. Smoke and fumes are eliminated before the oven air is discharged into the kitchen, making it possible for the homemaker to bake, roast or broil without annoying smoke or fumes. She can even broil a steak with the oven door closed tight.

This revolutionary miracle filter is completely automatic. There are no switches to turn or set—no moving parts. Whenever the oven is in use the filter automatically goes to work to banish smoke and fumes.

In broiling, cooking is done by direct, radiant heat. This is a dry heat method of cooking and suitable for the tender cuts of meat such as ground meat, fish, chops, steaks, cured ham, or young broiler chickens.

For best broiling results, steaks should be cut from one to two inches thick, lamb and mutton chops three-fourths to two inches thick. A ham slice is best if it is not less than one-half inch thick. Bacon is usually cut very thin. And remember too, that broiler toast is delicious—use your broiler to bake meringues on pie, for open-toasted sandwiches, or for any quick-browning process.

STEAKS

A good broiled steak should be evenly browned on the outside; the fat should be a light golden brown and the lean a brownish red, all very even in color. The outside should be "puffy" in appearance, never shrunken. The inside should be evenly cooked, with no underdone center, but a uniform, even color throughout, the brightness of the color depending upon the degree of doneness desired.

Rare

Heated just enough to change the color of the steak interior to a rose red so that the outer brown surface and the gray layer at the edge shall be just as thin as possible. The juice will be bright red.

Medium

The color of the steak interior has changed from rose red to light pink and the gray layer has extended a little farther toward the center. There will be less free juice and this will be lighter in color than with a rare steak.

Well-Done

Steak shows none of the red color; is well browned on the outer surface. Entire inner portion is grayish tan.

Steak Sauce.

One-half clove garlic, minced.
Two teaspoons chopped parsley.
One tablespoon lemon puice.
One-quarter cup butter or drippings.
Salt, pepper, and paprika.

Heat together and pour over steak just before removing from broiler.

THIS VERSATILE APPLIANCE SERVES THREE PURPOSES

A room heater, a clothes dryer and a food warming tray might not seem to have much in common, but a new multi-purpose electrical appliance does all three chores.

The combination unit is designed for any room in the house, including porch and bathroom, as well as commercial and professional establishments.

As a room heater, the 1000-watt appliance can rest on the floor or be hung on the wall. It operates from any household outlet.

Mounted on the wall, the unit doubles as a clothes dryer by extending two parallel bars. It dries quickly the most delicate of fabrics with no danger of burning.

For use as a food warmer it may be mounted horizontally from the wall and will hold several serving dishes.

The heating element is embeded in virtually unbreakable glass. Because of its safety features, there is little danger of burning or scorching. Being lightweight, the unit may be moved easily from room to room, or wall to floor.

CHARLOTTE WILL demonstrates the new "elevator oven" which may be raised at the touch of a finger to place food in the oven, then lowered to provide extra work space. Whether the homemaker is tall or short, she can have the oven at the exact level she finds most convenient.

'Custom Look' With More Flexibility Now Possible

CHARLOTTE WILL
Philco Home Economist
Artophone Corporation

The St. Louis area soon will be introduced to a new custom kitchen with a revolutionary new add-a-section plan. A complete kitchen with a custom look can be designed from completely self-contained, free-standing appliances which will be sold by appliance dealers and installed by users just like regular kitchen appliances. They will give the appearance of an expensive built-in installation yet they require no construction, carpentry or building-in.

Because these custom sectional appliances are individual, self-contained units, the customer can buy her kitchen piece by piece over a period of months or years as she chooses. She can begin with a single unit that fits easily into her present kitchen, without alteration. Then as time goes on and her budget permits she can add one unit after another, rearranging and decorating as she wishes, until finally her dream kitchen is complete. Formerly custom kitchen units were raw, disassembled mechanisms intended to be hidden by plaster, bricks and carpentry. These new sectional appliances are finished, self-contained appliances, complete with base cabinets where required, ready to be placed in position as easily as a conventional refrigerator, freezer, range or dishwasher.

The new custom kitchen made from sectional appliances starts off with a matching refrigerator and freezer, a sight to inspire any kitchen planner. This pair of "food twins" is available in white enamel or satin-brushed chrome. They bring waist-high reach - in convenience. The doors can be mounted for left or right opening. The refrigerator is an 8.2 cubic foot unit and the freezer has 6.8 cubic feet capacity, yet they are no larger than a large kitchen cabinet and are built complete, ready to set into your kitchen, and give you storage space for hundreds of pounds of fresh and frozen foods.

The custom sectional refrigerators and freezers are the same width, 33½ inches, and coupled with base cabinets of the same width and counter tops of the same width and twice the width to fit over a pair of refrigerators or freezers, give you almost limitless possibilities to create a really outstanding custom kitchen according to your personal plan.

Elevator Ovens.

The most revolutionary idea in the new custom kitchen is the sectional electric range with the revoluntionary new elevator oven which raises to any height at the touch of a button. This is the world's first oven made to match your height and your cooking needs. This new elevator oven raises and lowers as easily as the electric window lifts on a modern automobile—up, down or stop at the touch of a finger. No more bending or stooping with heavy roasts and fowl. Down, it's an extra work surface. Raised a few inches it gives you easy no-stoop broiling. At full height, even the bottom racks are waist level. No matter whether the person using the oven is short or tall, the oven can be elevated electrically to the working level best suited to the person's height.

To make the elevator oven completely automtaic, a control center is placed on the wall at a convenient height. The control center contains the quick-set timer to turn the oven on or off and time the cooking. The roast-meter takes the guesswork out of roasting. The electrical interval timer may be set to signal when cooking is finished.

This new custom kitchen includes a complete surface cooking unit for all your cooking needs. It has a brushed stainless steel top and white enamel cabinet, is designed to fit tightly with other base cabinets, and is just 24 inches wide.

For those who think the elevator oven is "just too revolutionary," there is a sectional wall oven, non-elevating. This can be set at eye-level on a 24-inch white enamel base to match with the other kitchen cabinets. This 24-inch, two-door storage cabinet is equipped with a full-width shelf and generous storage space for utensils.

To complete your custom kitchen there is a sectional dishwasher and a combination dishwasher-sink. A garbage disposer is available in the dish-washer sink.

For New or Old.

These sectional appliances are not limited to remodeling old kitchens but give greater flexibility and lower cost in planning a kitchen in a new home. They will give you all the advantages of a built-in kitchen—beauty, matching uniformity and modern design—without the extra cost of a built-in installation. In addition, they can be changed from one position to another as your decorating ideas or family requirements change, something that is very costly when appliances are permanently built in.

Roll-out Freezer

This automatic defrosting five-cubic-foot food freezer takes up no more space than a standard kitchen base cabinet. It can be installed under the counter or placed free-standing anywhere in the kitchen.

STARCHED GARMENTS

Starched clothes can be dried quickly in an automatic clothes dryer. A dryer load should consist of only starched garments to avoid transfer of starch to articles not requiring the finish.

Do not overdry — remove clothes when ironer-dry for a fast and easy ironing stint.

Pre-Wash Treatment.

Shirt collars and cuffs, the seats of children's pants and other areas of heavy soil should be dipped in warm water and scrubbed lightly but firmly with a soap-rubbed brush before placing them in the washing machine.

ROLE OF LIGHTING IN MODERN LIVING

The fine line between fantasy and fact frequently becomes invisible to those who dream of the future. Seventy six years ago when Thomas Alva Edison built his first "bonfire in a bottle" and suggested that it would someday be used to light the homes of America, many found his dream fantastic.

From those first bare bulbs dangling from crude wiring in the middle of a room, to today's comfortable, convenient lighting arrangements, the line between fantasy and fact has become invisible.

No longer do we depend on light merely to dispel darkness. Today lighting plays a new role in modern living. In addition to helping us see more quickly and accurately, lighting adds new pleasure in livability in our homes. It helps us to create an atmosphere of warmth and hospitality. Small rooms take on an air of spaciousness with modern lighting plans that literally push back the walls.

Conserving time and energy by reducing strain and errors is only one of today's lighting's many silent contributions in the home. It guards our health and comfort; even brings outdoor freshness into our homes.

Lighting needs can be divided into two separate types. General illumination for over-all room lighting, and specific illumination for lighting the immediate seeing task.

General lighting in each room should consist of a fixed shielded light source (no bare bulbs) containing approximately two watts of incandescent or one-half watt of fluorescent lighting per square foot of room area. For example, a 10x10-foot bedroom of 100 square foot area would require 100x2 or 200 watts of incandescent lighting. A 15x20-foot living room of 300 square foot area would require 300x½ or 150 watts of fluorescent lighting placed in valances, coves or cornices. Ceiling fixtures, wall brackets, bookcase lighting, coves, etc., may all be utilized in obtaining these minimum wattage requirements.

Solution to Dishwashing Drudgery

It is no wonder that OLLYNE JEFFRIES points so proudly to her dishwasher. she knows that it will release her from hours of dull work. Food waste disposers and dishwashers are available to fit almost any space and pocketbook.

Dishwashers Eliminate Dullest Kitchen Chore

By OLLYNE JEFFRIES
Home Economist, Southwestern Region, Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Now you can say goodby this year to your dullest kitchen chores—disposal of waste food and dishwashing drudgery. For now there is a food waste disposer and a dishwasher to fit almost any space need and any pocketbook.

Available are the 48-inch sink and dishwasher combinations which both builders of new homes and those who are treating themselves to a remodeled kitchen will want to consider.

Thanks to manufacturers' alertness to current needs, the future is bright for those struggling with limited space kitchens. If 24 inches of space can be spared, you can be released now from dishwashing drudgery. Take your choice: A portable dishwasher on casters, with exceptionally easy water connections made at the sink. Disconnect and wheel the machine out of the way when dishwashing is finished. Fortunately, some of the portable dishwashers can be converted into free-standing or under-counter permanent installations, if so desired later. Twenty-four inch free-standing and under-counter units, incidentally, represent two other models you will find in some of your local stores.

The color story for 1956 includes the ever-popular white, plus a whole array of confection colors—blues, greens, yellows, pinks, grays, cinnamon, etc. Colors are noticeably toned down this year—muted—to give a more restful, pleasing blend with the rest of the kitchen decor.

Is yours a kitchen done in the popular woods, or metal finishes, birch, copper, etc.? Front panels of the same wood or finish are available for your built-in dishwashers, thus providing a continuity of decorative finish throughout the kitchen.

Points to Consider.

Shop for your dishwasher with great care. You will be using it a long time. Consider first its ability to completely sanitize your dishes.

In short, is it designed to assure you always that your dishes are washed for the full length of time and rinsed finally in water at least 140 degrees hot? Ideal water temperature should be 150 degrees or more, since there is a close relationship between water temperature and sterile dishes.

Ease of use is most important. Recent research done by one of our land-grant colleges reports an average of 126.5 items washed daily by the homemaker—using about 73 minutes a day doing it. Hence, the importance of easy loading. Some of the dishwashers you will be seeing can be loaded from the front or sides by raising a lid. Others will have a solid top for work-surface space. With a roll-out tube, they also provide top loading convenience, as well as being able to load from either side of the roll-out well. What is your choice?

Flexibility is a prerequisite, also, of today's dishwasher. You expect it—and rightfully so—to wash, dry and sanitize your dishes, leaving them sparkling clean and ready to be used! It is an added plus, however, and one you will enjoy tremendously when the control has such flexibility that your dishwasher may be stopped anytime to add forgotten items or remove something, then start again without breaking the cycle, or when portions of the cycle may be eliminated or repeated—better still, when all cycles may be eliminated the control set on warm, and the dishwasher used with your nicest china so that the service plates may be nice and warm when your dinner guests come to the table.

Eliminate your dullest kitchen chores with a food waste disposer and a dishwasher that washes your dishes as easy as 1, 2, 3—just like this:

1. Prepare your dishes — in far less time than required for handwashing.
2. Load the dishwasher — more easily than stacking your dishes.
3. Turn the operating control—and your dishwasher does the rest.

Quick Airing.

You can air your clothes without taking them out of the closet by putting an electric fan in the doorway.

French Doors

Here is news in range styling—French doors that swing out. Open one door and the other opens with it, causing shelf to roll out automatically. The removable panel at the base comes in a variety of colors.

MEAT GRINDER, ICE CRUSHER

A new electrical meat grinder that can be converted into an ice crusher is just being introduced. It will grind all types of foods, including meats, nuts, vegetables and cheeses without crushing or mashing them, it is claimed.

Adding versatility to the unit, the ice crusher attachment adjusts to nine different sizes to produce chopped, crushed or shaved ice in various gradations. It rests securely on counter or table without clamping.

AIR CONDITIONING ALL YEAR 'ROUND WITH HEAT PUMP

Perhaps the biggest news in the electrical appliance field today is the coming of age of the amazing, electric heat pump. In 1955 the heat pump began coming off the assembly lines of some of America's largest manufacturers on a mass production basis.

This is the fabulous appliance that provides in a single unit heating in winter, cooling in summer and combination heating and cooling as needed in spring and autumn.

This is the modern miracle which heats without burning fuel, cools without requiring condensing water, and operates on electricity and air, earth, or well water alone. It does this by absorbing heat from the outside source in winter (scientists find heat in substances down to minus 460 degrees F.) and pumping it inside a home, office, store or factory to provide warmth. In summer, the process is reversed. The same heat pump unit pumps heat from inside a building to the outside, leaving the interior comfortably cool, and with the air cleansed, filtered and properly humidified.

Popularity of the heat pump in the St. Louis area is assured. Already 37 residences and 20 commercial establishments have its "controlled climate" the year round, and the past year saw its use more than triple.

With a heat pump installation, there is no flame, soot, grime or combustion of any kind.

Since the only fuel used by the heat pump is electricity, the need is eliminated for fuel storage bins, tanks, cooling towers, flues and chimneys. Their costs may be saved entirely on new construction utilizing the heat pump. In addition, architects are given a much freer hand in designing attractive exterior lines for buildings.

It is interesting to contemplate the eventual impact of the heat pump on our mode of life. By taking the sting out of temperatures extremes in any climate, it will make for a more comfortable, convenient and enjoyable existence for all. This little machine which makes heat at one end and cold at the other may well turn out to be one of the very greatest developments of our civilization.

"FILTER-FLO"

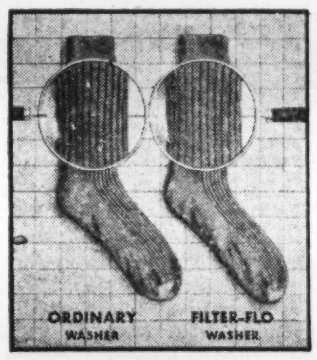

AUTOMATIC WASHER

CLEANS AND RECLEANS YOUR WASH WATER 5 TIMES

Here's How the Filter-Flo Washing System Works . . . Wash water circulates and filters at the rate of six gallons a minute to give you clean, bright clothes. As the washbasket continuously overflows, soap scum floats away. Sand settles out at the bottom of the washbasket. Lint is trapped in the filter which lets only cleansed, sudsy water flow back into the washbasket.

NO LINT

HOLDS MORE

BIG CAPACITY, TOO. Over 50% more clothes capacity than many other automatics.

ACTIVATOR® WASHING Action dips, flexes and cleanses clothes, piece by piece, gently and thoroughly washing them as though by hand.

SAVES WATER

WATER SAVER saves detergent and gallons of hot water when you do small loads.

5 YEAR WRITTEN PROTECTION plan backs famous G-E dependability — one year warranty on entire washer and four additional years on Sealed-In Transmission parts.

Scientists Finding New Uses For Dangerous Radioactive 'Ash'

Drugs Sterilized by Radiation From Material Left Over From Fission in Atomic Reactors.

By JOHN DAVY

Copyright 1956, The London Observer.

LONDON, Feb. 4—What is to be done with the tons of highly dangerous radioactive "ash" that will be left from fission in atomic reactors when atomic energy is used on a large scale?

Scientists used to think that most of these fission products would have to be stored in underground tanks until most of the activity had died away, or else inclosed in massive concrete containers and sunk into deep and stagnant parts of the ocean. It was even suggested that the only final solution would be to shoot fission products out into space in rockets.

Recently, however, the attitude to fission products has become much more constructive because scientists have been discovering ways of using the radiations given off by fission products in industry, medicine and research.

Food Sterilizing.

Most people have by now heard of the prospects of using radiation to sterilize food. The main snag is that the flavor of the food is often affected, but scientists hope to find ways of avoiding this.

A much more immediate application, already in use in America, is the radiation sterilization of drugs—particularly antibiotics—and of antiseptics and other surgical and pharmaceutical goods. Because many of these products would be damaged by heat sterilization, production has had to proceed under elaborate and expensive antiseptic conditions. Radiation sterilization makes many of these precautions unnecessary and may revolutionize the economics of drug and antibiotic manufacture.

Living tissue can also be sterilized by radiation. Thus sections of arteries and pieces of bone can be treated in this way and used in grafting operations after several months of storage.

Another important potential application is pest control in packing houses, granaries and mills.

Quite a different field of application is exploiting the effect of radiations on various materials such as plastics and rubber. Irradiated polythene, for instance, is much more heat-resistant and can be used for insulating electric cables which work at temperatures well above the melting point of normal polythene.

Germanium transistors — minute radio valve substitutes which are playing an increasingly important part in radio and electronic engineering—can work at much higher speeds after irradiation.

The performance of many catalysts used in large-scale industrial processes may be improved by irradiation—this is a field in which there is wide scope for new discoveries.

Chemical Processes.

One of the most exciting potential uses for fission products arises from the effect of radiation on various industrial chemical processes. Many important chemical reactions in these processes will normally take place only at high temperatures and pressures, and this naturally makes the process very expensive.

However, by using powerful gamma radiation from fission products, many of these reactions may be made to take place at much lower temperatures and pressures, thus making the process—and hence the product—much cheaper. This may soon be done in the manufacture of certain insecticides and plastics.

Finally, there is an enormous industrial field of application of various radioactive substances for testing materials and products and keeping a check on all kinds of processes. Many of these applications are already familiar, depending on the ability of radiation to penetrate most solid substances.

SMILES OF HEALTH CONTEST FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN HERE

A smiles of health contest for St. Louis area school children will be held as part of Children's Dental Health Week, today through Saturday, it was announced yesterday. The contest, in which participants will be nominated by practicing members of the St. Louis Dental Society, will continue through June 1.

Four finalists will be chosen from each of the four districts of the society. The four first place winners will receive a $200 United States savings bond, and the 12 others will each receive a $25 bond. Winners will be announced at the Centennial Mid-continent Dental Congress Nov. 25-28.

A panel discussion will be held at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Congress Hotel on "Should children be excused from school for dental appointments?" Speakers will include Miss Mabel E. Boss, principal at Ashland School; Miss Ruth Harris, teacher at the school, Dr. Alexander E. Murphy, director of dental health for the Board of Education, and Dr. John J. Purcell, dentist.

COLBY PRESIDENT TO TALK

Dr. J. S. Bixler, president of Colby College, Waterville, Me., will speak here to alumni of that school tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the east dining room of the University Club. About 25 graduates of Colby in the St. Louis area are expected to be present.

PRINCIPAL TO GIVE SPEECH FOR TEACHER RECRUITMENT

Miss Julia B. Schmidt, principal of the Blow and Maddox elementary schools, tomorrow will give one of a series of talks to women's organizations, as part of the Board of Education's new teacher recruitment program.

Miss Schmidt will speak to the St. Louis Ladies' Florists Club at the Gatesworth Hotel at 1:30 p.m.

The new program is intended primarily to interest women who have liberal arts college degrees in obtaining certificates to teach in city public schools. The campaign has included advertisements in newspapers and on radio stations, said to be the first such appeals made by a large school system.

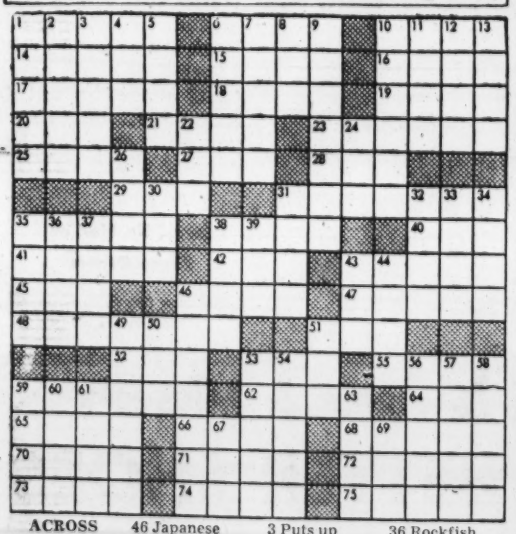

DEFENDANTS' NEW ADDRESS

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Eberenz, who were named defendants last Wednesday in a $125,000 suit resulting from alleged damage to a house in Overland that they sold last summer, no longer live at 1608 North Warson road, Creve Coeur, the Post-Dispatch was informed yesterday by Oliver W. Eberle, the present resident at that address.

The North Warson address was given in directions to the sheriff for service of the summons. Eberle said he bought the Creve Coeur home from Eberenz last April. Eberenz said he is now living at 2313 Wengler avenue, Overland.

NEW INDORSEMENTS OF MALINE BONDS

14 Groups Back Sewer Issue to Be Voted On Tuesday.

Fourteen additional communities and neighborhood organizations have indorsed the $1,700,000 Maline Creek sewer bond issue to be submitted to the voters of the watershed in a special election Tuesday.

The bond issue would finance construction of a six-mile trunk sewer to serve 100,000 persons in a 25-square-mile area of north St. Louis county.

Albert B. DuRocher, chairman of the citizens' committee for the bond issue, said the latest indorsements of the project have come from the board of trustees of the Normandy Sanitary Sewer District, the village of Bel-Ridge, the municipal government of Bellefontaine Neighbors, Normandy Heights Neighbors Association, Ferguson Rotary Club, Cool Valley Parent-Teacher Association, Margona Village city council, Arthur Williams Post No. 161 of the American Legion, Oakwood Improvement Association, Ferguson Lions Club, Lee-Hamilton P.-T.A. and the P.-T.A.s of Central, Griffith and Vogt schools.

These groups adopted a resolution terming the raw sewage in the creek "a menace to the health and welfare of families and firms doing business in the Maline Creek sub-district."

Pollution in the creek is "the No. 1 public health problem in St. Louis county," Health Commissioner Herbert Domke has stated.

Citizens' committee speakers have intensified the campaign for the bond issue during the last week. The fact that a two-thirds majority is required for approval makes it imperative that every registered voter in the watershed go to the polls, DuRocher said.

Forty-one polling places in Midland, Airport, St. Ferdinand and Normandy townships will be open Tuesday from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

B'NAI B'RITH TO SPONSOR BLOOD BANK TUESDAY

St. Louis B'Nai B'rith will sponsor a blood bank at Temple Israel, 5017 Washington boulevard, Tuesday from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. in co-operation with the St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross.

Both the men's and women's councils of B'nai B'rith have been told by the Red Cross that supplies of blood and blood plasma have been virtually exhausted due to continuous and excessive demand, it was said.

VALLEY ASSOCIATION TO MEET TOMORROW

Missouri Group Will Hear Howard Pyle, White House Aid.

Howard Pyle, a deputy assistant to President Eisenhower, will address delegates to the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Mississippi Valley Association tomorrow night at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson, it was announced yesterday.

More than 1000 persons from states in the Midwest and South are expected to attend the two-day meeting, which opens tomorrow at the hotel.

The association, in which groups interested in navigation and flood control are strongly represented, also will hear talks by United States Representative Frank E. Smith (Dem.), Mississippi; Brig. Gen. W. E. Potter, Missouri river division engineer for the Army Corps of Engineers, and William J. Hull, vice chairman of the National Waterways Conference.

Pyle, a former Republican governor of Arizona, will speak at the association banquet at 7 p.m. tomorrow. Gen. Potter and Smith will speak at a morning session tomorrow and Hull will speak at an afternoon meeting.

On Tuesday, the speakers will be Clarence F. Byrns, a newspaper man of Fort Smith, Ark.; Alexander Purdon, executive director of the Committee of American Steamship Lines, and Karl Dixon, a writer on water pollution problems.

Topics which will come under discussion at the convention include the Hoover Commission proposal to levy tolls on inland waterways, to which the association is opposed, and federal appropriations for navigation and flood control projects.

As in previous years, several other related groups will hold meetings here in conjunction with the convention.

These include the Propeller Club of St. Louis, which will meet at noon tomorrow, and the Missisippi River Parkway Commission and the American Waterways Operators, Inc., both of which will meet Tuesday.

St. Louis Builders' Annual Home Show Opened at Arena for Week's Run

Gardner Agency Expands

The Gardner Advertising Company of St. Louis reported last week the signing of a $1,350,000 ten-year lease and plans for a $240,000 modernization program for its offices in the Syndicate Trust Building, 915 Olive street.

The advertising agency will increase its space by 40 per cent and will occupy the entire fourteenth and fifteenth floors of the downtown office building in which it has occupied quarters since 1941. Gardner now occupies 30,000 square feet of space on four separate floors of the building. The new lease provides for 42,500 square feet, all but 2500 square feet of which will be on the fourteenth and fifteenth floors. It also gives Gardner an option on additional space as needed to accommodate its expanding staff and special service departments.

Gardner Advertising Company, founded in 1902, also has offices in New York and Hollywood. Its St. Louis home office handles the largest amount of advertising of any advertising agency headquarters west of the Mississippi.

Faith in Downtown.

"The trend for modern advertising agencies to provide many special services for clients —such as marketing, research, and merchandising facilities— made it imperative for us to have additional space," said Charles E. Claggett, President of Gardner Advertising Company. "Our total business has also increased throughout the agency's 54-year history, to the point where last year billings exceeded $20,000,000, requiring both additional staff and more space.

"Our decision to remain in the Syndicate Trust Building is based on our faith in the future growth of downtown St. Louis. It also underscores the importance of such civic campaigns as the successful $110,000,000 municipal improvement bond issue of last year. In fact, Gardner personnel prepared advertising and promotional copy for this historic campaign. We also took a creative role in the advertising program which helped to put over the first United Fund drive last fall."

The company employs more than 220 staff members, and has an annual payroll of $1,750,000. Over $2,000,000 in business was placed last year through St. Louis photographic and art studios, typographical and printing plants, and other suppliers.

Complete Renovation.

Floor plans calling for complete renovation of the Gardner office quarters have been developed by vice president Rudolf Czuffin, the agency's art director. Plans provide for more and larger client and company conference rooms, in addition to specially designed rooms created to meet needs of the agency's growing special services.

One room will be constructed as a facsimile of a super market section, for display and comparison of Gardner-designed merchandisinz and packaging materials with competitive products. A similar room will have a tavern backbar for comparison of beer display and marketing materials developed at Gardner.

Because of the greatly expanded television production at Gardner, two special viewing rooms will be constructed for showing of commercials and other material developed for such programs as the George Gobel and Red Skelton network shows.

One will seat 75 persons for lectures, meetings, and films, while the other will be a working screen room. A single "two-way" projection booth will serve both rooms. Gardner develops its TV and radio material in St. Louis and final production is performed in New York or Los Angeles, where agency staff personnel are stationed.

Rooms for Staff.

The plans also call for a private dining room, for the convenience of Gardner staff members and clients. It will have a kitchen, staffed by a full-time cook. This will be separate from the Gardner Home Economics Department, which itself has three complete kitchens, and a staff of home economists who develop recipes, test them in the department and through the 2000-member nation-wide Gardner's Homemakers' panel, and serve Gardner food clients in other ways.

Also contributing to the space-need at Gardner in the past several years has been the growth of the agency's Farm Account Group, which now has nine regional account executives who handle client advertising-marketing programs all over the nation. Special floor-plan arrangements are also being provided for the agency's modern tabulating machine installation which permits "automation" in the handling of both internal accounting and complicated publication schedules for nation-wide advertising programs.

Shape of the building itself permits carefully designed floor plans providing a maximum of outside offices. In addition the two floors will be connected by a new circular stairway, integrated into the center of the building, and supplementing existing stairways.

Negotiations for lease of the new quarters were completed on behalf of the Syndicate

Instructors and Students Look Over Model Subdivision Prepared for Home Show Display

School of Architecture students at Washington University who won prizes totaling $750 in the Home Bildors Architectural Competition, together with competition directors, look over model subdivisions prepared for display during home show this week. From the left, Eric W. Smith Jr., architect and design critic at the school; Chairman Julius A. Seidel of the Bildors Scholarship Committee, and the top five contestants: Samuel I. Dardick, who won first place and $250; Gerrold Myers, second; Ted Christner, third; Harold Dean Smith, fifth, and James F. Selvaggi, fourth. Awards will be presented to the winners at the show, where the 13 competing scale model houses form a spotlighted display in the Bildor Center.

Visitors Can Watch Walls Go Up, Visit Finished Homes, Too

More Than 100 Exhibitors Have Booths in Main Show Building Chock Full of Ideas on How to Make Homes and Life More Easy and Gracious for City, Suburbs, Farm.

By VIRGIL G. BAKER
Post-Dispatch Real Estate Editor.

Following a warm-up run yesterday afternoon, the annual Bildors' Home Show will open full throttle this afternoon at the Arena for a full week of presentations to St. Louis and St. Louis trade area visitors seeking to learn the latest trends in home building design, materials, procedure, decor and furnishings, and landscaping.

It is the only home show that has been scheduled for the St. Louis area so far this year and thus is expected to attract greater crowds than ever all through the week.

Sponsored by the Home Builders' Association of Greater St. Louis and their associates in the materials, equipment, supplies, furnishing and landscaping businesses, the show presents more than 100 separate displays under the main roof at the Arena, two full-sized homes on the Arena lawn. At one of the homes bathing beauties will be an added attraction all week, playing in warmed water in a fiberglass pool inside a heated shelter.

Easy Traffic Pattern.

Entrance to the show is graced by a "family-style" garden, all across the Arena lobby, and inside, the displays this year are more colorful, more eye and interest catching than they've been in the last 10 years or more since shows were resumed after the end of World War II.

The more than 100 exhibitors represented in the mammoth building show materials, fixtures, equipment, appliances, built-ins, furniture and furnishings in many categories. Despite the profusion of displays, an easy traffic pattern makes possible a complete tour of the show without fatigue. In case a break is desired, however, part of the Bildor Center has been set aside as a visitors' lounge.

But the urge to linger in the Bildor Center is likely to be prompted by more than the lounge. The Arena's large east room has been transformed into one of the most attractive spots of the exposition, with several drawing cards of its own. It is here the evolution of St. Louis homes is shown, the model subdivision in the $750 contest for architecture students is displayed, and the Bildors Book of Homes is given away.

Spanning Centuries.

Nearly two centuries are spanned by the dwellings depicted on illuminated color panels along the west wall. From the tiny stone and log houses of the city's first days, the display sweeps graphically to the ranch house and contemporary styles currently in vogue. In between are shown high spots of the changes and development.

This year's architectural competition, in charge of Chairman Julius A. Seidel's committee, posed some difficult problems for the Washington University aspirants who entered. A home had to be designed for a specific lot on a hilly tract and at the same time made adaptable to two other sites calling for different conditions. The versatility required is emphasized by the fact that it was stipulated the residence must be buildable as a one-story, split-level or two-story house.

How well the students met the challenge is revealed by the 13 scale models that make up the model subdivision at the show. After intensive preliminary work, the winner, Samuel I. Dardick, required a week to make his model.

Represented in the 44-page Book of Homes are houses and subdivisions of 41 Bildors, who have staff members on hand to furnish any additional details interested visitors may wish.

Lehman C. DeMoss edited the book.

Watch Walls Grow.

Prospective builders have an opportunity to see how walls go up and are finished and the way various materials enter into the makeup of a home in the diverse exhibits of the industry groups. Booths are manned by the St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Industry Council, Inc., of which Albert H. Meinert is executive director; Unit Masonry Association, representing the combined masonry industry, with Don Wakefield in charge; Portland Cement Association, under District Engineer Carl Chappell and Office Engineer R. A. Wood; Clay Tile Industry, whose display is handled by John J. Nally, and the Carpenters District Council of St. Louis, under Secretary-Treasurer E. C. Meinert.

Another contest for School of Architecture students resulted in the design for the masonry group's display. Carrying out the student theme, apprentice bricklayers keep busy during show hours building various types of walls. Other masonry features also were set up by apprentices.

The lathers and plasterers have an animated booth, with four to six persons on duty demonstrating the merits of lath and plaster.

Many Develop Show.

Cooking schools and the newest in automatic gas ranges attract crowds to the Laclede Gas exhibit, and Union Electric's All-Electric Village and Mechanical Man are similarly

S. I. Dardick Wins Bildor Plan Award

First place in the Home Builders Architectural Competition, open to fourth-year architecture students at Washington University, has been won by Samuel I. Dardick, 22, of 7939 Stanford avenue, University City. With the honor goes top award of $250.

The 13 scale model homes made by contestants, assembled in a typical subdivision, are a feature display at the Arena Home Show in the Bildor Center.

Runner-up in the competition and winner of $200 was Gerrold Meyers, 21, of 7059 Dover Ct., University City. The panel of six jurors awarded third place and $150 to Ted

Bronx Cheer Suggested For Too-Dry Year, but Gardeners Learn Lesson

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

Someone should coin a name for an Oscar-in-reverse, a sort of "raspberry" indicating extreme disapproval. If I could think of anything sufficiently disparaging, I'd like to award it to the last (but unlamented) gardening year, January to December 1955, inclusive.

As a matter of fact, 1956 can claim no auspicious start, but recent heavy snows have now brought some life-saving moisture. There are even predictions of cooler and wetter than normal weather for the coming spring and summer. Although we can be grateful for this fine moisture, it has come a bit late.

It was even more unfortunate that this winter drouth had to follow three summer drouths and three years of deficient rainfall. Trees and shrubs, already weakened by starvation, were very susceptible to winter injuries. It is still too early to estimate the full extent of the damage, but many conifers and broad-leaved evergreens are showing noticeable winter burns.

Cheap Planting Costly.

At any rate, we can derive some valuable lessons from the sad experience of the past year. First, of course, is the fact that cheap planting is the most costly in the long run. We'll have to admit the truth of the old saying that it's best to "put a 50-cent plant in a five-dollar hole."

The average gardener understandably prefers putting money into plants rather than into soil improvement. It would surely pay, though, to follow the advice of a famed landscape architect: For every dollar spent on plants and planting, at least 30 cents ought to be invested in soil building—for humus, peat, lime (if needed), manure, extra-depth plowing,

Halls Ferry Stores Plan Is Presented

Plans to construct 10 air-conditioned one-story stores in a single building at Halls Ferry and Chambers roads was reported last week when the Halls Ferry Investment Co. took title to property fronting 240 feet on Chambers and 230 feet on Halls Ferry there.

S. G. Duke is president of Halls Ferry Investment Co., Glenn P. Boehm vice president and treasurer, and Joseph F. Murphy, secretary. Duke-Young, Inc., Samuel G. Duke's real estate company, will contract for construction of the building and will manage it after it is erected. Leasing procedures now are in progress, Duke reported.

Proposed is a structure of new design, called neo-functional, with roof cantilevered from the back, and with the fronts serrated (saw-toothed) from the front building line as the building rises up a slight slope from one end to the other.

Serrations are to mark 20-foot wide bays, each of which may become an individual store,

Outlook for New Homes In '56 Seems Improved

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UP)—The general outlook for home building this year has improved.

This has followed Government action to ease up on home mortgage credit.

Officials of the home building industry expect at least one further credit-easing move — probably in late March. That will be restoration by the Veterans Administration of the no-down-payment guaranteed mortgage and a return to five per cent down by the Federal Housing Administration.

Both agencies last month, after watching new housing starts go down steadily since July when they boosted down payment requirements by two points and shortened repayment periods to 25 years, restored their 30-year mortgages.

Savings Up.

The National Association of Home Builders sticks to its earlier estimates that about 100,000 fewer starts will be made this year than last, when work was begun on 1,300,000 new dwelling units.

N.A.H.B. officials, however, admit that even the lower, approximately 1,200,000 units they expect to go up this year, will keep builders busy.

Complete figures are not yet available, but officials, in and out of Government, believe the savings picture improved somewhat late in 1955.

The United States Savings & Loan League reports that its 4200 members found net additions to savings went up about $800,000,000 during the fourth quarter, compared with a $720,000,000 rise in the same three months of 1954.

Cole Revises Count.

Savings and loan institutions do about 38 per cent of the home mortgage lending. The League reports its members expect to have about $11 billion available for home mortgages this year, about the same as 1955's record.

Albert M. Cole, head of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, in a speech, revised upward his earlier "unjustifiably pessimistic" forecast and put starts this year at about 1,300,000—around the same level as 1955.

Another factor that industry

Groups Join To Present Specialties

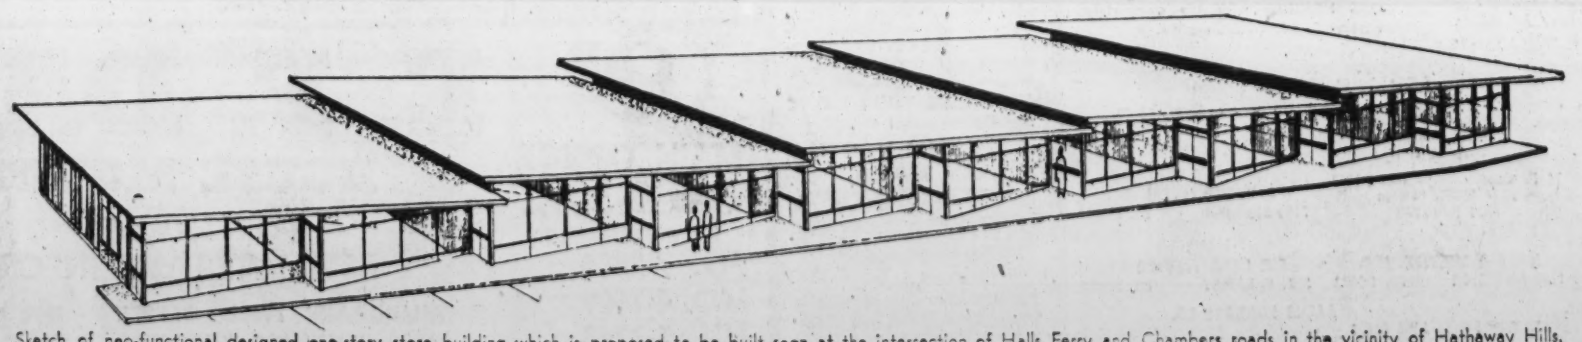

A highlight of the Bildors Home Show opened yesterday at the Arena is the show-within-a-show being presented by several of the industry groups to show prospective builders the advantages of various materials and the most efficient and economical means of using them. Segments of industry represented with booths include the Unit Masonry Association, St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Industry Council, Inc., Portland Cement Association, Clay Tile Industry and the Carpenters District Council of St. Louis.

Animation marks the Unit Masonry display, where apprentice bricklayers will construct typical wall sections all week to demonstrate characteristics of solid brick, brick and block, brick veneer, cavity and other kinds of masonry walls.

Plans for the booth were selected in a contest for seniors at Washington University's School of Architecture, which led the sponsors of the exhibit

Deed Filing Up Sharply In County

The filing of deeds in St. Louis county in 1955 showed a sharp increase over 1954, a recapitulation by Recorder of Deeds Gerald J. Donworth shows. Filing totaled 77,748 in 1955, and in 1954 the figure was 69,266, Donworth said. The increase is 8482, or 12.25 per cent.

Total receipts of the recorder's office in 1955 were $401,043.34, compared to $355,755.21 in 1954, an increase of $45,288.13, the report showed.

Donworth said not only in the recording of deeds, but in almost every department of the recording operation, the increase prevailed. The office finished the year with a balance of $127,932.67 above expenses, he reported.

Ginocchio Moves

Anthony Ginocchio, real estate broker doing business as the Federal Realty Co., has moved his office from 6233 Delmar boulevard to new quarters nearly twice the size of the old at 6718 West Florissant avenue, he reports. Ginocchio has been active in real estate, particularly the handling of residential properties, in northwest county areas, for 10 years. In the new location he will do general brokerage, loans and insurance service.

officials concede will help relieve some of the shortage of money is the action by the Federal National Mortgage Association which adopted a repurchase program.

Under this, holders of acceptable FHA and VA backed mortgages may sell them to "Fanny May" at an agreed upon price and buy them back again at the same price within nine months.

The advantage here will allow such holders to use their funds while they find a permanent, long term investor to buy the mortgages at terms which may be more favorable than earlier available.

Despite the apparently improved situation, builders still feel 1956 will be a "hard year," an N.A.H.B. official said, "with rising costs on one side and fewer buyers on the other.

However, industry officials generally feel that steps taken to ease credit and those they expect to come may exert a beneficial, psychological stimulus to the prospective home buyer this year.

to adopt the descriptive phrase "designed, built and manned by students." All the work is the effort of apprentices of the Bricklayers Union, Local No. 1.

Masonry Industry Combines.

Aims of the competition, to show the most effective use of masonry materials available in this area, are carried out in the booth. Brick patio floors, a fireplace, glass block window, brick partitions and display panels of many products around the working area are shown.

The combined masonry industry of St. Louis united in the presentation. Representatives include manufacturers of brick, glazed tile, concrete and glass blocks, stone suppliers, the Mason Contractors' Association and the Bricklayers Union.

A staff of four to six persons will be on duty in the lathers' and plasterers' booth, giving educational demonstrations of the advantages of their specialty. Three groups are taking part, the St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Contractors, AFL Lathers District Council of Greater St. Louis and AFL Plasterers Union Local No. 3.

Builds Part House.

Beauty and versatility as well as the utilitarian value of lath and plaster are brought out. Such usually overlooked uses as cornices, medallions and telephone booths receive emphasis, along with permanence, fireproofing and sound-deadening qualities. All stages from start to finish are shown, as are various types of metal and wood lathing.

Part of a concrete house on its lot, with patio and garden walls, has been built by the Portland Cement Association. Window and doorway details are visible, with flat, projecting roof. The 12-by-20-foot concrete masonry patio is paved with blocks in variegated colors, greens, reds, browns and pastel shades predominating.

On either side are colorful walls of concrete units, with hanging flowers and ferns. Color trends are brought out forcefully in conjunction with the demonstration of the versatility of concrete.

Contractors, manufacturers and distributors joined with the Tile and Marble Layers Union Local No. 18 in the Clay Tile Industry's exhibit.

The carpenters' booth is designed to convey a message of good will as well as fill an instructive role. The District Council is an affiliate of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

Plan Award

Christner, 21, of Quincy, Ill. James F. Selvaggi, 21, 6316 Wydown boulevard, Clayton, was fourth and won $100, while the entry of Harold Dean Smith, 21, 2035 Knox avenue, was adjudged fifth, qualifying for the $50 award.

Prizes will be presented to the five winners during the show. Results of the judging were made known by Eric W. Smith Jr., architect and design critic at the university.

Conditions of originality and practicality were best met by the design of Dardick, according to Julius A. Seidel, head of the committee in charge of the contest. Commenting on the general excellence of the entries, he said Dardick's plans had the advantage of being superior from the builder's standpoint.

Rules of the contest, while flexible within prescribed limits, called for a high degree of ingenuity on the part of students. Each had to design a home for an assigned lot on a rolling, uneven tract of land. But as a test of adaptability "to almost any reasonable site condition" it had to be suited for two other site conditions. This called for a structure buildable as a one-story, split-level or two-story house.

The judges warmly commended the manner in which contestants met the problems. It took a lot of preliminary study, Dardick conceded, and after he had settled on his plans, making the scale model home required a week.

Jury members were Architects Robert Elkington, Fred Kemp and Samuel Ladd; Clarence T. Wilson, Bildor; Lawrence J. Steffens, chief architect of the FHA St. Louis office, and Arthur J. Kerr of the Veterans Administration.

Institute Plans Quality Controls On Steel Joists

For the first time in construction history, an association of structural materials manufacturers has adopted a program for control of the quality of standardized products manufactured by its members.

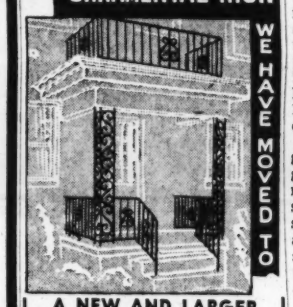

The Steel Joist Institute, whose membership comprises the major companies producing open-web steel joists, reports that it has arranged to conduct periodic unscheduled inspections of its members' plants to determine conformity of manufactured products to standards and specification established by the Institute.

Under the program, joists are to be selected at random from the production lines. Measurements are to be made for dimensional tolerance, panel spacing, eccentricity of joints and alignment of bearing members. The component parts of these joists are to be measured to determine compliance with the approved design. Tests to destruction on joists will determine the strength of the welds, while tension tests of the individual component parts will determine the quality of the steel.

Test reports will be used by the institute and its technical committee to police the manufacturing practice of institute member companies to assure specifying authorities and ultimate users of the product that the fabrication of steel joists by member companies is maintained in full conformity with the rigid standards of the Steel Joist Institute.

With this added evidence of fabrication quality on file with the Steel Joist Institute, a member company may identify its product as: "Approved by the Steel Joist Institute."

Specialty House Moves, Expands

George B. Koors Jr. (standing, center) and Jack Brandle, president and vice president respectively of E. W. Heun Co, look over a new pressure viscolizer which has been installed in their newly acquired office and productions laboratory at 1629 Washington avenue. So what's a viscolizer? It does the same thing to certain drugs and the stuff they are mixed into as the dairies do to milk and cream when they homogenize them, mixes them completely and thoroughly and fixes them so they won't come apart again.

Specialty House Expands, Locates On Washington Av.

A St. Louis pharmaceutical specialty house has relocated in the midst of the city's garment and shoe area. The firm is the E. W. Heun Co., 1629 Washington avenue, formerly located at 2122 Pine street.

Officers of the company, George B. Koors Jr. and Jack Brandle, president and vice president respectively, report completion of an expansion program which has tripled the manufacturing area of the firm, increased production and doubled employment.

Installed at the company's new location, is new high speed manufacturing and packaging equipment for pharmaceutical production in large volume.

Koors said the firm has added new, highly trained personnel in the manufacturing and packaging departments and also has retained all of the experienced persons indentified with the E. W. Heun Co. for many years. In new quarters the firm uses 15,000 square feet on two floors, employs 22 persons.

Explaining the company's growth from a local and regional operation to a firm with nation-wide distribution, Koors said: "Our products are highly specialized. We have stayed away from the manufacture of standard items, have sold only to distributors for their own private labels."

New Slenderizing Salon Takes Space In Time Building

The sixth floor of the Time Building, 1134 Locust street, has been leased for establishment of a unit of the Alvin Roy Slenderizing Salon, a chain operated throughout the United States, Byron Moser, manager of the building, reports.

John Klute, owner and operator of Patricia Stevens Finishing School and Models Agency, located on the eighth floor of the Time Building, will own and direct the new St. Louis Alvin Roy Salon.

The Patricia Stevens organization has operations in 32 cities.

Klute also owns and directs Patricia Stevens Schools in Atlanta, Memphis and Denver and is currently opening a new school in San Diego, Calif.

The nine-story Time Building is now 96 per cent occupied. The building is air conditioned, with the exception of the fifth floor. More than $450,000 has been spent in recent years in converting the building from a store into an up-to-date office building.

"The Time Building is a good example of what can be done by spending money for modern improvements," Moser declares. "Twelfth and Locust has become one of the outstanding locations in downtown St. Louis."

Director Named

James L. Scott, president of the James L. Scott Corp., a real estate, building and insurance agency at 1608 Big Bend boulevard, Richmond Heights, has been named a director on the board of the Peoples State Bank of Maplewood, 7170 Manchester, the bank's president, William J. Westphale, reports.

Scott succeeds Henry Baalmann, who has retired because of ill health. Scott has been real estate consultant to the bank since last April. He is a member of the Mortgage Bankers' Association, the St. Louis County Real Estate Board, the Home Builders' Association and the Insurance Board, and is a certified appraiser. He also is president of the Richmond Heights Loan & Investment Co., Inc., a realty financing firm. He came to this area in 1930 as engineer with the Commerce Department of the Federal Government, organized his own companies in 1945 and 1946. Married, father of two, he resides at 7303 Lindbergh dr., Richmond Heights.

Wide Variety Available.

Shower equipment is available in a wide variety for every requirement in shower cabinets and over the bathtub, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

LIGHT FLOOR PREFERRED

A light-toned playing floor is important for sports. A recent survey of 300 basketball coaches conducted by the Maple Flooring Manufacturers Association, showed unanimous preference for maple floors with regard to resiliency, fewer floor burns and shin-splints, general safety of the player and light reflection.

Bought by New York Investors

This is the 10-story Cotton Belt Building, 111 North Fourth street, acquired last week from a local syndicate by the Winter-New York Corporation, of which Marvin S. Winter is head. Financing of $1,500,000, in two deeds of trust, was arranged by Morris F. Sluosky, of Clayton. Both St. Louis and New York real estate dealers and lawyers were active in negotiations which were closed at the offices of the Lawyers Title Co. here. The building has been managed for years and will continue to be managed by Charles H. Christel of Rodemyer-Christel & Co., which has offices in the building.

New Yorker Confident Of St. Louis

With financing of $1,500,000 in two deeds of trust, one for $1,100,000 and another for $400,000, and with equity capital in excess of half a million dollars, the 10-story Cotton Belt Building, 111 North Fourth street, has been acquired by the Winter New York Corporation, headed by Marvin S. Winter. The purchaser is a widely known New York investor and management agent.

The deal was closed last mid-week at the office of the Laeyer's Title Co. here, and reported in the daily Post-Dispatch, ending about a year of negotiations. The financing was conclusively arranged by Morris F. Slupsky of Clayton last November while he was in New York for the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Winter was quoted by Slupsky and by Charles H. Christel of Rodemyer-Christel & Co., the building's management agency, as saying that his investment here is confirmation of his "confidence in continued growth of the St. Louis downtown area." Christel has managed the property 18 years, will continue in that capacity for Winter.

The building has more than 180,000 square feet of rentable floor area. It fronts 230 feet on Fourth street, 135 feet on Chestnut and Pine (that's half a city block).

O. J. Brichler of Clayton was agent for a St. Louis syndicate consisting of St. Louisans, Louis and Morris Steinbaum, Martin Larner, Louis Diener, David Shepley, Ben Poslosky, which sold the building. William White & Sons of New York and Leo Zipkin of New York were Winter's agents. Legal details were handled by Harold Bamburg of Jones, Hocker, Gladney & Grand and Sam Kessler of St. Louis for the sellers, and by Naftalie Lefowitz of St. Louis and Mitchell Siegel of New York for Winter.

The building houses a number of large space users, including Gaylor Container Corporation, U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., certain offices of the Cotton Belt Railway (after which it is named), Bemis Brothers Bag Co., a regional office of the United States Post Office, the New York Central, Illinois Central and B. & O. railroads.

Approved by F.H.A.

Houses built of fir plywood, and properly constructed, meet FHA requirements.

One Percent Rate

The rapid rate of home construction in St. Louis County is currently amounting to approximately 1 per cent of the national total, recent figures show. The population of the County, however, is only one third of 1 per cent of the nation.

363 Gallons Each

During the year 1955, the County Water Company pumped an average of 132,000 gallons of water per customer. This amounts to 363 gallons per customer for each customer every day of the year.

Sohio Offices to Clayton Building From Downtown

The Sohio Petroleum Co. and Sohio Pipe Line Co. have moved their offices from downtown St. Louis to the second floor of the recently constructed Glick Building in Clayton.

The Sohio organizations occupy almost 25,000 square feet for general office purposes and have about 150 employes in the four departments involved. The departments that are located in Clayton include crude oil purchasing, transportation, accounting and purchasing.

The Clayton office serves as the operating headquarters for the purchasing of crude oil and the transportation of crude oil and petroleum products. The combined activities directed from this office cover operations of the two companies in some 15 states.

The new Glick Building is located directly across the street from Famous-Barr Co.'s Clayton department store. The ground floor of the Glick Building is occupied by various commercial retail shops.

Sohio's office space includes movable metal partitions, acoustical ceiling, recessed flourescent lighting, and year-round air-conditioning.

Latest types of shower heads reflect the trend in the plumbing industry toward economy in water consumption. New shower heads take less water while providing a zestful and stimulating bath, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

Panels No Luxury

You don't have to be a millionaire to enjoy fine wood paneling in your home. It's a luxury but not in the sense that it's expensive. When you consider original cost plus maintenance expense, wood paneling is one of the most inexpensive type of wall covering, the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association points out.

The luxury of wood paneling comes from the distinction it adds to a home interior, from the fact that it's adaptable to any style of architecture, and from the interesting effects created by different texture, grain and color patterns in the wood.

AIR SYSTEM WALL sets a new standard
In Heating-Cooling Comfort for the American Home!

Gone is the monster in the cellar that huffs and puffs and belches stifling blasts through a hole in your floor. There had to be a better system—and General Electric engineered it! A magic wrap-around wall of conditioned air—warmed in winter, cooled in summer. This wonderful system is called AIR-WALL.

Furnace and cooling units stand side by side and both operate through a system of small ducts and specially designed registers placed low on the walls. From these registers conditioned air fans out—warm in winter and cool in summer—up the wall, along the ceiling, other walls and back along the floor. Before you know it, every nook and cranny is made comfortable! No drafts—no wracking chills!

And, this special G-E system minimizes dust and dusting—the source of many allergies—because AIR-WALL filters the air. This new idea in heating and cooling comfort will truly amaze you. Make it a must in your home. Act today! AIR-WALL can be installed in new or old homes. For details, price, easy payments and other information, call your General Electric Home Heating and Cooling Headquarters today.

Idea Booth For Owners In the Show

Owners of older dwellings will find many exhibits at the Bildors Arena Home Show where they can get ideas, and one booth is devoted solely to the problems of rehabilitation. It is sponsored by the Bildors' Housing Research Committee, headed by Chairman Earl Bumiller.

Aid to owners planning to improve, remodel, rebuild or otherwise augment the value and comfort of their property is the objective.

The stake of members of the Home Builders Association in rehabilitation, whether it be in reconstruction from the ground up, making additions or minor changes, was cited by Bumiller.

"There is a huge market for our industry in this field," he said. "We of the committee are trying to help those owners interested in rehabilitation by showing them what has been and what can be done to restore livability, modernize living units and improve property generally."

The City of St. Louis is cooperating in manning the booth. Housing improvements being made in the Hyde Park and Cherokee pilot areas are shown in large transparencies and explained by representatives of the city's Housing Rehabilitation Department. Progress is shown in "before" and "after" photos.

Other steps taken by the city to improve living conditions and enforce standards are portrayed. The proportion of dwelling units needing conservation and reconstruction is indicated by displays. An eye-opening exhibit for many is a chart comparing their houses and neighborhoods with public health standards.

Shell Oil Adds Employe Aids

Only a faint line marks joint between eight-year-old section and recently-completed addition for facilities at wash house, near the south gate of the Wood River plant of the Shell Oil Co. Completion of the addition, which accommodates more than 530 employes with individual lockers, shower and toilet facilities, is reported by Vollmar Bros. Construction Co., general contractor.

Washstands, Lockers at Shell

Aisle view of new addition at Shell Wood River Plant shows four Bradley wash stands, each of which can serve eight employes at a time. New metal lockers may be seen in bands at right. Metal ceilings were used to resist high humidity.

Marble-Walled Employe Showers

Three aisles, each lined with showers, enter into the main aisle in shower room at new Shell Oil Wood River employes facility. Total of 36 showers are separated with Carthage marble dividers. A centralized system dispenses liquid soap to all stalls.

Iron Works Moves To Larger Plant On West Papin St.

The Kupferer Bros. Ornamental Iron Works, Inc., formerly at 1805 South Kingshighway, has moved to larger quarters at 4414-18 West Papin street, where all operations may be carried on under one roof. In the old location, operation was scattered in a series of buildings.

The new plant provides 8600 square feet of floor space for fabricating, painting, shipping, and office. There also is improved display space. The property also has parking space for customers' cars.

Kupferer has supplied the wrought iron fence which is used in the "family garden," designed by Landscape Architect Edith Murch, and built into the lobby of the Arena's main building for the home show this week.

Shell Workers Get New Locker And Wash Rooms

New tile finished shower and wash rooms and locker rooms for employes of the Shell Oil Co.'s Wood River plant were completed last week by the Vollmar Bros. Construction Co. of St. Louis. The rooms are housed in an addition to the former locker and wash area, which the new setup will entirely replace.

By building the new facility as an addition to the older building, there was no interference with use of the older equipment while construction went on.

Exterior of the new building is buff brick. The area provides 531 new metal lockers in the main room, four Bradley wash stands (each capable of serving about eight men at a time), 36 individual Carthage marble-walled shower stalls having a central reservoir to dispense liquid soap. Another area of the building contains toilet facilities. Interior wall finish is buff ceramic tile and the floor is in red quarry tile, except that tile having surface impregnated with carborundum to prevent slipping is used on shower and toilet room floors, white mosaic tile in the shower stalls.

or they may be combined into larger units.

Use of the cantilevered roof, from the rear one-third of wall depth, had been planned to give the structure versatility, forward areas being kept clear of supporting columns.

The roof line will be broken into five stages, to take advantage of the slope of the lot.

A paved parking area for 100 cars is planned. Construction is proposed to get under way in early spring.

200 See Live TV On Floor Color

Some 200 or so architects, builders and interior designers attended a closed-circuit live telecast from New York City late Friday afternoon at the Coronado hotel dealing with color and design in floors. The telecast was sponsored by the Producers Council, Inc., as an informational meeting, with the program being presented by the Armstrong Cork Co.

Floor problems and styling were presented by a panel consisting of George Bain Cummings of New York City, president of the American Institute of Architects; Joseph D. Haverstick, president of the National Association of Home Builders; H. Clifford Burroughes, chairman of the board of the American Institute of Interior Decorators; Edmund Claxton, president of the Building Research institute and a director of research for the Armstrong Cork Co.; Harry S. Humphreys, director of design in Armstrong's floor division.

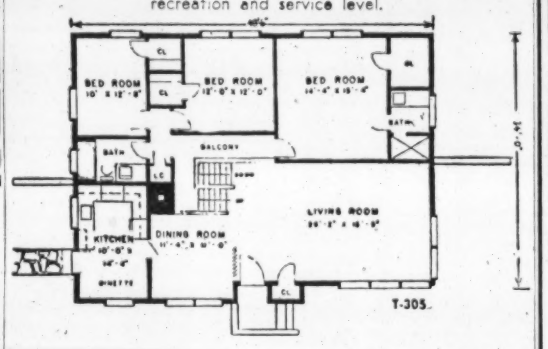

Ranch-Style Split-Level House Has Special Charm

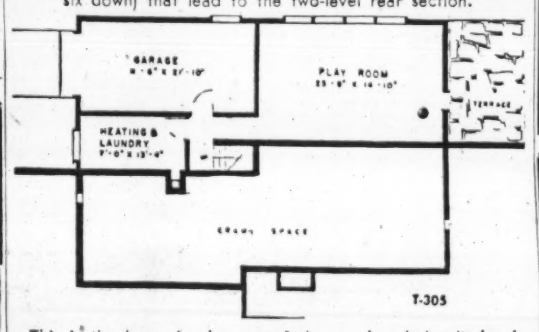

Popular split-level home in a ranch style, may be dressed up with hand-split shakes, a bit of stone trim.

Open planning and high ceiling in living and dining room provide for balcony in background, leading, six steps up, to the bedroom level, and six steps down, to the garage recreation and service level.

This floor plan shows main floor level, in front, and bedroom level above, together with location of steps (six up, six down) that lead to the two-level rear section.

This is the lower level, rear, of the ranch-styled split level home.

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER

A smart way to get more house for your money has been worked out in this new variation of tri-level design. It's a house with a one-story front and a two-story rear. The living room, dining room and kitchen floor is just midway between the two rear stories.

The innovation, shown here in Design T-305, gives you extra rooms economically. A simplified, sweeping roof, similar to the historic saltbox roof, has no jogs or complicated valleys.

This is a house to answer basement-versus-no-basement controversies. It elevates space that might have been used for a basement up to ground level. It makes the garage part of the house instead of a separate building or wing. It gives you a large ground floor playroom opening out on a garden terrace. It provides a laundry that calls for no stair climbing to reach a drying yard.

The house has the advantages of a three-story house without having a full flight of stairs. Its floor levels are separated by only six steps. Yet it has no resemblance to the conventional split-level appearance of a cottage hitched to a two-story neighbor.

Seal Out Moisture.

You enter the house at the living room-dining room-kitchen level. Just half a flight up is a dramatic balcony at the bedroom level. Half a flight down from the living room is the garage entrance and playroom level.

There is no basement as such. A ventilated crawl space separates the living room floor and its joists and insulation from the earth. A seal over the ground in this space keeps out moisture.

Playroom and laundry are built on concrete slabs which can be paved with colonial asphalt tiles. The concrete floor of the garage needs no covering, unless you like deck enamel for appearances and ease of cleaning.

But—and this is something lots of people prefer — your bedrooms are upstairs, even though you have a ranch house front.

Shakes Are Suggested.

The general design of this house is especially attractive. Windows are large and numerous. Caleb Hornbostel and Associates, the architects, suggest a roof of colored asphalt shingles and siding of wood shakes. The heavy hand-split type of shakes, painted white, could be striking.

Center hall convenience is achieved in the plan without actual construction of a hallway. This results in an open merging of living room, dining room and balcony.

Rooms are large throughout the house. The living room measures more than 15 by 26 and has a ceiling rising to a story and a half. The kitchen is large enough for dinette space and is shaped for efficient "U" arrangement of cabinets and equipment. The dining room is screened from the front door by vertical baffles.

Three good-sized bedrooms have walk-in closets. There are two bathrooms, one with a stall shower and both planned for modern vanity type lavatories.

The playroom downstairs is almost as large as the living room and is unbroken by columns. In fact, there are no lally columns in this house. Spans are planned to eliminate the need for such posts.

For economy a fireplace has been omitted, but it would be easy to accommodate one in or near the far corner of the living room with an outside chimney at that end of the house.

Dimensions of this house are 48½ by 34 feet. Allowing driveway and turning space on the garage side and terrace space on the opposite side, this house should fit on a 75-foot lot, depending on local zoning restrictions.

The house covers about 1600 square feet.

A study plan for this home (T-305) may be had for 35c by addressing the building editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Room 602, 1111 Olive street, St. Louis 1, Mo. You can take this study plan to your mortgage lender or builder to get rough estimates of construction costs, after which working blueprints and specification sheets may be had direct from the architect if you decide to use the plan for your home.

Reseed Lawn Now.

To repair a thin lawn, the sooner the seed is sown, the better the chances for success. You don't need to walk until the frost is out of the ground. Reseed right on top of the snow and apply fertilizer now, too.

METHODS SIMPLIFIED

Modern methods of cleaning hardwood floors have been simplified and made quite inexpensive through buffing with steel wool, usually with electrically driven equipment. Smoother floors result. The smoother the floor, the easier to clean. Floor seals can be applied and buffed in with this equipment. Local hardware and material dealer stores usually have the buffing machines on hand on a nominal rental charge basis.

MONITOR

Representing 5 Million Dimes

Side by side in the 200 block of Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, are two recently completed variety stores, one in an entirely new building and one in an extensively remodeled building. Both jobs were done by the Murch-Jarvis Construction Co. The jobs together represent new investment equivalent to five million dimes, the contractor said.

Two Variety Stores Mean Many Dimes

Representing construction costs, totaling five million dimes, two variety stores, Kresge and Woolworth, are newly functioning, side by side in the 200 block of Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, Illinois. They were completed recently by the Murch-Jarvis Construction Company and are reported enjoying a brisk business.

Last summer, Chicago interests owning the old Avenue Theater at 215 Collinsville avenue negotiated a long term lease for a new F. W. Woolwort store building and upon completion of the wrecking of the Avenue Theater, construction crews moved on the site and built an entire new structure which accommodates the new 18,000 square foot Woolworth store and a 3000 square-foot store under long term lease to Mary Jane Shoes of Illinois.

The Woolworth store is provided with full basement for stock room facilities and customers may enter from Collinsville avenue or from the new rear parking lot entrance.

As the new Woolworth project progressed, the Kresge management at 207 Collinsville avenue went into action to modernize its existing store to meet the newly developing competition. A new entrance and store front were added for Kresge, the entire merchandising sales area was renovated, new store conveyors were installed from basement to first floor. The rear of the Kresge building was pushed out and a 3000 square foot area was added to the existing store.

SANDING IS A 'MUST'

Before a finish is applied to maple and other hardwood floors, a minimum sanding job of at least three cuts is a must for satisfactory finish floor appearance. Number 2 or number 2½ sandpaper is required for cutting off high spots and joints. Use number 1 sandpaper for the second cut and number 0 or number 00 sandpaper for the third cut. Reminder: Do all of your sanding with the grain.

Food for Roses With Controlled Release Coming

For many years rose fanciers have shown a marked preference for plant food mixtures containing natural organic materials such as cottonseed meal or tankage. This preference was based on the belief, now disproven, that these organic materials very slowly decomposed in the soil, providing a gradual release of their nutrients, mainly nitrogen. The desirability of gradual nitrogen release for roses, as well as for many other plants, is unquestioned but natural organic materials, once the soil has warmed up, decompose at a rapid rate and exhibit little or no superiority in their plant food release rate from regular chemical sources of nitrogen in plant foods.

Plant food for roses with controlled nutrient release will appear commercially this spring. It will contain nitrogen in four different forms, for varying rates of availability, plus two sources of potash and of phosphorus. In addition to nitrate and ammonia, there are also two types of ureaformaldehyde, one water soluble, the other insoluble. These latter materials constitute replacements for natural organic materials used in specialty rose foods up until this time. The four types of nitrogen provide a degree of extended nutrient availability.

Among the Leaders

To keep pace with the growth of the County, the St. Louis County Water Company installs enough miles of new mains and pipe each year to place the company among the most rapidly expanding water utilities in the nation.

SEALER FILLS PORES

Application of a good penetrating sealer finish on a newly laid hardwood floor will seal the pores of the wood, keep out dirt and resist soil stains. The finish, when applied to northern maple and birch floors, provides a satin-like sheen. For a higher polish, wax may be applied over the sealer finish.

Well Adapted to Climate Here

Raspberry

or the purchase of extra top soil.

The value of a good organic mulch was also demonstrated during last year's capricious weather. For example, last spring's "deep freeze" came before we had been able to renew the mulch on all of our plant beds. A day or so later it was possible to identify the unmulched plants by the injuries to the foliage.

Similarly, when young magnolias and pyracanthas were watered well and mulched heavily at planting time last fall, they came through the winter drouth in good shape. In contrast, groups of broad-leaved evergreens that were struggling along without a mulch now show serious winter burn.

Plants Meet Tests.

It is from bad weather, too, that we can learn a lot about the hardiness of plants. We'll surely give a high rating to such reliable broad-leaved evergreens as American holly, pyracantha lalandi, Berberry julia-na, and Euonymus radicans. On the other hand, Pieris japonica has been disappointing. Yet I wouldn't exclude this beautiful shrub, provided that it can be given careful planting in a favorable, somewhat sheltered location.

Not only does our harsh climate tend to dictate "what" and "how" we should plant our gardens, but it even influences the actual design. In particular, it suggests the wisdom of making informal, naturalistic plantings.

Thanks to our climate, it is difficult to grow beautifully matching pairs of trees or shrubs. It is a real chore to keep two growing at about the same rate. Almost inevitably one yew or boxwood or juniper will outgrow its "twin."

Accent Plants Lost.

All too frequently a part of one plant will suffer from winter burn or die-back. Worse still, one tree or shrub may either die or lose so much wood that it is virtually useless. In one garden in this area more than a dozen tree wisterias, planted as accents, were lost in a single winter. It is surely much safer to make an asymetrical planting and work for "balance" with groupings of plants, instead of single specimens.

So, also, there is more risk in trying to grow long stretches of neatly sheared hedges. Even the hardiest hedge plants will make uneven growth in our unpredictable seasons. Moreover, the loss (or serious injury) of even one or two plants can spoil the effect of the whole hedge.

Close clipping or shearing may actually be very injurious to plants that have a small "margin of safety" in our climate. For example, yews that are allowed to grow with a minimum of pruning have a much better chance of survival. In contrast, close-clipped yews may suffer serious burns in either summer or winter drouth.

And we might also remind ourselves that the gardener who chooses an informal planting enjoys an extra dividend—a genuine saving in garden upkeep. A minimum of grooming and pruning is needed when trees and shrubs are allowed to grow naturally. And furthermore, the picture isn't spoiled when some plant becomes a bit overgrown.

Space Leased In Crestwood For Shoe Store

Ernest F. Marx, owner of Pam's Shoe Store, 8139 Forsyth, Clayton, reports plans for a second Children's Shoe Store in Crestwood Plaza Shopping Center. The Center, a project developed by Louis I. Zorensky and Milton L. Zorensky is under construction on Highway 66 at Watson and Sappington roads.

The new store will be the only one in the center designed for the younger customer. The unit will have a front display window built to resemble a gala circus tent. The circus motif will continue inside the store where display cases will be designed as circus wagons and animal cages. Gaily colored clowns and animals will complete the decoration. Many of the popular attractions at the Clayton store, such as the milk bar, will be included in Pam's of Crestwood.

Don Quinn, associated with Pam's at Clayton, will manage at Crestwood.

Use Acid Food.

Feed camellias, azaleas, dogwood, boxwood and gardenias with an acid plant food. February is the most important month of all in the feeding schedule for camellias, since the plants must have ample food when the buds are set for next summer's bloom.

Feed House Plants.

When the days grow longer in late January and February, give house plants a feeding using house plants a feeding in place of the normal watering.

When Truman met MacArthur on Wake

President Truman and General MacArthur during their conference on Wake Island in October, 1950. During their discussions, MacArthur stated firmly his belief that all resistance in Korea would end by Thanksgiving.

In Tuesday's installment of THE TRUMAN MEMOIRS, appearing daily and Sunday in the Post-Dispatch, former President Harry S. Truman reveals what was said at his historic meeting on Wake Island in October 1950, with General Douglas MacArthur, who was then commanding the U.N. forces in Korea. Mr. Truman tells why he arranged the meeting. He tells about MacArthur's optimistic statements that the war would soon end and that the Chinese Communists would not be able to give effective support to the reeling North Koreans. For a behind-the-scenes glimpse at this historic occasion, read THE TRUMAN MEMOIRS

New Nash Agency Opens on Lindell

A new automobile agency called Nash Missouri (no relationship to the former Nash Missouri Corporation) has been opened in newly developed quarters at 3959 Lindell boulevard. The new company is a partnership, with Henry Auffenberg as manager. James Hedges, Nash St. Louis zone representative, reports.

The new Lindell showroom has been established in the west one-half of a building, with the St. Louis Motors (Desoto-Plymouth) in the other half. Each agency there now has 20,000 square feet of space.

The Nash agency's showroom has been extensively remodeled and new parts and service areas have been established.

Hedges said franchising of the new agency was another step in the Nash Division's plan of expanded distribution and service in the St. Louis area.

Sports, Boats Show to Be Biggest Here

The upcoming sports, travel and boats show, Feb. 18-26 at the Arena, is to be the biggest and most comprehensive one of its kind ever staged in St. Louis, show management reported last week.

Displays will occupy 130,000 square feet of space, with boats, motors, trailers, mobile homes and two public trout fishing tanks in the "A" building, and with the show proper, including demonstration tanks, tackle, hunting equipment, camping, resort and conservation booths, public skeet and archery ranges and other displays in the main Arena building.

Boats and motors alone will occupy 40,000 square feet of space.

Outboard motors, more powerful, more colorful, more efficient and easy of handling than ever before, will have extensive space. There are to be motors ranging from three to 40 horsepower, two to four cylinders, all with remote gas tanks, electric starting, and all above 10 horsepower will be gear-shift equipped.

Water skis are expected to be among the hottest items of the show.

Entertainment will include hour-long tank and stage presentations, and there are to be representatives of most major resort areas of the whole nation on hand to extoll the merits of their offering, aid vacation planning and even help visitors book vacation time.

The show will run from 7 to 11 p.m. weekdays and there are to be matinees on Saturdays and Sundays both weekends, beginning at 2 p.m., with the presentations running unbroken until 11 p.m.

Plywood in Sub.

Hardwood plywood had a part in construction of the nation's newest atomic-powered submarine, the USS Seawolf, reports the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. It was used to make precious patterns of rudders, diving planes and other integral parts of the sub. Hardwood plywood was chosen because of its hardness and stability and because it can be machined to precise measurements.

Ford Implement, Tractor Manager Group Convenes

Top officials of the Ford Motor Company's Tractor and Implement Division conducted an all-day management meeting Saturday at the DeSoto Hotel with about 360 Ford tractor and implement dealers in attendance.

Heading the Ford group was Irving A. Duffy, company vice president and general manager of the Tractor and Implement Division, and Merritt D. Hill, assistant general manager. South Central Regional Sales Manager John J. Dzorni of Kansas City, Mo., presided.

Discussion of sales and service plans for the expanding line of Ford tractors and farm implements and presentation of new products in the Ford line were included in the program.

The St. Louis meeting was one of a series being held in January and February for representatives of more than 2600 dealerships throughout the United States.

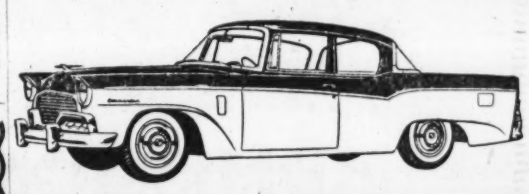

Attending the St. Louis session were personnel from dealerships under the jurisdiction of the following Ford tractor distributors: Midland Ford Tractor Co., St. Louis, and Ozark Tractor and Implement Co., Springfield, Mo.

I'll always remember...

The Nazi's Gun

by GEN. MARK W. CLARK
PRESIDENT OF THE CITADEL

CHARLESTON, S. C.

On my 49th birthday, May 1, 1945, and the historic days which followed it, the tumult of Allied armies in Italy attained the high note of victory, with Hitler's beaten men ready to give up. As the head of the 15th Army Group, it became my pleasant duty to accept their unconditional surrender. I'll never forget the German officer who brought it.

The ceremony took place on May 4 in the two-room portable shack that was my headquarters in Florence. Around me were my principal commanders and their chiefs of staff and perhaps a score of newspaper correspondents, photographers and movie cameramen.

Col. Gen. Heinrich von Vietinghoff, who had succeeded Kesselring in Italy, was pinned into a high pass near Bolzano by jubilant partisans and couldn't attend in person. Instead, he sent Gen. von Senger und Etterlin, commander of the XIV Panzer Corps, who was himself harrassed repeatedly on the journey to Florence. Von Senger was nervous on that account and embarrassed on another. He had headed the triumphant Germans in their parleys with the French earlier in the war and now the tables were turned.

All of us on our side were a little vague on the fine points of protocol as regards a surrender ceremony, but we did know we were supposed to be unarmed. We piled our pistol belts in a corner.

GENERAL EISENHOWER confers with the author during campaign that ended in surrender of Nazis in Italy.

NAZI General von Senger salutes stiffly in surrender. General Clark is unarmed; von Senger has a gun concealed at his back.

Von Senger entered my office very stiff and erect. He saluted and said he was reporting to implement unconditional surrender, which I accepted. Then, after I turned the matter over to my chief of staff, von Senger again saluted stiffly, turned on his heel and left.

It was then that I noticed something oddly wrong — he had come to surrender with a small pistol in a holster strapped to his belt at the back.

A reporter said, "You let that guy surrender armed!"

"Get him back here," I told an aide. When von Senger again appeared in the doorway, I said, "You're not supposed to be armed. Get rid of that gun."

Precise and stiff, his face showing no emotion, von Senger took off the belt and let the holster swing downward. Deliberately, he swung it through the screen door against a tree outside and left.

I told my aide: "Get that gun. It's one souvenir I intend to keep."

He did so, and at last we all felt a sort of agonized relief.

That was it — Finito! ■

TWIN STARS OF TOMORROW?

by LLOYD SHEARER PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

The chance of having twins is approximately one in 80; triplets, one in 6,500; quadruplets, one in 512,000. The chance that identical twins will develop into top show-business stars is even more remote — perhaps one in a billion.

The entertainment world has known many twins: the Wildes, the Strouds, the Corbins, the Mauchs and others. Right now, Pier Angeli and Marisa Pavan are doing relatively well as motion-picture actresses. But identical twins (always of the same sex and born of a single egg, unlike fraternal twins, who come from two separately fertilized eggs) have never won first rank. Now come two new contenders: Charlotte and Marianne Guice (rhymes with ice), identical twins born seven minutes apart.

For the past three years they have been voted the most beautiful twins in America. (The photos on this page suggest why.) Now 19, they hope to break the twin jinx in show business.

"I think," says Charlotte, older and spokeswoman of the two, "that we may have a chance in television. It's a new medium and maybe someone will come up with a way of using twins on it besides singing and dancing.

JOHN WAYNE starred on a recent TV program in which the Guices were seen in commercials. Meeting VIP's has yet to turn their heads.

"At the moment we're making $90 a day doing TV commercials, so we're not complaining. But I really think we could do a comedy series based on real life, because a lot of funny things sure happen to twins."

Last year, for example, when the Guice girls won first prize at the annual Twinorama staged at Huntington Beach, Calif., beating out 252 sets of other twins from all over the nation, they met sailors Ted and Jack Lightle from Charleston, S.C., also contestants.

Since Ted and Jack were tall, 23 and handsome, the girls agreed to go out with them. Halfway through the date they decided to switch on the boys, exchanging partners without disclosing the fact.

"When the fellows took us home that night," Marianne recalls, "we told them what we had done. We hoped they wouldn't mind.

RACING, ANYONE? Last year the girls had part-time jobs as "greeters" at a harness-racing track near Los Angeles. Here, dressed for work, they pose for PARADE on a track sulky. (Also see cover.) Since neither likes riding, this is about as close as the job ever brought them to a horse.

1 YEAR

9 YEARS

Since birth the Guices have been almost impossible to tell apart, as these family snapshots show. At r. they appear with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Guice. The father is an accountant.

TODAY ▶

If they don't dazzle show business, they always can be secretaries

" 'That's okay,' one of them told us. 'My brother and I, we switched on you kids five minutes after we stepped out the front door.' "

Los Angeles residents, the Guices take secretarial courses at Woodbury College when they're not acting or modeling. "We've tried to see to it," says their father, "that the girls lead pretty normal lives. Winning all these beauty contests, being called the prettiest twins in the world, getting all these offers from agents and producers — things like that can spoil children. And that's one thing Mrs. Guice and I have tried to prevent. The nicest quality the girls have is their personality. They're sweet and pleasant and polite."

According to agent Dorothy Preble, who discovered them strolling along Hollywood Boulevard, the Guice twins have the most photogenic faces and figures of any pair of identical twins in the country. Both girls are green-eyed blondes, 5 feet 7, 120 pounds, 34-24-34, with shapely legs, peaches-and-cream complexions and that fresh "All-American look" so much in demand by advertising agencies. Photographers claim they can't take a bad picture; television directors say they are alert and intelligent and take direction easily. However, the twins accept no more than 10 jobs per month after school hours.

"We want to finish our education first," Charlotte says, "so that we'll have more than our twinship to rely on. After that we plan to take some dramatic courses and to give show business the full-time college try. Agents keep telling us that all we need for movie success is a face and a figure and a personality. But we know that never in the history of movies have identical twins reached stardom.

"If Marianne and I are going to make it, we'll need talent and training to help us. And we think we stand a better chance in TV."

As for romance, the girls say they have no intention of getting married for five or six years.

"We're having too much fun," Charlotte claims, "to even consider marriage. Boys are calling up all the time, and when one of them comes around to take me out, he never knows which sister he has.

"I've had fellows tell me they were real gone on me, only in talking to me they'd call me by my sister's name. Honestly, it's a riot. That's why I say they should put our real life on TV."

Like most twins raised together, Charlotte and Marianne pick up colds and other contagious diseases almost simultaneously. They dress and talk alike, are indistinguishable on the phone. But the popular notion that twins somehow possess strong psychic bonds is not true in their case. When separated, for example, neither has any idea what the other is thinking.

Clothes is the only subject on which they argue. The bickering starts every morning with the burning question: "What are we going to wear today?"

There are many theories as to why identical twins have never reached a position of eminence in the modern entertainment field: Public interest is diversified when watching twins; there has never been a popular dramatic vehicle for twins other than The Prince and the Pauper; twins have never demonstrated great talent. The truth is that no one knows exactly why.

The Guice twins intend to find out. ■

ARE THESE JOBS FOR YOU?

Is this the time to change your job?

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL Parade Washington correspondents

WASHINGTON, D.C.

TODAY'S BIG NEWS concerns jobs. If you're looking for one, if you've got one but want to change, your prospects are better than they've ever been except during the World War II boom.

The nation's biggest employer — the U.S. Government — has the biggest single variety of jobs. Many of them may be new to you; many offer unusual opportunities for adventure, excitement, even romance. Meanwhile, private industry offers a broad range of openings. Of 149 manufacturing centers regularly surveyed by the Labor Department, jobs currently should be easy to find in 40, only slightly less so in 83; just 26 cities (mostly in New England and Pennsylvania) report mild to serious unemployment.

So far as the Government is concerned, more than 2.3 million men and women — a monthly payroll of $900,000,000 — now are doing Uncle Sam's work. And, despite economy talk, the list keeps growing. Some of these jobs are humdrum, of course. But many represent the start of fascinating careers.

For sheer glamor, a foreign assignment is hard to beat. Imagine yourself carrying diplomatic secrets on the midnight express to Madrid, by jeep through forbidding Khyber Pass, on a fast plane to Damascus, by auto caravan through Africa. These are routine missions for Uncle Sam's quiet world travelers — the diplomatic couriers. You may be eligible to join the courier service if you're under 35, a high-school graduate, without a police record. The pay averages $2,875 a year — but with travel and living expenses covered, you should be able to bank most of it.

If you can pound a typewriter or wield a shorthand pencil, you are in demand wherever Uncle Sam does paper work. The other day a defense agency had a call for 300 clerk-stenographers to be rushed to Germany, France and Japan. Single girls 21 to 45 are preferred for these jobs. Pay ranges from $3,000 to $3,415. "Chances also for romance," one official cautiously admits.

All Kinds of Openings

If you are a wigmaker, tailor or barber, you may find an overseas job waiting for you. There are foreign openings, too, for librarians, pharmacists, welfare and social workers, teachers, photographers, radio operators, weather observers, escort interpreters, translators (especially Russian, German and Chinese), medical and psychiatric case workers, nurses, recreation supervisors, market-research analysts, transportation and agriculture economists, engineers of all kinds.

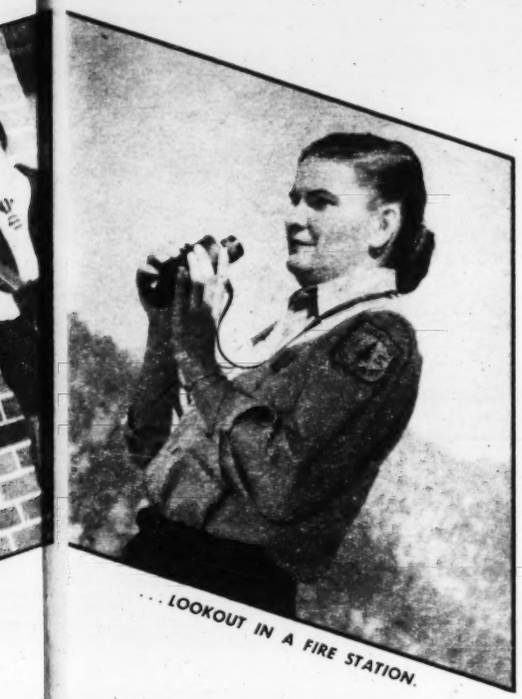

Older men get a break over young men for many overseas assignments. Reason: Some Europeans don't like taking orders from "young fellers." Before a married man is sent out of the country, a Government representative interviews his wife to learn her attitude about living abroad. She may wind up with a job, too.

Those crossing an ocean at Government expense must agree to stay two years, as a rule. Housing usually is free, food costs lower than at home. But don't go looking for an overseas job just for the joyride. Uncle Sam will expect hard work in return for the taxpayers' investment in you.

Write to the U.S. Employment Service, Washington 25, D.C., for information about overseas jobs. Or, if you're in Washington, visit the Employment Service's D.C. office (1724 F Street, N.W.).

If you have a Sherlock Holmes bent, maybe you can fill a pair of Government gumshoes. Uncle Sam doesn't have enough sleuths to keep up with all the investigating required these days. The need ranges from daring young men to hunt criminals for the enforcement agencies to experienced old men to inspect Agriculture Department storage bins.

Typical example: The Labor Department will start hiring 600 field investigators July 1 to check whether industrial plants are observing minimum wage and overtime laws. The salary will run $4,525 the first

. . . LOOKOUT IN A FIRE STATION.

Today employment prospects are the best ever in peacetime — so here is information you can use to guide your career planning year with annual raises up to $7,500. Fact-finding experience is good background for this work. You may have been a policeman, insurance investigator, census taker, even a news reporter. If you're interested, the best place to apply is your regional Civil Service office. (See box at right.)

But if labor-law enforcement is too dull for your blood, you can find danger galore in the border patrol. Here the man who's fast on his feet and can sling a gun lives to collect his pay. You may go alone into the desert or woods, dependent on your own wits for shelter. It will be your job to stop criminals trying to make a getaway, to work with narcotics agents to halt dangerous dope runners — in short, to guard our international boundaries.

Does this kind of life intrigue you? You must take a written test, though a college education is not required. Preference is given to tough, outdoor, Western-bred men. Hours are long and irregular — in all kinds of weather. Starting pay: $4,080 with a $125 raise after the first year. Address inquiries to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Washington 25, D.C.

Of course, you can find rugged outdoor jobs with less danger — surveying jobs, for example. Uncle Sam needs both surveyers and mapmakers. A professional cartographer draws up to $11,610; a cartographic aide earns from $2,690 to $6,390. There are openings in the Interior Department, Geological Survey, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Land Management Bureau and all three armed services.

The National Park Service is a dream come true for those who love nature. If you hanker to be a naturalist, ranger or tour leader in one of our 27 national parks, send your application early. February is the best time to apply for these seasonal jobs; by May, it will be too late.

Good Pay — and Security

Not all Government jobs are flashy or glamorous. But Uncle Sam is a good boss to work for. He pays well, allows generous time off, offers security. Calls go out all the time for men and women to fill almost every kind of Government job. Here are samples currently open within the United States:

- The Agriculture Department is offering eight kinds of jobs, paying up to $11,610. Biggest demand is for market reporters, $4,525 to $6,390.
- Scientists are in great demand. Examinations are open for 41 categories. Examples: astronomers, $4,345 to $8,900; chemists, $4,345 to $11,610; electronics specialists (needed in Massachusetts and Connecticut), $5,440 to $10,320.
- There are openings for 13 varieties of social and educational workers. Most intriguing: teaching Indian children tribal lore, plus the customary three R's, in isolated Indian schools, $3,670 to $4,525.
- Sixteen types of medical personnel are needed. Nurses aides and child-care consultants are in particular demand, $3,670 to $7,570.
- Blue-collar laborers can find work with the General Services Administration. This is the Government's housekeeping agency, which hires handymen, plumbers, truck drivers, cabinetmakers, painters, construction workers. (Salaries geared to local hourly wage scales.)
- Engineers are urgently needed. The Reclamation Bureau is offering jobs in the scenic West, $4,345 to $5,440. Students who can take mining engineering jobs within six months are invited to apply with the Bureau of Mines, $3,670 to $11,610. Beginners also can sign up with the Public Roads Bureau as highway-engineer trainees, $3,415 to $4,345. Opportunities here will be unlimited if Congress, as its leaders expect, passes the multimillion-dollar highway-construction bill.

Some agencies take outstanding college graduates as management internees and train them to be future bosses. The Civil Service exams for these executives-to-be are stiff, but those who make the grade go far. One young man started in a dingy Indian Bureau office in New Mexico, ended up as an Assistant Interior Secretary with a blue-and-gold office bigger than that of the President.

How can you get on the Federal payroll? Drop by you local post office and ask for Form 5000-AB. You'll be given a Civil Service test to determine your qualifications. This probably will land you in one of the Government's 18 pay grades (from GS-1 at $2,690 to GS-18 at $14,800).

If you're a war veteran, five points will be added to your score. Disabled vets and Purple Heart winners are entitled to 10 points. Be prepared to wait up to three months for a Government security check. In some cases, you may be given a temporary job while waiting. After one year's probationary service, you are eligible for a Government career.

Caution: Phony Civil Service schools may try to sell you a short course to prepare you for a Government job. Save your money.

Will political pull help you? Uncle Sam is more interested in your qualifications. But for the juicier jobs, it won't hurt to use political influence. Ask your Congressman or Senator to go to bat for you.

You're eligible for a Government career job after you turn 18. Then you can stop worrying about your birthdays; there is no maximum age limit.

Any more questions? Write to the Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D.C., or one of the regional offices listed in the box.

But maybe you don't want to work for the Government. What is the job outlook in private industry? The Labor Department reports expanding payrolls in more than three-fifths of the major job centers, including such key cities as Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, Baltimore and Houston.

Biggest need is for industrial workers: in the aircraft plants at Los Angeles, San Diego, St. Louis, Ft. Worth, Seattle and Cleveland; in the shipyards at Philadelphia and Newport News-Hampton-Warwick, Va.; in the steel mills at Baltimore, Detroit, Milwaukee and Allentown-Bethlehem, Pa.; in the farm- and household-machinery factories at Davenport, Ia., Rock Island-Moline, Ill., York, Pa., and Syracuse, N.Y.

Jobs at 1,800 Offices

And here again Uncle Sam can help you, via the U.S. Employment Service. Some 1,800 employment offices list the available jobs in each locality. When a local office ends up with more jobs than it can fill, it passes the surplus list up to the regional office. Each region sends its list of unfilled jobs to the Bureau of Employment Security in Washington, which consolidates them into a master clearance list. This then goes back to all 1,800 employment offices.

Almost any job you name can be found on this interstate clearance list. If you want to move, you'll find your job — or a better one — open in some other town. Promises the Employment Service: "Every effort will be made to find the best possible job for you on the basis of your qualifications and your employers' references."

But if, all things considered, you're satisfied with your present job, the outlook is still good. Your salary ought to be raised 5 to 15 per cent before the end of the year. ■

Dromedary Presents Its New Angel Food Mix

Inspired by the historic recipe used in the Birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low, Founder of the Girl Scouts

Angel Food, indeed! Light as a moonbeam, fluffy as a summer cloud, white and moist as a fresh snowfall—that's the kind of Angel Food Cake you'll bake with Dromedary Early American Angel Food Mix. No matter how good you've made Angel Food Cake before, you'll outdo yourself with new Dromedary!

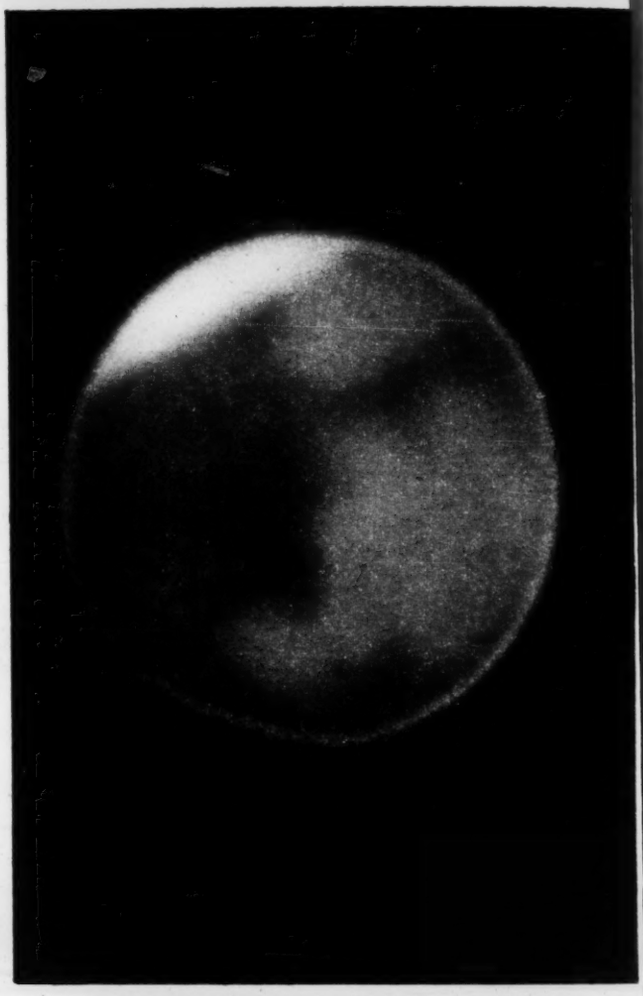

And, as any good cook knows, the secret is in the recipe. Dromedary has turned to a favorite recipe used in the Birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low, founder of the Girl Scouts of the United States of America. The inspiration for this new mix—a veritable masterpiece of the baking art—was found in an old family cookbook. Result: an Angel Food Cake that bakes high and light and with a yummy crust and flavor all its own. Dromedary is the only Angel Food Mix wrapped in Glittering Gold Foil to keep it mixing-bowl fresh!

Once again, Dromedary makes baking history with another historic recipe. You, too, can make history at your own table if you bake a Dromedary Angel Food Cake—soon!

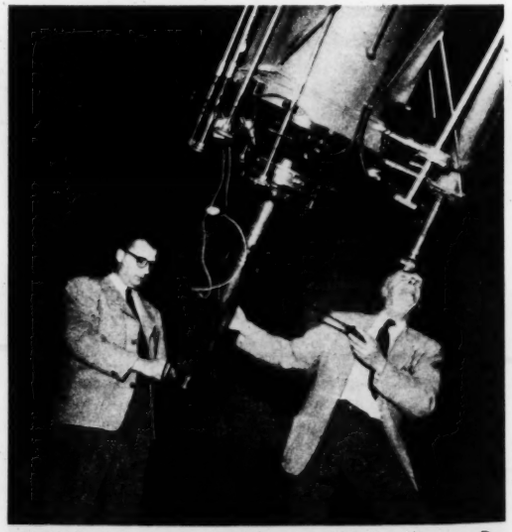

Dromedary received the rights to the Angel Food recipe used in the Juliette Gordon Low Birthplace in return for its support of the restoration and endowment of that historic home now owned by the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., a member organization of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

FIRST COLOR PHOTO of new-found, green-tinged spot on Mars (left) shows how it contrasts with brown desert. Previously such spots had varied in size, but no new ones had appeared. White patches at top and bottom are ice caps.

TESTING photographic equipment with 24" telescope, Dr. Wilson (l.), Observatory director, and Dr. Slipher prepare for visit of Mars. Observations will begin in June. Mars will reach nearest point to earth in 15 years on September 7.

An important discovery on

MARS

A new color photo offers evidence to bolster belief in life on the 'red planet'

Lowell Observatory-National Geographic Society photo

by SID ROSS

Is there life on Mars?

In a few months, thousands of amateur and professional astronomers will scan the skies in search of some new fragment of information that may answer that question beyond doubt. The occasion will be Mars' closest brush to Earth in 15 years, with the planets a mere 35,300,000 miles apart. And many of the telescopes will be trained on one of the most startling discoveries about the red planet since its "canals" first were charted in 1877.

The striking color photograph above shows that discovery: a vast, green-tinged area the size of Texas, where only desert had been seen before. Dark spots previously noted on Mars, scientists are agreed, probably are a crude form of plant life, perhaps resembling moss. But this is the first observed spot of greenery that is not an extension of a previously known patch.

It was spotted one chill morning in June, 1954, by 72-year-old Dr. E. C. Slipher of Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., acknowledged as the world's foremost authority on Mars. Dr. Slipher was manning the telescope at Lamont-Hussey Observatory, Bloemfontein, South Africa, during the planet's last close (39,000,000 miles) visit here. But the discovery that morning was only one of the significant observations made by the expedition, which was jointly sponsored by Lowell and the National Geographic Society.

Briefly, here are others made by the expedition's new photographic techniques:

- Faint atmospheric "belts" across the face of the planet (see photo, r.). Previously, Mars' atmosphere had been considered too thin for such belts, similar to our "weather fronts."
- Blue-white cloud patches, seen first near the north pole and later elsewhere.
- Opaque, yellow-tinged clouds — possibly dust storms.
- Occasions when the Martian atmosphere became completely transparent.

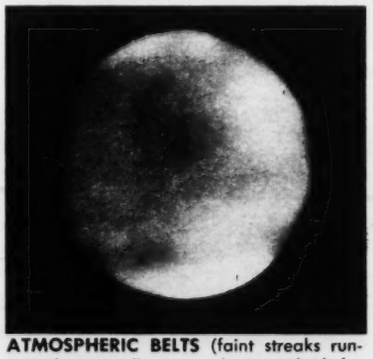

Some of these finds, as Dr. A. G. Wilson, director of Lowell, puts it, "knocked into a cocked hat some of the hypotheses about Mars." One such theory held that the dark areas were lowlands and the deserts high ground. These lowlands, the theory ran, were watered by drainage from the melting polar ice cap. But how to explain a sudden spot of green in the midst of mountains?

Such setbacks have been commonplace since the "canals" were sighted. Dr. Percival Lowell, who founded the Observatory, first theorized that the canals were strips of vegetation along irrigation ditches, tended by beings struggling to live on a dying planet. Most scientists have discarded this theory. A new theory suggests that the canals are scars left by meteorites along which plants have sprung up. Another says the "green" areas are volcanic dust, dark because of Mars' lack of oxygen. The most widely accepted theory is held by Dr. Slipher: the canals are natural waterways, fringed by a low form of vegetation.

Such theorizing is based on a meager storehouse of facts about Mars: It is about half the diameter of Earth, circles the sun in 687 days, revolves on its axis every 24⅝ hours. Because of its odd orbit, winters are longer in the southern hemisphere than in the northern; southern winter is 183 days, summer, 158. With an atmosphere 97 per cent nitrogen and only a trace of oxygen, Mars' air is similar to that 10 miles above the Earth. But temperatures at the equator do not top 70 or 80 F. (measured from Earth with a delicate instrument called a thermocouple) and, at night, may drop to 95 below. The planet's surface is hard, in contrast to planets like Jupiter whose visible surfaces are gaseous. Scientists generally agree that Mars is a dying planet, nearing the end of its evolutionary cycle.

In such a world, can life exist? Dr. Slipher feels that life, in some form, does exist on Mars. Possibly it is as crude as the microscopic monad, which can become plant or animal according to environment. And there is the possibility that a wholly different form of life has evolved on Mars. In fact, biologists talk of reproducing a "little Mars" in the lab to see what plant life could grow there. And perhaps some questions will be answered when Lowell's observers focus new TV-type telescopes on Mars this year.

"Human beings" on Mars? Most scientists doubt it. But as Dr. Slipher says, "assuming different conditions, anything could happen. We won't know until the day we land on Mars." ■

ATMOSPHERIC BELTS (faint streaks running horizontally) are photographed for first time by Lowell's blue-filtered camera. Astronomers saw them for several nights.

OUR OVER-AIDED AUTHOR

ONE WORD from the man gets results. But is he really as funny as all that?

Hubby gets helped

Today's moral: beware the wife who reads

by DICK EMMONS

My wife, Helen, is a great little taker of advice about how to keep her man happy, I hereby report miserably.

Many of the magazines she subscribes to, apparently convinced that our marriage is in delicate balance, dedicate their space to pasting us back together again. "Do Something Extra for Your Man" was the admonition of one such article my wife devoured. Acting swiftly, she 1) scrubbed all my golf balls in December, 2) tidied up my desk hopelessly and 3) weeded out my favorite neckties and gave them to the twins for tricycle streamers.

On another occasion the advice was "Tell Your Husband All." Abandoning herself to the task, Helen began when I arrived home and talked until 3 a.m. for several nights. Luckily, laryngitis set in just after midnight that Saturday.

Recently she's been reading again. One night I drove home to find her standing, starry-eyed, in the doorway.

"Darling!" she breathed. "The way you turned the car into our driveway! It was masterful!"

"Huh?"

She looked at me adoringly. "You handle the car with a simple, classic beauty. I can't get over how well you drive!"

"Well, I can and have long ago. What's for dinner?"

The question snapped her back to normalcy. There was no further incident until later, when I was fighting through the evening paper in search of the sports page.

"That's another thing I admire in you," Helen said in a half-whisper.

"What, that I don't tear the younger elements of this family arm from leg for messing up my newspaper?"

"No," she cooed, "the deep-seated interest you have in such a variety of subjects. I've been watching you page restlessly through the paper, your keen eyes quickly scanning the items to wrench the meat from them, then passing hurriedly along to who-knows-what other topic."

I scanned the girl quickly with my keen eyes. Somehow, I couldn't spot a trace of insincerity.

In the next few days, my wife paid me elaborate compliments on 1) my unbelievable skill in straightening a bent nail, 2) the admirable masculine manner in which I tamp a cigarette and 3) the careless, exciting way I put on my hat in the morning.

I must admit that I do all these things superbly, but her flattery left me uneasy. I found the answer, though, by glancing through one of her magazines. Somebody named Fostoria Phleming had written an article called "Praise Him for the Tiny Things If You Want a Smiling Man."

Frowning, I was on the point of writing a few tiny things to Fostoria when another article title suddenly caught my eye. "Laugh at the Things He Says!" it advised.

I started to tear it out for burning when Helen walked into the room.

"What are you doing?" she asked, a chuckle already beginning at the back of her throat.

"I'm ripping this piece of —"

I never finished the sentence. My wife was immediately holding her sides, doubling up in mirth, rolling on the floor and beating helplessly at the rug.

Lately, I don't even dare ask her to pass the butter. The punch line is too much for her. ■ an occasion of mingled solemnity and rejoicing

CORAL GABLES, FLA.

When Daniel August Edwards Seghers reached the first important milestone in his life, everybody but him knew what was going on. Daniel was just 30 days old and a bit confused by a strange but wonderful world.

And so, on a Sunday afternoon in St. Theresa's Catholic Church here, Daniel lay quietly in the arms of his godmother, unaware that he was the central figure in a memorable religious ceremony: his baptism.

In this brief but impressive sacrament, Daniel became a member of the Church. His sponsors, who assumed responsibility for his future religious training and welfare, answered for him certain questions put by the priest. While intoning the proper prayers, the priest then baptized the baby.

After the ceremony, Daniel was taken home for the traditional baptismal celebration. There, his fond relatives gathered to salute him as hero of the day. Uncles, aunts, cousins and grandparents cooed, fussed and made faces for his exclusive benefit.

While all this was going on, Daniel's proud father, photographer Carroll Seghers II, was busy with his camera. Photos here and on following pages mirror the heart-warming spirit of an occasion shared and fondly remembered by millions of families.

DOING

A San Jose boxer lands a left jab in an intercollegiate match. The helmets, worn in all college bouts today, were developed and first tried at the college.

LEARNING

Students in an elementary boxing class at San Jose exchange punches. Besides this "lab" course, students attend lectures, must pass midterm and final exams.

COLLEGE OF HARD KNOCKS

by RUBE SAMUELSEN

SAN JOSE, CALIF.

Most every college in the nation has a boxing team, but only a few offer boxing as a regular classroom course, like chemistry or philosophy. And there's probably only one — San Jose State College here — where students, while learning how to box, also help devise ways to make boxing better and safer.

San Jose offers three courses in boxing (not counting instruction given the boxing teams). Students get regular credits for the courses, spend about half their time in the classroom listening to lectures, the other half in the gym learning by doing (below).

In giving these courses, San Jose isn't figuring on sending graduates into the prize ring. "After all," says one professor, "a student studies philosophy in college, but that doesn't mean he's going to become a philosopher." Purpose of the courses is to build confidence in the students — and to show future teachers how to coach kids in boxing.

In the process, San Jose is showing boxing some new wrinkles. Here are a few of the innovations now being tested:

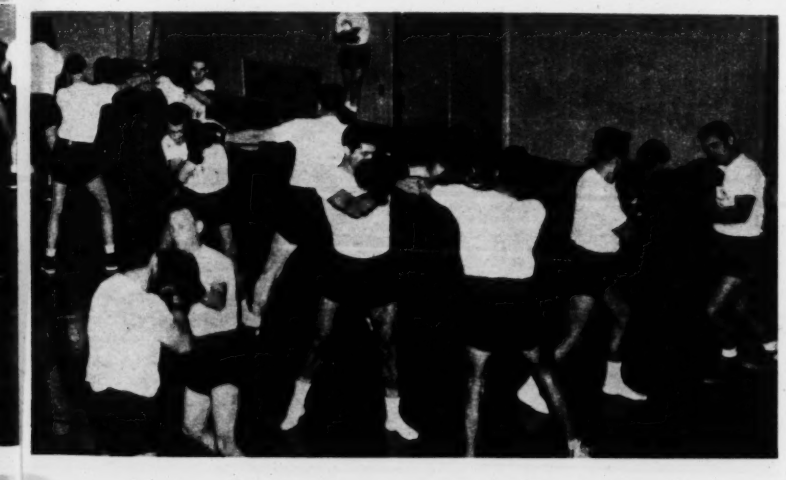

- A scoreboard over the ring which gives the round-by-round scoring of referee and judges. Thus spectators and fighters always know which way the battle is going. This takes suspense out of the sweet science, complain some, but San Jose points out that boxing is that rarest of sports in which the spectator never knows what the score is.
- A referee who watches the fight from outside the ring, blowing a whistle to break up clinches. Purpose: to make cleaner fights by putting the boxers "on their honor."
- A thumbless glove that makes eye gouging impossible.
- A point rating for fighters to prevent mismatches. A boy with a point rating of 50, for instance, will meet only an opponent with a rating no higher than 65. If the 50-point fighter wins, his rating jumps to 65, while his beaten foe drops to 64. In pro boxing, this would mean heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano, with a rating of 98, would face only challengers rated at 83 or more.

Most of these innovations, of course, never will see the light of a professional fight arena. But others, like the thumbless glove and the scoreboard, are under serious consideration. (One early San Jose innovation, helmets for boxers, now is standard in college boxing, has been tried out in pro fights.)

Has all this tinkering with the rules made poorer boxers out of San Jose's students? Not so you would notice; the varsity boxers, most of whom come from the boxing classes, regularly win 80 per cent of their dual meets and tied for second last year in the NCAA tourney.

Boxing at San Jose has produced more than new ideas and medals, according to the boys' parents. Says one: "College boxing, one of the safest of sports, has given my son a tremendous helping of self-assurance."

But the biggest vote of confidence in San Jose's boxing courses has come in a poll of 50 graduates. Asked if they would let their sons take boxing in college, not one said no. ■

WALNUT BUTTER CRUNCH

Here's kitchen fun for all ages on a winter evening

WALNUT BUTTER CRUNCH

- 1 pound (2 cups) butter or margarine
- 2 cups sugar
- ¼ cup water
- 2 tablespoons light corn sirup
- 2 cups coarsely chopped walnuts
- 1 6-oz. package (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
- ½ cup finely chopped walnuts

Melt butter over low heat in 2-quart saucepan. Add sugar; stir constantly until sugar is melted. Add water and corn sirup. Continue cooking over low heat — until sirup, dropped in very cold water, becomes brittle, or candy thermometer reaches 290° F. Remove from heat; stir in coarsely chopped walnuts. Spread in a greased jelly-roll pan, 15" x 10" x 1". Cool until hardened. Melt chocolate over hot (not boiling) water; spread on crunch. Sprinkle with finely chopped walnuts. Break into pieces. Makes 2 lbs.

KITCHEN HINT

Candy that won't harden or is too sugary, frostings that won't hold their shape, fat-soaked deep-fried foods, expensive roasts over- or underdone — all can be avoided by using a good kitchen thermometer.

HAPPY PEOPLE EVERYWHERE HAVE FOUND IT—WHY NOT YOU?

HEALTHFUL WAY TO BREAK THE LAXATIVE DRUG HABIT

ALL-BRAN AND MILK—NATURE'S GREAT FOOD COMBINATION

For relief from irregularity due to insufficient bulk

Important food essentials for fitness

Is the laxative drug habit becoming an increasingly annoying and unpleasant problem with you, as it has with so many adults?

Then here is a simple fact that may come as welcome news to you: Millions of grown men and women like yourself have found the answer to their irregularity problem without resorting to harsh purgatives that drain the system—without the use of habit-forming drugs. They have simply changed to an appetizing and nourishing breakfast serving of Kellogg's All-Bran with milk.

How is it that Kellogg's All-Bran can succeed in so many cases where drugs and chemicals fail? For this one reason. Such preparations, intended only for relief of temporary stoppage, contain no bulk. Yet, lack of bulk is one of the commonest causes of irregularity. So, because All-Bran provides all the good food bulk you need daily, it brings gentle, lasting relief from irregularity.

You may be interested to know, too, that All-Bran is one of the most nutritious breakfast foods you can eat.

W. K. Kellogg, who originated All-Bran over 40 years ago, made certain of this. Mr. Kellogg discovered that the outer layers of the whole wheat grain were not only a fine natural laxative food but rich in nutritive value as well. He found, too, a special way of milling the whole grain so as not to lose any of its natural laxative effectiveness or nutrition. That is why Kellogg's All-Bran supplies you with important vitamins, minerals and high-quality protein—the kind of nourishment you need to keep fit.

Little wonder that Kellogg's All-Bran, the original, has grown to be the most widely accepted and used of all bran cereals.

Why don't you try the safe, gentle, natural laxative cereal that has helped literally millions? Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat a half cup of Kellogg's All-Bran every morning for just 10 days. If it doesn't bring you satisfying gentle relief from irregularity, you get double your money back. That's a promise from Kellogg's of Battle Creek, Michigan.

GREASELESS!

STAINLESS!

WHAT KIND OF DOCTOR DO YOU

A young woman I know — call her Edna Smith — suffered headaches over an 18-month stretch. They were not the ordinary, garden variety that could be relieved by aspirin. These headaches really knocked her out. With each attack, she became fatigued and had to stay in bed one to three days.

Finally she decided to seek medical advice. She asked herself: "Which specialist shall I call?" Little did she realize the ultimate cost of that question.

In quick succession she visited an "ear, nose and throat man" and a brain surgeon. Both found her perfectly sound. Then she went to an allergist, who put Edna on a special diet. She ate lamb and rice for a week, then added other foods one at a time, keeping a food diary to determine whether her headaches were caused by something she ate. They weren't.

One day a friend said to Edna: "Why don't you go to our family doctor? He's helped us through a lot of tough spots." Edna thought it over, then did.

Dr. Wilson listened patiently to her story. Later he visited her at home — and discovered the cause of the headaches. Edna's brother was in the Army overseas. Whenever he failed to write regularly, she would come down with a miserable headache.

Under Dr. Wilson's guidance, she came to understand her ailment, and gradually it disappeared.

I tell this case history to deprecate neither the specialists involved nor specialization in medicine as we know it today. Each of the doctors Edna visited was trained in general medical practice, but he sought to diagnose her ailment within the field he knew best: his own specialty.

On that account Edna Smith's case illustrates a dangerous trend which is snowballing in the United States. People in alarming numbers are "specialist-hopping" without consulting their family doctors. Indeed, some estimates indicate that perhaps 30,000,000 or more Americans do not even have family doctors.

Specialist-hopping is expensive. It offers the longest road to good health care. And it reveals a dangerous self-delusion: that the patient is qualified to diagnose his own illness.

None of this detracts from the obvious point that our present high standard of medical service would be impossible without specialists. Medical advances in recent years have been so marked that no one individual can keep up with all of them.

On one hand, we have the family doctor or generalist, who practices medicine in every field of diagnosis and treatment to the degree determined by his training, competence and experience. He does not limit his practice to a single specialty. He does call in specialists in cases requiring skills exceeding his own. Generalists comprise about two-thirds of the

by DR. J. S. DeTAR

President-elect, The American Academy of General Practice

160,000 doctors now practicing in the U.S.

On the other hand, we have specialists, who have received the same basic training as generalists. But they have branched off into a single specialty field. There are more than 20 of these, with a number of sub-specialties. For example:

The internist is concerned with diagnosis and the nonsurgical treatment of the internal organs. The otolaryngologist treats the throat and ears. The ophthalmologist treats the eyes. The neurologist is a nerve specialist. In addition, there are specialties within the field of surgery.

There is the pediatrician, who treats children, and even the pediatric hematologist, who specializes in diseases of the blood of children. So the list goes.

Small wonder that the Edna Smiths can get snarled up — to say the least.

Where does the traditional family doctor, the generalist, fit into this picture?

He fits in the most basic possible way. The family doctor has been called the first line of defense against disease. Actually, on the medical team you can call upon to safeguard your health, the family doctor is not only the first line but the quarterback as well. He should call the signals in all illnesses. Only after that is the play given to the appropriate specialist. Assuming one is required, that is — for the well-trained family doctor can handle about eight out of 10 conditions which arise in the overall care of an average family.

He can treat anything from a simple cut to complicated nerve center disorders. He can make proper diagnosis after adequate examination and tests. He can handle emergency fractures and perform minor surgery. Some family doctors have taken special training which enables them to perform major surgery. Others have gone beyond their generalist training to become proficient in one of the many specialty fields.

Put all those facts together and you must arrive at an all-important conclusion: you, the individual, are not equipped to decide whether you need the services of a specialist; that is a decision which can best be made by your family doctor. It is to him — and not to a specialist — that you should go first, no matter what your illness.

Following that course, you will save time, money, worry. You will spare yourself the torture of uncertainty.

But, you ask, "If my case is difficult, will my family doctor call in a specialist? Why not go to a clinic where there are doctors in each specialty?"

The answers to both questions are simple.

First, in difficult cases, most family doctors seek the advice of specialists. Two heads are better than one and often necessary. To benefit a patient, the doctor even may ask the advice of more than one specialist.

Second, many people do receive their medical service from clinics. That is particularly true in big cities with their shifting populations. But the vast majority seem to prefer more personalized medical service — from their own doctor, who is free to use clinic facilities for consultation if necessary.

Inevitably people ask: "Well, how do I go about finding a good family doctor?"

The answer to that question is easier than you may think. Here are the agencies you can call upon for advice: 1) Your local, county or state medical societies, 2) Your local hospitals and 3) Your municipal health department. For the most part, these agencies are listed in your telephone book. State medical society offices often are located in state capitals; a county society may be in the county seat.

THE AUTHOR has lived and practiced medicine for 25 years in Milan, Mich. (pop. 3,000). For the past 10, he has championed the cause of the family doctor in modern health care. This is his first article written for a general publication.

Eight years ago, the general physicians of the country decided that good family doctors had to continue their studies — indefinitely. So they formed the American Academy of General Practice. In one brief period, the Academy offices in Kansas City, Mo., received 70,000 letters requesting help in selecting qualified family doctors.

That is only one of the indications that every family does want a family doctor.

When every family has one, the Edna Smiths will have fewer worries — and fewer medical expenses. No longer will people ask: "What kind of doctor shall I call?" ■

TEEN-AGE TOPICS

So many questions could be asked about etiquette, but you all insist on writing me letters on the same topic: dating. I would like to remind you, too, that the carefully written letter — with every word spelled correctly and with the form of the letter exactly as it should be — is the mark of a gentle person. And now for today's letters — from the boys.

Q. I am 15 and in love with a girl 26. Should I go with other girls and just wait until I am out of school and marry this girl? — G.S., Hershey, Pa.

A. You certainly should go with other girls — and forget your puppy love for a girl so much older. If she is encouraging you, there is something wrong with her. Perhaps she thinks she is not attractive enough to have boy friends her own age.

Q. I am 14. My parents don't think I am old enough to have a gun. What do you think? — J.R., Parsippany, N.J.

A. I think it is safe for a boy to learn the proper care and handling of guns under careful adult supervision when he seems to have reached an age of responsibility in such matters. But only your parents can tell whether or not you have really reached this age. Your local Police Lieutenant may have some suggestions for your parents on the subject.

Q. I am 15 and go with a girl who will not believe anything I say. Recently, she refused to speak to me because I broke a promise to give up smoking. I denied it, but she knew I was lying. — P.C., Boston, Mass.

A. Part of growing up is learning to take the responsibility for your own acts. And smoking is your responsibility. For her not to speak to you because you don't stop smoking is silly, and for you to lie to her about it is equally foolish. Talk it over with her — and try to grow up, both of you.

Q. I have been going steady with a 16-year-old girl for six months. Her parents never will leave us alone in the house, and they don't like us to go out. When we do go out they ask us so many questions that it ruins the evening. Also they don't think I am the right kind of boy for her because I don't have a job. — B.J., Detroit, Mich.

A. Parental caution is understandable and wise; they shouldn't leave teenagers home alone, and have every right to know where their children go, with whom they are and what time they get home.

Why don't you get some week-end or after-school job, even though you may not need the money? It will be training for your future career and discipline for you now.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS will be answered as space permits. (Miss Vanderbilt cannot answer letters personally.) Address: Miss Amy Vanderbilt, PARADE, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

"My feet were killing me! Then I tried Ben-Gay!"

Mr. Wesley Craig of Detroit, Mich., praises Ben-Gay for relieving the pain of sore, aching feet. "I'm the manager of a restaurant," says Mr. Craig, "and it's sure a 'standing' job! As a result, I'd been having a lot of trouble with my feet and my leg muscles. Finally, I tried Ben-Gay. I rubbed my legs, feet and ankles with it and what relief! Believe it or not, the next day I played 18 holes of golf without an ache or a pain! Ben-Gay's my stand-by from now on!"

Mr. Craig is right. Ben-Gay is amazingly effective in relieving the throbbing and burning of tired, sore feet. Ben-Gay acts fast . . . really fast to bring soothing relief. GRAY DAY

IN WINTERTIME nature produces many melancholy days, using its tested recipe of overcast skies and cold. These somber hours are intensified in places by man's own additions to the landscape. Sometimes, however, nature seasons the depressive mood with touches of snow, enticing man to try to sweep from his thoughts the pervasive drug of the day. This red-faced pedestrian pauses at the staff entrance to Central Public Library on Locust street, at Thirteenth. The tower of Christ Church Cathedral rises between the lightposts.

TRAFFIC FLOW BY RADIO

Green light allows early morning inbound traffic to enter the radio-controlled section of North La Salle street. Signal is controlled by radio receiver and decoder, which are in a box adjacent to the light's standard. On each weekday, the remote-controlled intersections on La Salle are traversed an average of 850,000 times by vehicles.

Antenna of the frequency modulated transmitter—it is like those used by police and fire departments—is secured to the northwest corner of the Board of Trade building roof. Lake Michigan is in distant background. The Federal Communications Commission, after an appeal by the Chicago traffic department, has established a new channel of 27.255 megacycles for traffic control broadcast.

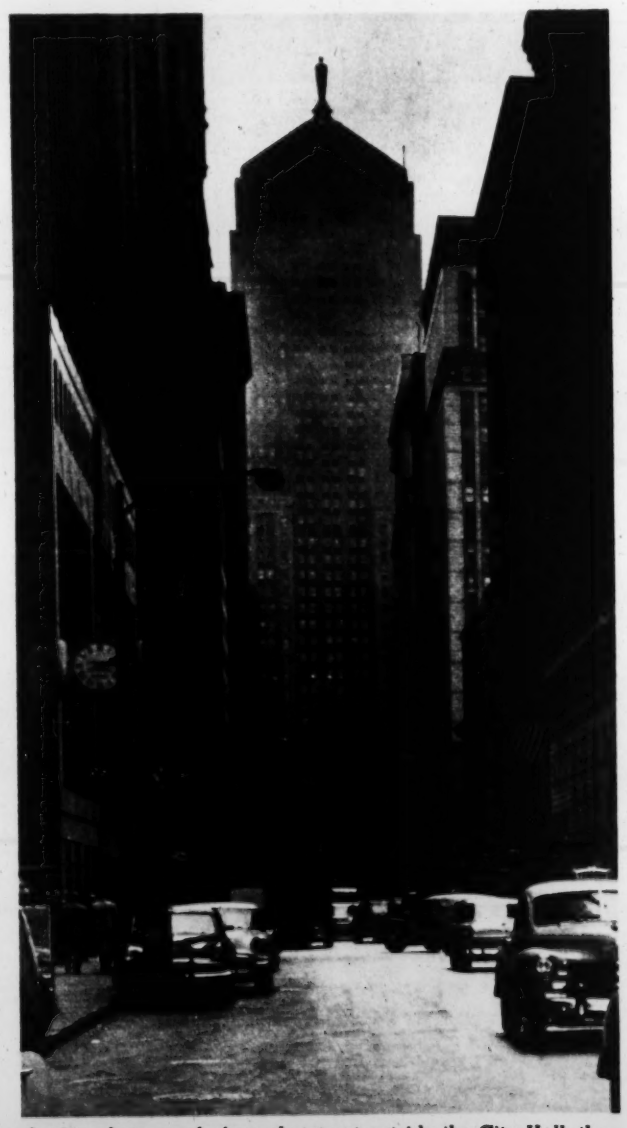

The master controller is housed in cabinet about six feet tall and three feet wide. Traffic Engineer Michel pushes button on external control to test synchronization of signals in the system. The system was developed and engineered by Michel and the electronics division of the General Electric Company. Control dial is now set on automatic.

Master controller with doors open shows program, or scheduling, devices, master coder and tone equipment. At street intersections, each individual controller has counterpart of three drums at upper left. As drums revolve, pins on the drums close and open switches to turn light on or off.

An operator sits at his desk in the City Hall traffic control center before an artist's conception of the radio network. Machinery, wiring and conduits are part of the city's centralized control of 78 Loop intersections by cable connections. The Loop system will remain in use but will not be expanded. To run underground cable between two intersections one-quarter of a mile apart would now cost an estimated $7500.

In this photo, made from the street outside the City Hall, the Board of Trade building, at the foot of La Salle street, is seen towering over its neighbors. The 32-foot-high statue of Ceres is on top. The traffic FM antenna is barely discernible at top right of the 525-foot-high building.

By JOHN STIPE of the PICTURES Staff

ON TOP OF CHICAGO'S 44-story Board of Trade building, a statue of Ceres, Roman goddess of grain, has been joined by an angular antenna. This symbol of the modern electronic age is not there for competitive decorative purposes. It is, instead, a part of a new and ingenious signal system, the world's first regulator of traffic lights by radio control. From the antenna flow pulses that alter the timing of traffic signals at 13 busy street intersections.

Control of traffic signals by radio is the inspiration of Ralph Michel, associate engineer of the Chicago traffic department. He hit upon the idea while seeking an effective yet relatively inexpensive way to handle the city's tremendous traffic load which has doubled in the last 18 years.

Michel found that intersections could be controlled by radio at far less cost than by conventional underground cables. If cables were laid to connect 450 signalized intersections—which the radio network eventually will govern—the cost would be some $3,375,000. Radio controls can be installed for approximately $675,000, with great saving in time and without the necessity of tearing up streets.

Changing of the "red-green" time sequence of the radio-controlled lights begins in the basement of City Hall. An electrically operated machine called a master controller automatically feeds a schedule of time changes for the traffic lights to a master coder. The coder converts the electric signals into tone pulses, which are carried by wire to the FM radio transmitter at the Board of Trade building. From there the coded tone pulses are broadcast throughout Chicago.

At each intersection in the network is a box containing a radio receiver and tone decoder. Each receiver accepts all tone pulses transmitted, but the tone decoder accepts only those intended for its particular intersection. It rejects all others. In this way, the master controller automatically synchronizes the signals and also changes their schedules to compensate for the volume and direction of vehicle flow. To cope with unusual conditions, the radio network can be manually operated.

Eleven intersections on La Salle street and two in outlying areas have been the guinea pigs for the highly successful radio experiment. Before the radio system was installed, traffic lights on North La Salle street outside the Loop operated on a fixed schedule, favored neither direction of travel. This worked satisfactorily during the off-peak hours, but in rush periods the rigid schedule snarled traffic.

Now the schedules of the signalized intersections are changed automatically by the master controller five times daily. In the morning rush hours, vehicles inbound to the Loop outnumber those leaving by seven to one. In the afternoon rush, the opposite situation exists, seven leaving to one entering. But the radio-controlled traffic signals keep vehicles moving smoothly, the lights being properly synchronized to permit cars to travel 30 miles an hour without stopping for a distance of two miles.

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

Chicago Experiment With Synchronized Signal Lights Controlled by Waves Is Highly Successful; System Far Less Costly Than Cable Connections

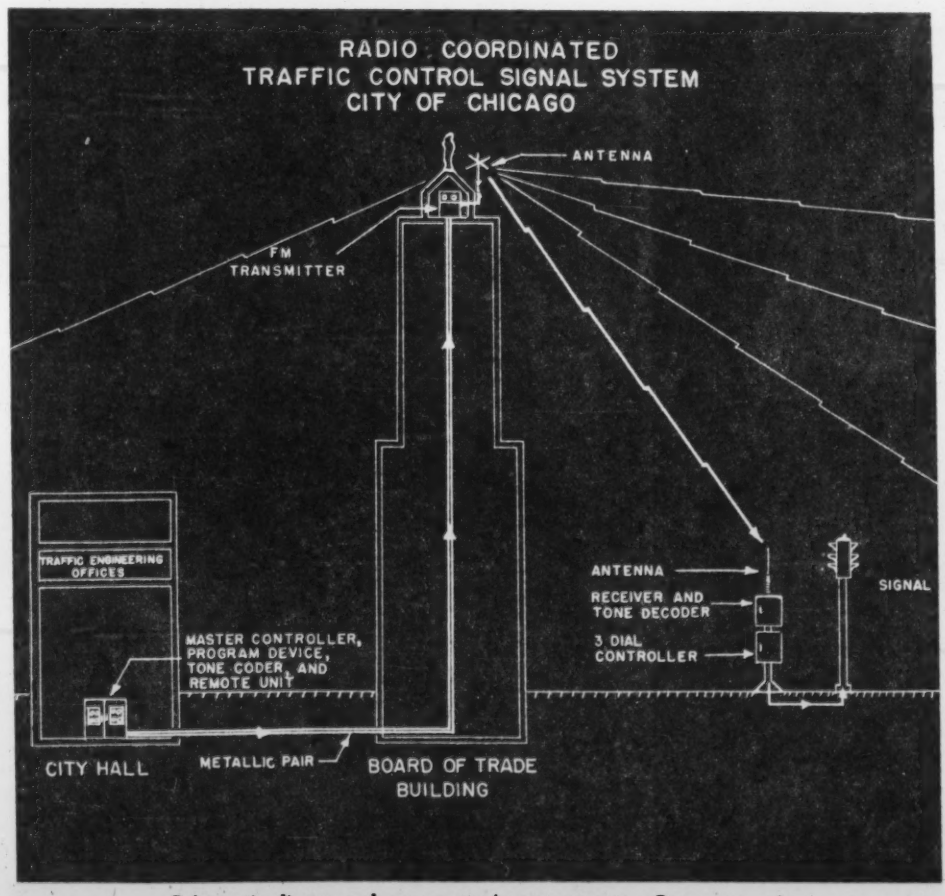

Michel examines a local controller at an intersection. Existing signal lights at intersections can be taken into the radio network at the cost of approximately $1000 each. A short receiving antenna sits on top of the upper cabinet, which houses receiver and tone decoder.

Michel, left, checks traffic studies with Chicago City Traffic Engineer Leslie J. Sorenson. Sorenson says, "The radio system works perfectly—we will lay no more cable."

Looking north, La Salle street runs three and one-half miles from the Board of Trade building, where this photo was made, almost to the Lake Michigan front. Intersections from the Chicago River (bridge towers) to the south end of the Loop are controlled by cable system. Those beyond the second elevated-train overpass are controlled for 11 intersections by radio control. On a weekday, average driving time to travel the radio-controlled portion of La Salle has been reduced by two minutes. No study has been made to determine additional time saved by avoiding tie-ups.

Schematic diagram shows system's components. One great advantage is the capacity for rapid expansion at low cost. Initial installation of the radio system cost an estimated $50,000.

The two outlying intersections in the pilot system of radio control are each 10 miles from the City Hall master controller. For comparison, St. Louis' Chain of Rocks Bridge is less than 10 air miles from St. Louis' City Hall. One of the outlying Chicago intersections is Lincoln and Foster avenues in the north of the city. The other is the three-way intersection in south Chicago of Seventy-ninth street, Stony Island and South Chicago avenues. The three-way intersection, shown above, looking north on Stony Island avenue, handles some 60,000 vehicles a day.

Wading in knee-deep water, workmen set up apparatus to pump out flooded segment of the tunnel. The drift, 11 feet high and 15 feet wide, quickly filled with water which rose 35 feet in the working shaft and washed over floor of portion of finished tunnel shown here. It took two days to pump out the water. Engineers estimated a delay of two or three weeks in the $10,000,000 project.

RIVER INVADES A NEW TUNNEL

Seepage From Hudson Floods Portion Of Nearly Finished Third Lincoln Tube

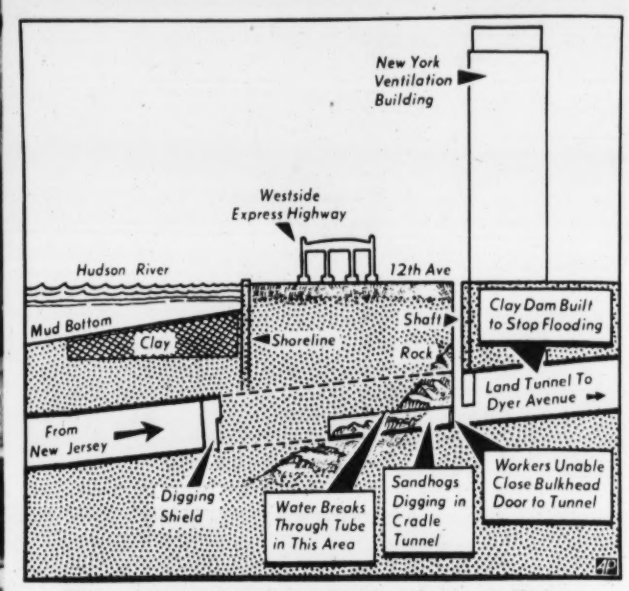

Chart showing tunnel operation's relation to Hudson River, whose waters seeped past porous soil (marked as shoreline) and poured through iron door left open in bulkhead. Tunnel that flooded is being cut to provide a railbed on which the giant digging shield (present position shown) driving the main tunnel from Weehawken, New Jersey, can travel when it emerges from the riverbed silt and hits the Manhattan rock shelf.

IT WAS 4 A.M., LUNCHTIME for the 14-man night shift working in the Manhattan entrance of a new third tube for the Lincoln Tunnel under the Hudson River. A pumpman left on watch at the bottom of the work shaft burst into the ground-level shanty, shouting "The river's pouring in!"

Three miners immediately descended to the "drift," or small tunnel being bored ahead of the main tunnel. In three feet of water, they tried unsuccessfully to close the emergency door through which the water was pouring. When the water got up to their necks they had to swim back to the shaft.

Twelve hours later, a diver telephoned to the surface that the bulkhead door had been closed. By then, a million and a quarter gallons of water were in the drift. Pumps immediately went into operation. Boring from the surface, through rock, to seal off the leak with concrete was begun. During the emergency, traffic moved as usual through the tunnel's two older tubes located 175 feet north of the new project.

Near the tube's entrance at the Lincoln Tunnel plaza, workmen throw up emergency dam of clay and sandbags designed to prevent water from emerging in plaza, trickling down into eastbound lane of the original Lincoln Tunnel.

Veteran diver Raymond J. Campbell reports that he has succeeded in closing safety door to stem flood. Campbell groped in cold, black water with no light to aid him until he found the door. He worked underwater about three hours, cutting away hose and pipelines blocking door. Unable to close door, he attached cable to it and a donkey engine on surface completed the job.

Every Day Mutual of Omaha pays out an average of more than $200,000 in Cash Benefits

These famous "Lifetime Benefit" checks for total disability from accident or confining sickness have kept many an American family together—saved thousands of men and women from financial disaster. Here are the true stories of just five of them:

"I AM GRATEFUL FOR THE PROMPT AND BUSINESS-LIKE SERVICE MUTUAL OF OMAHA GIVES ME!"

LESTER GRIFFIN, business man, Jackson, Miss., says: "Thank Goodness I had foresight and bought Mutual of Omaha insurance that provides lifetime benefits! Now my real desire in life is to influence others to make sure they have Lifetime Protection before it is too late. I am grateful for the gracious and businesslike service Mutual of Omaha gives me." Total payments to Mr. Griffin so far: Over $18,000 at $200 a month.

"BE SURE YOUR POLICY PAYS LIFETIME BENEFITS! THAT'S WHY I PICKED MUTUAL OF OMAHA!"

CLEON PLANTE, young garage man, from Pittsfield, N. H., says: "Take it from me, if you buy health and accident insurance, be sure it pays Lifetime Benefits. That's why I picked Mutual of Omaha." Totally disabled by an automobile accident, Cleon keeps up his baseball interest, gets around on cane or crutches, exercises regularly. His Mutual checks—$150 per month for a total of over $6,000—protect him and his wife from want.

"IT PAYS TO BE PROTECTED BY A BIG COMPANY LIKE MUTUAL OF OMAHA."

DR. CHARLES H. SCHIFF, X-ray specialist, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "It pays to be protected by a big company like Mutual of Omaha. They've paid me over $20,000 (at $200 a month), and will continue to pay, as long as confined by my sickness, even for life!" As he puts it, "There's more truth than poetry when Mutual says, 'To Wait May Be Too Late!'"

"THANK GOD FOR MY MUTUAL OF OMAHA POLICY. IT PAID AND PAID AND PAID!"

ELIZABETH HALL, officeworker, Washington, D. C., says: "Thank God for my Mutual of Omaha policy. It paid and paid and paid!" The series of accidents which totally disabled Miss Hall began less than a year after she purchased her policy. Altogether, she received over $6,000 at $150 a month. Here is a case where ordinary group insurance, limited in time, would have failed.

Take a tip from these Mutual of Omaha policyowners . . .
Make sure your policy pays Lifetime Benefits!

Did you know that most health and accident policies pay loss-of-income benefits for not longer than a few months or a few years? Mutual of Omaha, on the other hand, has pioneered in "Lifetime Benefits"—cash payments for as long as you're unable to work because of covered disabling accidents or confining sickness even for life! Mutual of Omaha's hospitalization plan pays daily room and board benefits for as long as a full year—in most states up to 500 days!

Prompt local service—more for your money, too!

Prompt settlement of claims means a lot when you're laid low by sickness or accident. Mutual of Omaha—one of the few companies licensed in all 48 states, District of Columbia, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, Canal Zone, and Puerto Rico—offers prompt local service wherever you are!

As the world's largest exclusive health and accident company, Mutual of Omaha offers you more for your money, too! Over 14 per cent more! Figures from a leading insurance authority covering the years 1950-1954 prove that Mutual of Omaha provides more in benefits, claim service and reserves than the combined average of all other companies with 5 million dollars or more in earned individual premiums for this period.

There's a Mutual of Omaha policy to fit your needs and pocketbook! Get the FREE FACTS now! Write Mutual of Omaha, Dept. 442, Omaha, Nebraska.

"WHERE WOULD I BE WITHOUT MUTUAL OF OMAHA'S LIFETIME BENEFITS? THEY'RE REAL 'FAMILY SAVERS!'"

JOE SLOUP, supervisor in the city of Omaha Street Dept. says: "Where would I be without Mutual's Lifetime Benefits?" Paralyzed from the waist down by a serious confining illness, Mr. Sloup and his fine family of four would have faced great hardship without Mutual of Omaha protection. Mr. Sloup's $150 monthly checks—which he calls "family savers"—have totaled over $11,000.

Stepped-Up Barrage at Quemoy

Chinese Reds Pound the Nationalist-Held Off-Shore Islands

Since the first of this year Communist China, from mainland bases some 13 miles away, has been stepping up the artillery barrage of the Nationalist-held island of Quemoy. The heavily defended bastion of Chiang Kai-shek's forces has taken the heaviest poundings since the intermittent back-and-forth shellings began in September, 1954. Nationalists have been returning the fire from both island positions and small warships. In photo at left a Nationalist soldier does his laundry near a well dug in middle of a Quemoy defense position. Above, Quemoy children assist Nationalist soldiers in cleaning up rubble after wall of a house was damaged by a Red shell. Nationalists reported that on the day this house was hit the Communists bombarded Quemoy and adjacent Nationalist areas with nearly 3000 shells. Last week Chiang said his Nationalist forces, after six years of preparations on Formosa, could counterattack the mainland of China and overthrow the Communist regime if Western nations did not interfere. Military observers do not believe this possible. Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai followed Chiang's threat with a Peiping broadcast urging his people to prepare for the "liberation" of Formosa "by means of war if necessary."

PORTRAIT OF A RETIRING PRESIDENT

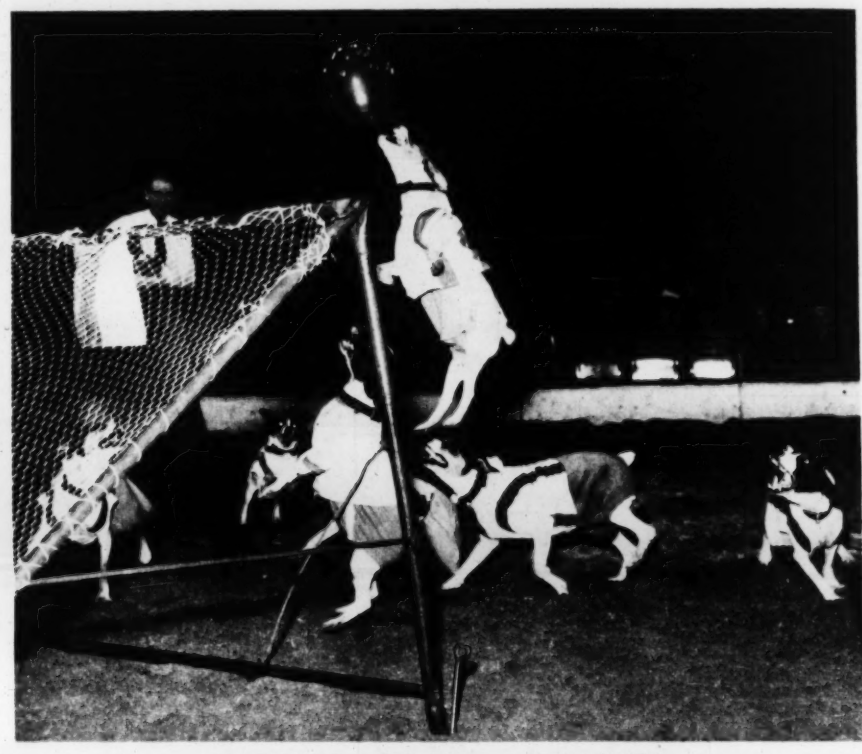

In recent Finnish presidential election campaign, youngsters in Helsinki catch the political spirit by building a snow bust of retiring President Juho Passikivi. Tin cans serve for eyes and pipe bowl, evergreen cuttings for hair and mustache. The 85-year-old President winds up his second term and 10 years in office on February 29. Nearly 2,000,000 Finns went to the polls in the two-day nation-wide election to cast ballots for 300 electors. The electors, representing six parties, will meet February 15 to select a new president for a six-year term.

ST. LOUIS SNOW—Impressions

UNDER A MANTLE OF FRESH FALLEN SNOW, on a cold, moonlight night, the earth is serene and exquisitely beautiful. Sharp, bracing air that stings the nostrils, dazzling whiteness broken by dark shadows, eerie stillness accentuated now and then by a faraway sound, combine to create a strange and wondrous world. Even a city, its traffic and bustle stilled, assumes an unaccustomed loveliness.

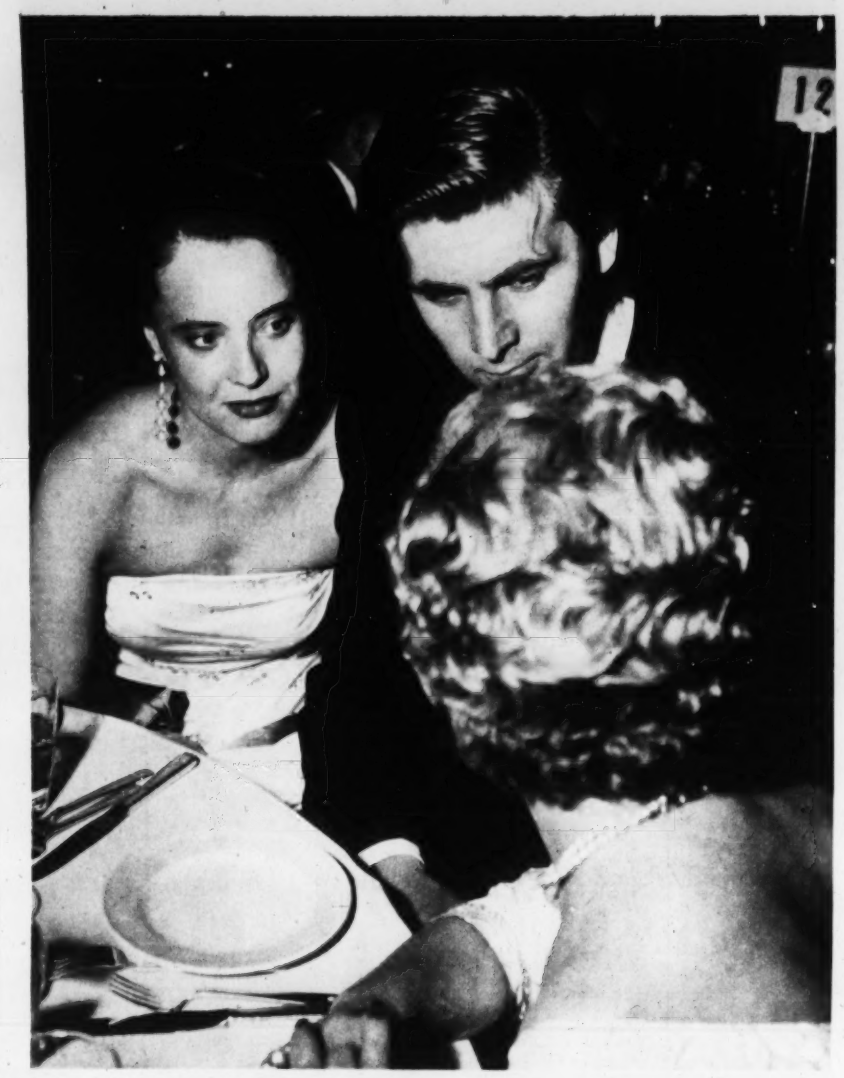

Windows of homes emit a warm, cheerful glow. Street lights sparkle like diamonds. Commonplace neighborhood objects—mailboxes, fences, shrubs, fire hydrants—appear unfamiliar and attractive in their ermine finery. Half-covered tracks, impressions left by some unknown intruder, and the melancholy creaking of barren trees add notes of mystery to the scene.

These photographic impressions were made in the Normandy area late at night after St. Louis' six-inch snowfall of last Sunday, heaviest in almost three years.

Camels belonging to Bedouins, whose low tents are staked down in background, slake their thirst at watering trough supplied by nearby well in Arabian desert. Forty productive wells were drilled by American engineers at four pipeline pumping stations. Towns have sprung up there, many nomadic tribesmen have settled down.

NEW WELLS FOR ARABIA

Big Water Pumping Stations Are Converting Nomadic Bedouins Into Settlers

Life-sustaining water gushes from pipe into concrete trough at Turaif, newborn desert town that suddenly swelled to metropolis proportions when Bedouins came in force. While animals drink, tribesmen fill cans and goatskins with water for own use. Camels are watered every fourth day; policemen keep order at the oases.

IN Arabia's desert world of sand and sun, profound changes are taking place in the ancient way of life of the Bedouins, nomads whose civilization has for centuries been built around the camel. The changes are fostered by water wells drilled by the Trans-Arabian Pipeline Company at four pumping stations on its 1100-mile oil pipeline from the Persian Gulf to the Mediterranean Sea.

Before these man-made oases blossomed in the desert wilderness, Bedouin tribes, with their vast camel herds, wandered with the seasons in search of water and grazing. In the spring they migrated northward to the well-watered valley of the Euphrates. In the fall, as rains brought new grass and flowers to the desert, they returned, dispersing over the whole of Arabia in family groups. From April to October, water was unknown in desert.

Now the Bedouins are forsaking the traditional migration and instead are patronizing the pipeline company's oases. Each summer the pumping stations become the scenes of some of the greatest tribal encampments in Arabian history. The main concentration last year was at Turaif, where 15,000 tribesmen gathered with 25,000 camels, numberless goats and sheep.

Contact with civilization is causing many Bedouins to give up their old ways, many are taking jobs in towns that have grown at the pumping stations, and oil is replacing the camel as the economic keystone in the lives of erstwhile nomads.

Near a well where there is no concrete trough, camels patronize native goatskin container set up by their herdsman. A camel can take on 30 gallons of water at one time, enough to sustain it for as long as a week, if necessary, but its thirst is monumental after the fourth day. Bitter tribal wars over inadequate water supplies have almost died out.

AFTER THE VERDICT

Convicted Killer and His Mother Hear Jury's Death Decree

Burton W. Abbott, who has just heard jury's verdict that he must die for the kidnap-killing of schoolgirl Stephanie Bryan, sits stunned. The prosecution said the crime was sex-motivated. Abbott, 27, is the father of a 4-year-old son.
United Press Photo

Abbott's mother sobs uncontrollably at the outcome. "It's dreadful. He's innocent," she said as she left the courtroom, grief-stricken. Abbott's wife, who furnished the clue that led to his arrest, announced that the verdict would be fought.
Associated Press Photo

LAST APRIL 28, 14-year-old Stephanie Bryan, daughter of a Berkeley, California, radiologist, disappeared on her way home from school. Weeks went by with no substantial clues. Then on July 15 Mrs. Burton W. Abbott found in the basement of her home at Alameda a purse identified as Stephanie's. Searching the unfinished cellar, authorities unearthed the girl's eyeglasses, brassiere and schoolbooks. Abbott, University of California graduate student, was questioned but denied any knowledge of the matter.

On July 20 Stephanie's body was found buried near the Abbott family's remote cabin in northern California. She had been beaten to death. Abbott persisted in his claim of innocence. At his trial in Oakland, Abbott's lawyers argued he had been framed by some unknown person. However, a criminologist testified that soil from Stephanie's grave matched that on Abbott's boots, that hair and fibers from his car matched the girl's hair and clothing. The jury took a full week to consider the case, then brought in a verdict finding Abbott guilty of both kidnaping and murder, and decreeing that he die in California's gas chamber.

Court Clerk Bob Snyder prepares trial exhibits for jury, which had sent for them while deliberating. Jury consisted of seven men, five women.

Jurors file into courtroom with verdict. Their path leads behind table where Abbott sits, flanked by his lawyers. Jury was out seven days, deliberated 52 hours. However, one member said no voting was done until final day and that only five ballots were taken.

LOS ANGELES FLOOD AND FIRE

48-Hour Rain Fills Streets, Causes $3,000,000 Fire

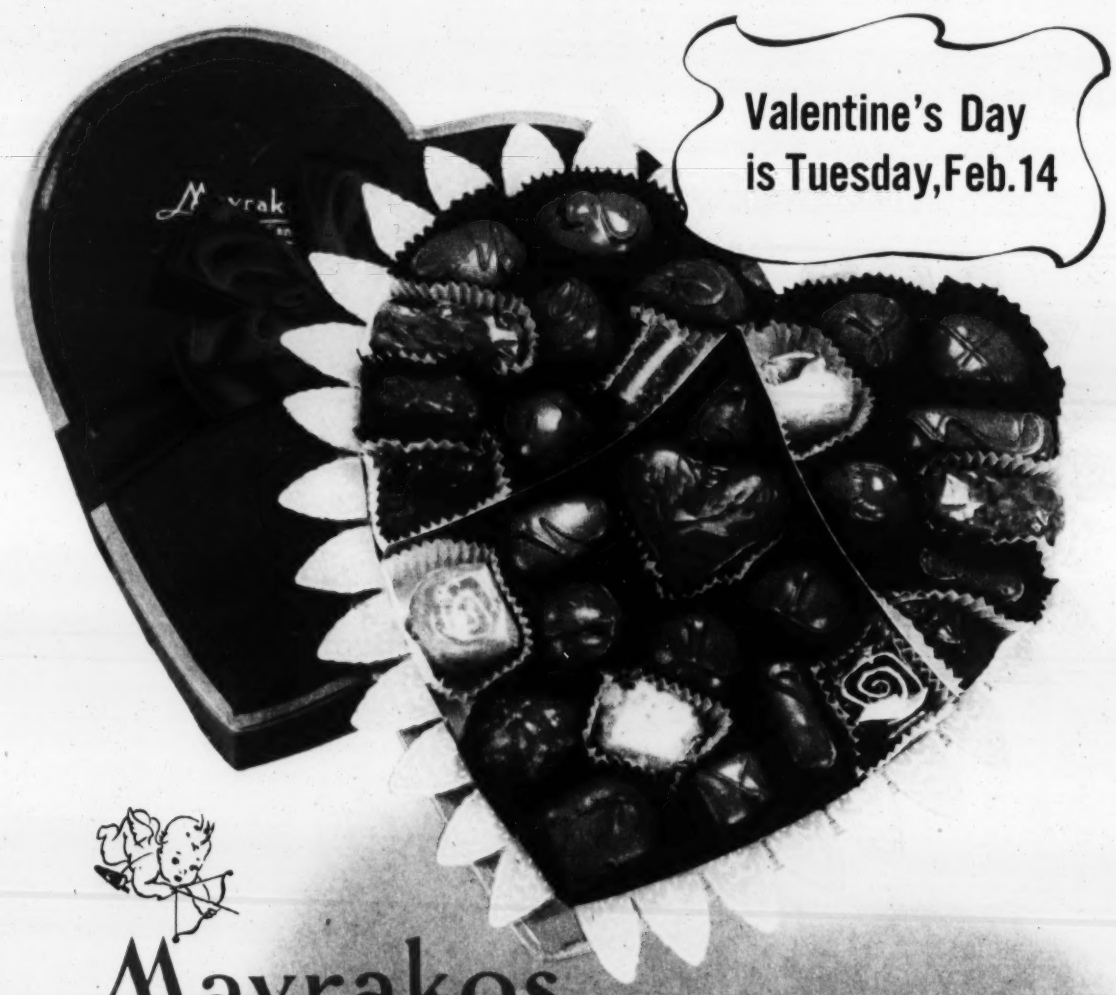

After one of the heaviest rains in southern California history motor vehicles stall on a flooded street of the Crenshaw section of Los Angeles. Man wades in water over his knees to carry a woman passenger from stranded bus. As 7.96 inches of rain fell in a 48-hour period, hundreds of persons were forced from their homes, schools were closed, traffic and business disrupted. Large areas of Los Angeles County were under water. The southern California downpour followed a series of heavy rains within the preceding month in central and northern parts of the state.

As a National Guardsman carries Carmine Chalek to a waiting truck, other Guardsmen assist members of her family from their home in suburban Torrance. Man standing at edge of porch in stocking feet is carrying baby. More than 100 families in Torrance, between Los Angeles and the Long Beach-San Pedro Harbor area, were evacuated. Many persons were ordered from their homes in low-lying sections of Venice, a beach suburb of Los Angeles.

Firemen stand in two feet of water as they pour more water on $3,000,000 blaze at the Ford assembly plant at Wilmington, in the Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor area. The fire followed an explosion that occurred when oil-covered flood waters swept into the plant and short-circuited a transformer. Fire departments from all waterfront communities joined fireboats in fighting the flames at the 24-acre plant. Nearby oil wells and storage tanks were saved from damage. The automobile plant, which employs several thousand persons, had been closed because of the floods.

UNDER BROOKLYN BRIDGE—BY INCHES

Tugs Push Carrier Leyte to Brooklyn Navy Yard for Its 2-Year Overhaul

With but little room to spare, the aircraft carrier Leyte clears the Brooklyn Bridge as tugs move it up the East River, in New York Harbor. To insure passage without difficulties under the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges, the 27,000-ton ship had previously shed part of its mast and radar antennas at the naval depot at Bayonne, New Jersey. The Leyte, on its first visit to the New York area in more than five years, was on its way to the Brooklyn Navy Yard where it will spend the next five months undergoing its regular biennial overhaul. A carrier of the Essex class, the Leyte was named after the Philippine gulf in which an important naval battle took place between United States and Japanese warships in World War II. The $90,000,000 flat-top was launched in August, 1945, made an 18,513-mile voyage from the Mediterranean in 1950 to participate in combat operations in the Korean War. It was tied up at a dock at Boston for an overhaul when in October, 1953, a below-decks explosion caused the death of 37 crewmen, injured 39 others.

'PICNIC'

William Inge's Pulitzer Prize Play of Frustrations in Small Kansas Town Is Put on Film

1. There is excitement in the Kansas household of Flo Owens (Betty Field, right) as her oldest daughter Madge (Kim Novak, left) tries on a new gown. Madge, a dime store clerk, is being courted by Alan Benson, the town's wealthiest young man. Her popularity is envied by her precocious young sister Millie (Susan Strasberg). A roomer at the Owens home is Rosemary Sidney (Rosalind Russell, second from left), a fading schoolteacher who yearns for male attention. Millie is permitted by her mother to accompany Hal Carter, a stranger in town, to the annual Labor day picnic. Hal, a worthless former tramp athlete who had been in college with Alan, has come to his old friend looking for a job.

2. At the picnic, Hal (William Holden, leaning against tree) and Madge (in swing) are attracted to each other. Rosemary's escort, Howard Bevans (Arthur O'Connell, sitting by tree), passes drinks around and Rosemary, after one too many, turns her attention on Hal but he rejects her. She berates him, and he leaves the grounds. Madge follows him.

3. Late that night, Rosemary is driven home by her friend Howard, a stuffy local merchant. Fed up with his casual attentions, and aware that this may be her last chance for a husband, she tries tricks and threats to get him to propose. He leaves uncommitted as she tearfully pleads with him for a promise of marriage.

4. Meanwhile, Hal and Madge return to the picnic grounds in the car that Alan had loaned him for the day. Madge now recognizes in Hal the same restless kind of man as her father, who deserted the family when she was a child, but she has fallen in love with him. And Hal regards Madge as the one good and beautiful thing that has come into his life. Hal and Alan fight over Madge.

5. The next morning when Howard goes to the Owens home to squirm out of marrying Rosemary, she outmaneuvers him by announcing that he has come to take her away. The spineless merchant is trapped. Meekly he escorts Rosemary to his car and they drive off to be married. Hal manages to see Madge, asks her to join him in Tulsa, where they will be married and he can get a job as a bell boy. Her mother pleads with her not to repeat her own mistake of marrying the wrong man.

6. Hal is hopping a freight out of town and Madge has to decide quickly. When Madge and Millie are alone in their bedroom, Millie advises her older sister to follow her heart. "For once, do something bright," she advises. As the bus is coming, Madge pulls herself from her mother's arms, gets aboard and heads for Tulsa to begin life—good or bad—with Hal.

Casserole of Shrimp, Beans, Cheese

1. Sister Mary Martha cooks, separately, the frozen lima beans and macaroni shells in boiling salted water for 15 minutes. Shells are blanched under cold water.

2. Back veins are removed, then the shrimps are rinsed under cold water to remove any foreign substance.

Photos by EDWARD J. BURKHARDT of the PICTURES Staff

3. Cheese is grated coarsely, then melted into the diluted mushroom soup to make a sauce. This is seasoned with salt, pepper, curry and garlic salt, and heated until smooth.

By MERNA LAZIER

SHRIMP AND LIMA BEANS in a rich, well-flavored cheese-mushroom sauce with shell macaroni furnishing the volume make a bountiful, attractive casserole dish. Sister Mary Martha, head of the Home Economics Department of Fontbonne College in Clayton, prepares this dish which she calls "shrimp chole" from items found on most pantry shelves.

Sister Mary Martha first cooks the lima beans and macaroni shells in boiling salted water. Shells are blanched under cold running water to remove the starch. The canned shrimps are stripped of their veins which run down the center back and are rinsed lightly to clean. If fresh shrimps are to be used, they are cooked in boiling water seasoned with vinegar, salt and mixed pickling spices. Seasoned water is boiled five minutes before adding the shrimps, which are cooked for 15 minutes. They are blanched in cold water and cleaned just as are the canned shrimps.

The sauce is made by combining canned mushroom soup with water, cheese and seasonings, then heating mixture over hot water until very smooth. It is stirred occasionally. Shrimps, macaroni shells, lima beans and sliced olives are arranged in a two-quart casserole with the cheese sauce being poured on last. The casserole is baked in 300-degree oven for one-half hour, then garnished with a few whole shrimps and olive slices just before serving.

INGREDIENTS: One-half pound cooked shrimps, one-fourth pound small macaroni shells, one-half pound medium sharp processed cheese, 11-ounce can mushroom soup, water to half-fill soup can, 10-ounce package frozen lima beans, two and one-fourth ounce can sliced ripe olives, one teaspoon salt, one-sixteenth teaspoon each of pepper and garlic salt, one-eighth teaspoon curry powder. If fresh shrimps are used, cook a pound of them in one quart water seasoned with tablespoon vinegar, teaspoon salt and tablespoon mixed pickling spices. Tuna, salmon or codfish may be used instead of the shrimp. Amounts will make four to six generous servings.

4. Shells, lima beans, sliced olives and shrimps are placed in alternate layers. Cheese sauce is poured over and casserole is baked 30 minutes.

5. A few curly shrimps and slices of ripe olives are used to decorate the finished dish. It is served with tossed salad, hot rolls and coffee. Fresh pineapple and strawberries are a suggested dessert.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

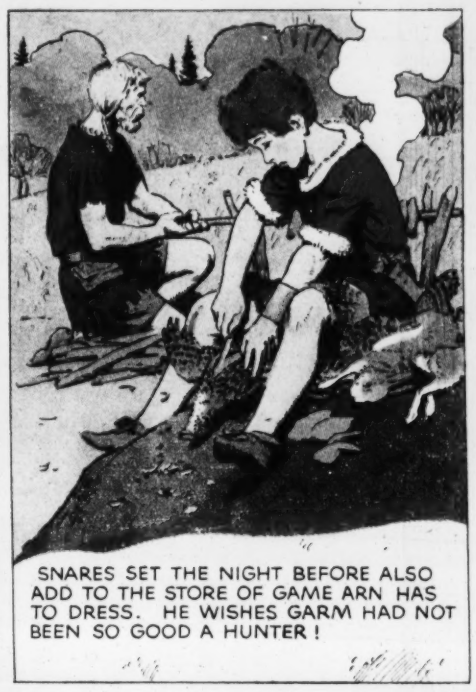

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

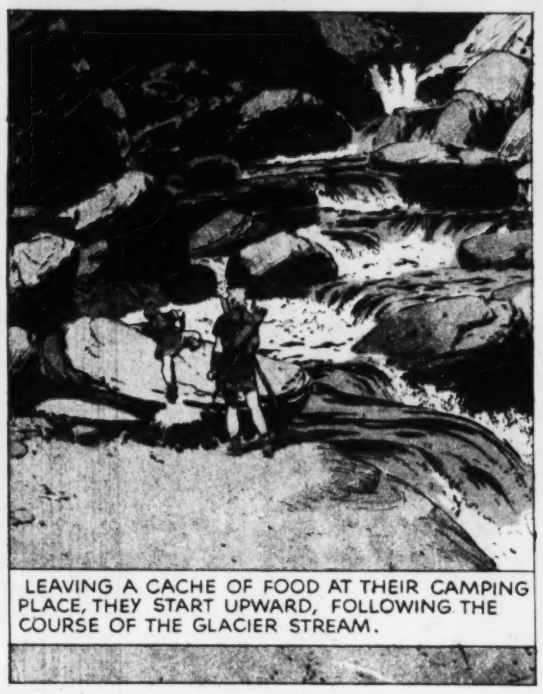

Our Story: THERE IS ONLY A HINT OF DAWN IN THE SKY WHEN GARM AWAKENS PRINCE ARN: "COME, YOUNG MASTER, THERE IS WORK TO BE DONE ERE WE START OUR CLIMB TO THE MOUNTAIN TOP."

"WHEN THE LEAVES ARE DOWN, THE PARTRIDGE ROOST IN THE SAFETY OF THE TREETOPS. WHEN WE COME NEAR, SHOOT FAST AND TRUE!"

SNARES SET THE NIGHT BEFORE ALSO ADD TO THE STORE OF GAME ARN HAS TO DRESS. HE WISHES GARM HAD NOT BEEN SO GOOD A HUNTER!

LEAVING A CACHE OF FOOD AT THEIR CAMPING PLACE, THEY START UPWARD, FOLLOWING THE COURSE OF THE GLACIER STREAM.

WHEN THE VALLEY NARROWS TO A CANYON, THEY CROSS THE STREAM ON AN ICE BRIDGE AND CLIMB TO THE RIDGE.

"HERE WE LEAVE OUR PACKS AND WEAPONS, YOUNG MASTER. THE ONLY DANGER ABOVE THIS POINT IS CARELESSNESS."

GARM, WHO CAN STRIDE UP THIS MOUNTAIN AND DOWN AGAIN IN A FEW HOURS, WATCHES HIS SMALL MASTER STRUGGLE UPWARD, GASPING AND WEARY BUT GIVING NEVER A SIGN OF QUITTING.

THEN, JUST AS THEY COME WITHIN VIEW OF THE ICE CAP AND CAN FEEL ITS CHILL BREATH, THE CLOUDS CLOSE IN! IN A WORLD OF BLINDING GRAY, THEY HALT.

NEXT WEEK:—Conquest and Defeat.

LANCE

Bull Bear journeys to Laramie to see his first white woman. If the reports of her many charms are correct he will attempt to purchase her.

Eliza Hackett pleases the chief's eye and so the procession of offerings begins.

Woman has no authority in this age. Thus, the offerings become mere gifts if Eliza personally accepts them, and this Fontenelle advises her to do.

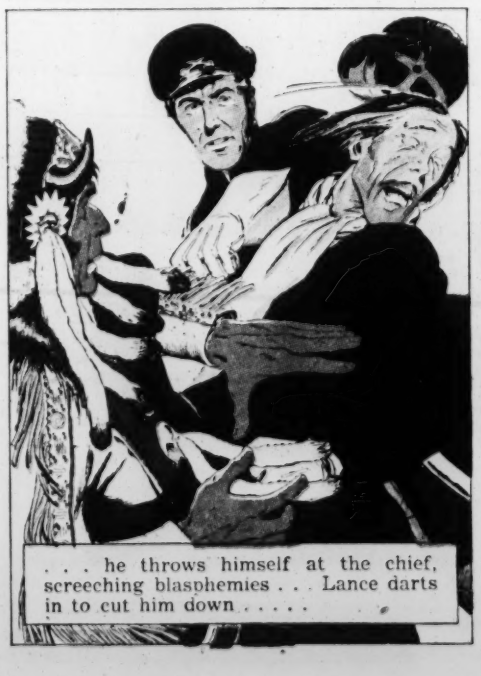

Hackett objects. "Must I remind you, Sir, that I speak for my wife?"

"Eet ees not the same," the trader snaps. "She mus' speak!"

But Hackett turns to the chief and accepts the tribute.

In so doing, he gives away his wife! Bull Bear steps forward to take possession and Hackett, seeing his mistake, goes berserk...

. . . he throws himself at the chief, screeching blasphemies . . . Lance darts in to cut him down . . . . .

. . . and Fontenelle moves quickly to apologize for the white man's ignorance of the Indian's way. But the sorry explanation falls on deaf ears.

"Bull Bear made payment for the white woman and it was accepted. Bull Bear will not take back offering. White man's heart is bad!"

And with that the powerful and militant leader of three thousand Sioux leaves the white men to wonder about the future . . . . .
